Georgia Delegation Confers Tuesday on Road Fund

SENATOR GEORGE SUMMONS GROUP TO SESSION HERE

Congressmen Also Will Seek Means of Raising Cotton Price; All Members Except Ramspeck and Castellow To Attend

UNITED APPEAL FOR FUND PLANNED

Senior Senator Asserts Other Matters of Importance Will Be Taken Up at Meeting.

Plans for a concerted effort to obtain Georgia's $10,000,000 share of the federal road fund and to determine a program looking toward increased cotton prices will be mapped here Tuesday at a meeting of Georgia's delegation in congress, called Saturday by the senior United States senator, Walter F. George.

All members of the delegation except Congressman Robert Ramspeck, of Decatur, and Congressman B. T. Castellow, of Cuthbert, will be here for the meeting. Congressman Ramspeck left Saturday night for Washington, but before departing informed Senator George that he would co-operate with the remainder of the delegation in anything it sought to do.

Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. also announced that he would be present.

Meet at Henry Grady.

The session will begin at 10 o'clock Tuesday morning at the Henry Grady hotel.

Senator George's telegram follows: "Members of the Georgia delegation in congress are requested to meet at the Henry Grady hotel, Tuesday, August 15, at 10 a. m., to consider payment of highway fund allocated to the state under public works bill and other public improvements for Georgia. Conference by request, in which I heartily concur."

Senator George said he was summoning the group at the request of some of the members of the delegation and also at the request of a number of prominent citizens.

The senator explained over the telephone that the cotton price situation and other matters of importance could be considered at the meeting.

The downward trend of cotton has caused grave concern all over the state for the last few days and members of the delegation have been urged by large numbers of their constituents to do everything possible to bolster the market. Cotton prices, expected to rise, as the government paid farmers for plowing up part of their acreage, have continued to slump, despite the prospects of a greatly decreased yield.

Georgia's $10,000,000 share of the federal highway fund is being held up by government officials because of Governor Eugene Talmadge's controversy with the ousted highway board for control of the department.

On June 19, the governor declared martial law over the highway department and assumed control. Later he issued executive orders declaring that Captain J. W. Barnett, of Athens, and W. C. Vereen, of Moultrie, commissioners, had vacated their offices

JOHNSTON NAMED WORKS ENGINEER

Way Cleared for Immediate Start on Projects in Georgia.

The way was cleared Saturday for an immediate start on the Georgia projects provided by the public works administration when Secretary of the Interior Ickes, in Washington, announced the appointment of J. Houstoun Johnston, Atlanta engineer, to be consulting engineer of the Georgia public works administration.

The appointment of Mr. Johnston was forecast in Saturday's Constitution. He is a widely known engineer, a former secretary and treasurer of the state highway board of Georgia and until recently consulting engineer of the Georgia public service commission.

The Georgia commission, organized two weeks ago under the chairmanship of Thomas J. Hamilton, Augusta editor, has been holding up approval of its first projects pending the appointment of an engineer.

Mr. Johnson has been in consultation with members of the commission and is ready to begin on his new duties Monday morning.

The commission will meet some day this week with its engineer and it is expected that final approval of the first Georgia projects under the provisions of the public works program will be on their way to Washington for approval before the week is out.

It is probable that among the first projects to be formally considered by the commission will be the Atlanta sewer system plan because of the federal government's program to give first attention to health and sanitation projects.

The commission already has received almost 100 applications for loans from the state and its various counties and municipalities. Most of these already have been considered by the commission which is said to be ready to approve some, providing they meet with Mr. Johnston's approval.

F. D. R. Seeks Highway New York to Georgia

HARRISONBURG, Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt, riding through the beautiful mountain country of western Virginia today, said he hoped a mountain highway would be constructed from New York to Georgia.

This highway, he commented, could be constructed through the national parks of the Shenandoah and the Great Smokies and the national forests in Pennsylvania, Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia.

The cost of building the highway, the chief executive said, could be defrayed by charging a small fee to every motor car that travels 20 miles over it.

EARLY SUCCESSES SPUR NRA LEADERS IN CAMPAIGN HERE

Money on Call for Bank Drafts Increases as Recovery Drive Proceeds in Full Swing.

The blue eagle of the NRA screamed a definite challenge to the economic depression Saturday when signs of an upturn in business were recognized in statements by the federal reserve bank that citizens have more money in the bank to spend, have more money coming in the form of increased pay rolls and that industry again is on the march toward busier times.

At the same time the federal reserve announced that bank depositors of Atlanta had 5.6 per cent more money in the banks than they had in June, it also said there is 15.1 per cent more money ready for call by drafts than there was a year ago.

Deposits to individual accounts in Atlanta banks totaled $111,046,000 in July.

Building permits issued in Atlanta during July represented valuation of $131,720, an increase of 10.7 per cent over June and a gain of 61 per cent over July, 1933.

Employment gains in Atlanta indicated that the NRA program is working successfully. A survey made by the chamber of commerce of 28 firms selected at random showed that they have added 819 new employes and increased pay rolls at an estimated $10,000 a week. Various business leaders said the increase in business was unmistakable.

Leaders in the NRA campaign in Atlanta will renew effort to secure 100 per cent co-operation with the recovery program this week. More than 50 trade groups will be asked to call meetings at once to solidify employers in the recovery effort. Formation of "100 per cent groups" to comply with the president's agreement will be undertaken.

Other efforts this week will include the formation of an army of solicitors to make a block to block canvas of the city to call on all employers who are not displaying the "blue eagle." Robert B. Troutman will direct the work of some 400 Junior Chamber of Commerce men in calling on those employers who so far have not signed the voluntary agreement and who have not adopted a permanent code.

Leaders in the campaign said the woman's division of the general committee would be called upon to aid in the work of mobilizing Atlanta business into one solid unit of recovery. Other organizations also will be enlisted in the common drive and it is expected that every employer, large and small, will be reached.

Churches Join Campaign.

Many Atlanta churches today will observe "re-employment Sunday," a day set aside for appeals to the general public to support the efforts of the administration in Washington. Nearly 200 Atlanta ministers were requested to devote a portion of their sermons to discussion of the necessity for concerted action and the relationship of the president's re-employment program to relief work.

Other plans completed and ready for operations include the program of speakers division. Speeches will be made before civic clubs, in theaters and other gathering places.

The Rev. H. L. Turner and Arch Avery are chairmen of the speakers' group and Mrs. R. L. Turman is supervising the speaking activities of the women working in the campaign. Radio has been used and every day during the next few weeks will find broadcasting schedules arranged.

Radio schedules for Monday call for speeches over WGST at 7:45 o'clock

150,000 New Jobs Seen As Utilities Join NRA

Electric, Gas and Phone Firms Sign Up, Leaving Only Street Railway and Water Groups Outside.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(UP)—The electric, gas and telephone industries lined up today under the blue eagle, leading public utilities into the national recovery drive to raise wages and spread employment.

Approval of modified agreements for the three utilities, the NRA affected 1,500,000 workers and was expected to result in the addition of 150,000 new employes.

Only street railway and water utilities remained among the major public industries to be brought under codes.

The canning, construction, paper and pulp and other large industries also were enlisted in the re-employment campaign as adjustments were made in the blanket agreement to meet particular conditions in each.

Administrator Hugh S. Johnson turned today to efforts to speed up the date a lumber code will become effective as reports were received of large scale lumber operations designed to "beat the code" with low-priced labor.

Hearings on a bituminous coal code were adjourned, leaving unsettled a conflict between the NRA and non-union operators over collective bargaining which may lead to a court test of the recovery act.

Jobs for 30,000, the NRA estimated, would be created by inclusion of more than 3,000 light and power companies in the re-employment agreement. A 48-hour week was provided for load dispensers, emergency maintenance and repair employes, station and substation operators, attendants and helpers. A 40-hour week was provided for all other employes except in towns of less than 2,500.

The industry's 236,000 present employes were provided minimum wages of from $14 a week in cities of 2,500 to 250,000 to $15 a week in cities of more than 500,000. Time rate workers will receive a minimum of 40 cents an hour.

The telephone agreement was believed by the NRA to assure jobs for from 30,000 to 40,000. It covered 80 per cent of the country's telephones and provided a 40-hour week.

Minimum wage provisions ranged from $12 a week in exchanges serving 1,000 telephones or less to $15 in exchanges serving more than 100,000 telephones.

Unusual exemptions were sanctioned for the canning industry and no maximum work week was specified during the processing season for seasonal perishable products.

Other employes were restricted to maximum hours of 42 a week for watchman, 44 for power plant employes and 48 for all others. Minimum wages specified by the agreement ranged from 20 cents an hour in towns of less than 250,000 in certain south and southwestern states to 30 cents an hour in most packing centers.

Administrator Johnson's plan to make hour and wage provisions of the lumber code effective immediately leaving open the price and production provisions, was found impractical and abandoned. It is now aimed to make the whole code effective just as soon as it is approved by Johnson and President Roosevelt. Johnson is studying the report of deputies who co-operated in drawing up the code.

Electric railways and local bus lines will file a code with the NRA early next week, Charles Gordon, managing director of the American Transit Association, said today.

Representatives of the workers involved voted unanimously to approve the code at a meeting with a special committee of the association.

Immediately upon filing the code, no details of which have been released, application will be made for authority for all transit companies to put into effect the provisions as to maximum hours and minimum pay pending further hearing and approval by the NRA.

SHERIFF KILLS TWO IN GANG OUTBREAK

Third Man Slain by Rivals' Bullets as Officer Interrupts Battle.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 12.—(AP)—A sheriff who carries his riot gun to lawn parties chanced upon a gang murder today in time to visit swift death on two of the executioners and capture a third member of their group.

The victim of the underworld death sentence, slain as the sharp-shooting sheriff, Thomas B. Bash, went into action with his slug-laden weapon, was Ferris J. Anthon, a fugitive from a Chicago indictment naming him as a member of a liquor syndicate.

The men who died in the assassins' automobile, from which burst the bullets that killed Anthon, were Sam Scola and Gus Fasone. They had been identified as operators of night clubs here and as henchmen of John Lazia, north side political leader under indictment for income tax evasion.

A ballistic expert who examined the bullet that killed Anthon said it was fired from a .45-caliber automatic pistol. That also was the description of a gun dropped by Charles Gargotta, captured by Bash when the gunman pleaded for his life after

SUNDAY FUNERAL BAN HIT, PRAISED

Arguments Pro and Con Follow Action of Cemetery Association Here.

Protests and commendations on the outlawing in Atlanta of the ancient Georgia custom of Sunday funerals developed Saturday following the action of the Atlanta Cemetery Association, which set August 20 as the date after which the banning of Sabbath day burials will become effective.

Heralded by the cemetery association as a boon to "overworked" ministers, morticians, florists and cemetery employes, the Sunday funeral ban drew from Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, pastor of the Radio church, the comment that "it is a step backward and a great inconvenience to many."

Dr. Herman L. Turner, president of the Christian Council of Atlanta, speaking individually, said that "I would not want to bind myself to a rule of that kind. It is the minister's duty to serve in season and out; he has a mission to fulfill seven days out of the week."

Harry G. Poole, prominent undertaker, recalled that "there was some

FRENZIED CUBANS SLAY AND BURN IN CELEBRATION

Temper of Mob Ranges From Humorous Exuberance to Vicious Violence as Yoke Is Lifted.

By T. R. GILL.

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

HAVANA, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Arriving at the presidential palace today, amid scenes unequaled in Cuba's history, this correspondent saw the first acts of violence by angry mobs.

The crowd, yelling and cheering, ransacked the historic building from top to bottom. Furniture prized by President Machado and his predecessors was unceremoniously carried to the streets until soldiers and sailors arrived to clear the palace and restore order.

The temper of the mob suddenly changed from anger to hilarity when several of the looters carried out a squealing pig, which they found in a crate in the building.

"Machado! Machado!" they shouted, hoisting the pig high in the air and slamming it down on the pavement, killing it. Thunderous cheers filled the streets.

Secret Police Slain.

Finally driven back by the soldiers, the mob remained orderly for a while and then it rushed into the beautiful palace gardens and stripped it of all its flowers, plants and shrubs. They wanted them for souvenirs.

Presently, someone shouted a suggestion that the mob march to the headquarters of the secret police and "clean them out." Hoisting the leaders to their shoulders, part of the demonstrators started off toward the headquarters. The remainder proceeded in another direction.

I followed the second group, but before I proceeded far, we ran into a gun battle between soldiers and a member of the secret police—"Porrista," as they say in Spanish.

It was not much of a fight, for the soldiers quickly riddled the porrista with rifle bullets and left him lying in the street.

Immediately several of the mob lifted the soldiers aloft and carried them through the streets. Crowds on the sidewalks cheered.

Some of those who remained by the body, dipped their handkerchiefs in the slain man's blood and waved them in the air amid resounding shouts.

Beat Policeman to Death.

A block further down the street I was caught in a fusillade fired by soldiers at another "porrista."

Eight or ten shots were fired at the fleeing man, but he escaped. He was one of the few sought by the troops who got away. The morgues tonight held the others.

From then on throughout the day one killing followed another in rapid succession. I personally counted 11 dead. The wounded numbered into the scores.

One of the most brutal killings I saw was when the mob caught and beat to death a policeman accused of recently having slain several oppositionists.

The killing took place in front of the marble national capitol building. The mob beat the struggling policeman with fists and clubs, and then finished him with guns.

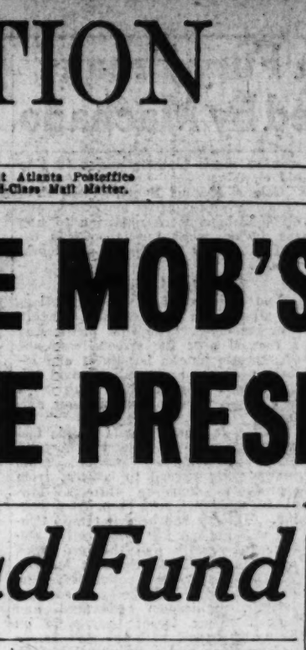

Newspaper Wrecked.

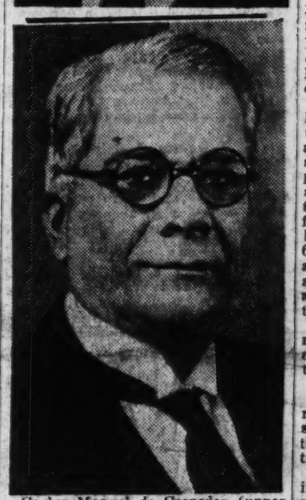

A spectacular demonstration occurred when the mob smashed the office of the newspaper Heraldo de Cuba, strong supporter of Machado. Stepping into a doorway out of the way of the angry crowd, I watched for two hours while every movable piece of equipment and furniture was hurled out of the upper story of the building and smashed. The presses were also wrecked and the building set afire.

There was little left in the stone

F. D. R. PLANS AID TO STRICKEN CUBA

President To Study Plans for Lending Economic Help to Republic.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—President Roosevelt returned to Washington tonight full of confidence that Cuba is progressing toward stability, but determined to search out all possible ways of relieving the island republic's economic distress.

Some observers in the capital tonight were quick to term the change in government on the island a victory for Roosevelt diplomacy, as the administration's official representative on the scene, Ambassador Sumner Welles, had presented the request of island factions that President Gerardo Machado withdraw.

The president's general satisfaction with the history-making events in Havana, culminating in the retirement of Machado, was made known by Mr. Roosevelt himself as he hurried back to the capital by motor through the Virginia mountains.

Hourly Conferences.

His expression was based on bare reports relayed by telephone from the state department, but on arriving at the White House the president was quick to avail himself of fuller information.

This was readily available, as Secretary Hull and his aids had held hourly conversations with Ambassador Welles by telephone to Havana throughout the day.

The choice of Carlos Manuel De Cespedes as provisional president to succeed Machado was well received in Washington, where he is well known, having represented his country here from 1914 to 1922.

There was no apparent disposition on the part of Secretary Hull to take sides in efforts at reorganization of the Cuban government, however, or to gloat over the success of Welles' activities.

The administration has maintained its position that the United States has merely been a helpful neighbor assisting Cuba in finding a solution for its political problems in its own way.

Relief for Republic.

It was learned Secretary Hull has plunged into a study of measures for the relief of Cuba's economic troubles. He canceled a vacation he had planned for next week and announced he would remain in Washington to lend a hand in the drive to relieve starvation conditions in the southern republic.

The secretary said today that the American-Cuban policy has choked Cuba's commerce and that steps will

New President Plunges at Once Into Task of Framing Coalition Government of All Factions.

By J. P. McKNIGHT.

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

HAVANA, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Gerardo Machado threw up today his eight-year rule of Cuba as president and fled for his life in a plane toward the Bahamas while celebrating mobs dealt death to his supporters. Carlos Manuel De Cespedes became the new executive of the island republic.

Twenty-one persons were known to have been slain and estimates put the fatalities as high as 30 when angry crowds raced through the streets and sacked the presidential palace. Five of the dreaded Machado secret police were slain and more than 50 houses of men who backed the fleeing president were sacked or burned. Late tonight De Cespedes, 62-year-old former secretary of state and diplomat, who was supported by all of the republic's political factions, announced he had assumed officially the office of provisional president.

"It is my duty," he said, "to lend my most effective aid in these difficult moments to the work of saving the country which is endangered."

Congress Acts.

A commission of senators and representatives called at De Cespedes' suburban home during the evening to inform him that all legal formalities had been concluded.

Congressional action—delayed seemingly for a time because Machado supporters were slow in coming out of seclusion to make a quorum—paved the way for him to take over the office from General Alberto Herrara, secretary of war under Machado, and provisional president briefly today.

The congress finally got together a quorum, granted the leave of absence which Machado was forced to request and took another formal step.

The latter was the repeal of an article of Cuba's electoral law requiring that the provisional president hold office 30 days before delivering the power to anyone else. Herrara immediately resigned in favor of De Cespedes.

The embattled Machado, finally defeated when his compact, well-disciplined little army rebelled against him en masse, gave up the fight at 10 o'clock this morning and sent to

Pent-Up Cuban Fury Breaks Shackles Welded by Machado

All Republic Wild With Joy, Quick in Revenge as Long-Sought Freedom Arrives.

By COL. FREDERICK PALMER.
(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc. World Rights Reserved.)

HAVANA, Aug. 12.—(By Wireless)—The still increasing roar, as I write, of public jubilance at the abrupt withdrawal of President Gerardo Machado carries a note of rising vengeance of heavy mob spirit, which may be the cause of more serious excesses than those already witnessed.

I have seen the most amazing of victory parades at the conclusion of a week of silent war so dramatically and sensationally won in a manner that took all but the army heads by surprise. Not until late yesterday evening were the old heads among the local press correspondents convinced that anything had happened except an army movement which gave Machado the opportunity for another stroke. The people in the streets who saw soldiers rushing by in trucks and machine guns planted at the palace with characteristic truculence refused to believe that the army which Machado had used to hold Cubans by the throat had taken the old bull by the horns.

Deserted By All.

No military concordat ever served a more surprising third degree to its victim than when the officers so long loyal to Machado left the former president stripped of his last supporter. If he were caught in the streets tonight his very bones would be broken into fragments for souvenirs.

The people went to bed last night still thinking the news too good to be true. Early this morning there was the first rattle on the taut drumhead of weeks of fear and suspense. Rapid footsteps became louder. A low hum of conversation was heard. Gradually Havana became live and noisy in characteristic fashion as the truth became more certain.

The city group that clapped hands as United States Ambassador Sumner Welles entered the embassy grew quickly into a crowd that hoped for another glimpse of him. The diplomatic victory he won as one man trained in discreet diplomacy of a commission left him as crisp as ever, though smiling, and seemingly as detached as Morro Castle, which has seen so much history-making in this old city.

Colonel Manuel Sanguily, the chief promoter of the army movement, and other Cubans were repairing to him for advice, while public emotion expanded swiftly to a frenzy of celebration.

All Population Abroad.

You could count all the population, for all were in the streets or hanging over balconies. The first picture, as I roamed over the streets, was one of supreme human happiness and release over the universal personal triumph in a war in which both sexes of all ages were soldiers without uniforms.

Never, it seemed, could people feel so sure it was their victory. A talkative, gesticulatory nation, from groups they spread to crowds, from crowds to immense throngs. Machado could not stop them from yelling. His city had become theirs. People who did not know each other embraced fervently and thumped each other in the back, Spanish fashion. The hated army and police of yesterday suddenly had become smiling friends. Policemen embraced and kissed. They forgot they were on beat and ranged with the throngs.

Hurrahing and cheering soldiers on trucks passed through roaring lanes of people voicing their approval. Other soldiers took leave, if it was not granted, to enjoy the applause of heroes. Soldiers and police made speeches from curbs and balconies telling how it was done, and in the present stage some were getting into disputes as to who won the war, so rapidly do emotions run the gamut after eight years of suppression.

Freedom Becomes License.

With the army and police in such an amiable mood, freedom became license before noon. To the victor belongs the spoils. In the looting of the unguarded presidential palace, as the crowd bore out curtains, furnishings and letters, the supreme profiteer seemed to me a grinning and shouting negro woman who flourished aloft a piece of the embroidered presidential linen. That palace, she said, had belonged to Machado. Now part of it was hers.

The best substitute the crowd found for the palms of victory were the canna leaves of the presidential gardens. Automobiles painted white, with the letters, A, B, C, rushed by bearing a young man who belonged to the secret society which endured torture and bombing vendettas. Now, in the open, they receive the huzzas of the police. An hour later the letters A B C having become fashionable, I saw a big car labeled A B C and loaded with highly vocal prostitutes and panderers who hang about the hotels during the tourist season.

Hard-faced types came back to the streets to add their variety to the throngs. Crowd leadership developed to direct wrath on anything accessible associated with Machado. Thus I saw a mob of fury smash the presses and gut the office of Provisional President Herrara's newspaper and then, just now, wreck a barber shop which someone had shouted was Machado's.

Prisoners Acclaimed.

The victims of Machado persecution released from jail are more heroic than the soldiers to people. Suddenly a leader shouted to a crowd, including policemen, and rushed and pinned against the wall a man with a ghastly look on his face. The crowd stormed about, shouting and jeering, as the police shot down one of the strong-arm men of the plain-clothes squad which had been Machado's ruthless tool. Such was the fate of its chief. People point out the strong-arm men and police execute them on the spot. The identification is sure because no one but the strong-arm squad are allowed to carry firearms.

A tropical hose stream poured on the heated emotions of the street throngs in the form of a terrific afternoon rain, provided at least a recess to the victory parades which were becoming orgies.

In the course of this historical day for Cuba I spent a half hour with the quiet, cultivated oculist, Horacio Ferrar, in his lovely home in the Malecon residential district. This veteran of the rebellion of 1895-98 told how he and Colonel Manuel Sanguily fostered the movement in the army which came to a head yesterday afternoon. He had been offered the presidency as one not engaged in politics, but he refused because, as he said, his part was to save Cuba from American intervention. If neither he nor the army would profit by the coup, he believed that would give Cuba a chance to show it could govern itself.

The army heads I talked with are sure that after the people have worked off their emotion any serious disorders can be prevented. But the interventionists hold stubbornly that theirs is the only solution.

EXILED CUBANS PLAN EARLY RETURN TO ISLE

Scores in Miami Engage Passage; Menocal Studies Situation.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Scores of Cuban exiles, no longer expatriates of their island republic with the downfall of the Machado regime, prepared tonight to return by airplane and steamship to their homes.

Representatives of both transportation agencies reported large advance reservations and members of the colony confirmed that they were the intended passengers.

Meanwhile, General Mario G. Menocal, stormy petrel of the long promised revolution which was not required to unseat Machado, contemplated latest developments. No official word came from his headquarters in his residence at Miami Beach and there was considerable doubt if the general, a former president of Cuba, would issue further statements.

Members of his staff complained the frequency of statements by the veteran leader had resulted in complicating delicate negotiations with leaders on the island.

Nor could it be officially learned whether General Menocal and his extensive following expects to support undividedly the provisional government set up around Carlos Manuel De Cespedes, former ambassador to the United States from Cuba.

Before Cespedes' selection appeared likely, Menocal declared he felt the diplomat "not the man for the moment."

Menocal also suffered a setback in the refusal of Colonel Horacio Ferrer, veteran Cuban army medical officer and follower of the former president in the war of independence, to allow his name to be placed in the provisional presidency lists.

However, these did not mar the joy of the general or the large staff gathered about him here at the downfall of the Machado government.

As the veteran oppositionist himself declared:

"With Machado gone, all other differences are easily settled."

Then he added:

"I have every confidence in the final judgment of the people of Cuba. The general strike was the voice of the people of Cuba and precipitated the downfall of Machado."

Menocal expressed appreciation for the part played by American Ambassador Sumner Welles in securing the resignation of Machado.

The ban on further statements did not prevent the former president from reflecting in his countenance the happiness and fulfilment of desires that the Machado resignation brought him.

Six weeks ago, discouraged and worn by the struggle, an exile in a friendly but alien land, Mario Menocal, major general of the war of independence against Spain, surveyed with unuttered bitterness the long losing fight against Machado.

He believed his comrades of the days when Cuba's freedom was hacked out with machettes had forsaken him, wearied of the seemingly hopeless odds of his new guerilla warfare for liberty.

Constantly with him, except for a period spent in a Machado prison, were his sons, Raoul and Mario Jr., and in these he placed his remaining dependence for the accomplishments of his desires.

"They are brave boys," he has said, "and they love their country as do all good Cubans. They will do all in their power to set Cuba free as did we who first set it free in 1898."

U. S. CITIZENS OWN $1,500,000,000 IN CUBAN INVESTMENT

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Close students of financial relations between the United States and Cuba today estimated this country's "stake" in the island at between $1,250,000,000 and $1,500,000,000.

The figures represent holdings of Americans in institutions and corporation investments. Much of the money is in Cuban sugar interests, calculated at about $375,000,000.

Next to this industry, the major investment of Americans was reported as being in Cuban bonds, and totaling about $200,000,000, of which $100,000,000 was lent under President Machado's highway building program and $20,000,000 for his new capitol building.

American power interests were said to have poured about $125,000,000 into the island republic, a large part of which is represented by properties of American & Foreign Power Corporation.

International Telephone & Telegraph and other American communication companies are estimated to have about $15,000,000 in properties there.

MACHADO QUITS AND FLEES CUBA

congress a request for leave of absence.

Thus the main feature of the mediation plan sponsored by United States Ambassador Sumner Welles upon the authority of President Roosevelt and approved by government and opposition political groups in the island republic—retirement of President Machado—was accomplished.

Herrara To Quit.

Machado accepted the resignations of all members of his cabinet except Secretary of War Alberto Herrera, who, as the only remaining member of the government, was expected to appoint Senor Cespedes secretary of state and then quit his own office. Cespedes would then legally become president of the republic.

In fact, Senor Cespedes, former minister to Washington and holder of other important diplomatic posts, became head of the state at once and began to construct his cabinet from members of all political factions, with a view to establishing a strong and stable government.

Cespedes Approved.

The army leaders, who yesterday seized the harbor fortresses and other points of advantage without firing a shot, approved the choice of Senor Cespedes as the new president and gave permission for General Herrera to remain as secretary of war until the scheme of legal succession to the high office could be completed.

All political factions joined the military chiefs in approving Cespedes for president.

The deposed executive was believed to be at his country estate outside Havana tonight, heavily guarded but not injured.

The situation in the interior of the country remained obscure, as communications from the capital had been cut off.

The howling mob stormed the office of the newspaper Heraldo De Cuba, which supported Machado, set fire to the building and wrecked the interior.

To the office of the opposition newspaper, Diario De La Marino, the mob carried a piano, taken from the palace, broke it to pieces and distributed the bits as souvenirs of the occasion.

When Colonel Antonio Jiminez, chief of the secret police, wounded one of the demonstrators, a group of soldiers shot Jiminez to death and cheering men kicked the body and trampled it.

Good will prevailed between the demonstrators and the military and naval guards at the palace which did not interfere when the mob stormed the official residence.

Cheer U. S. Embassy.

A throng of several hundred rejoicing persons formed in front of the American embassy, cheering loudly.

The home of Octavio Zubizarreta, secretary of the interior in the overthrown government, was looted and fired by the mob this afternoon. Similar treatment was dealt out to the home of Jose Izquierdo, chief of the Havana central district.

Late this afternoon it was known that at least six men had been killed in the street disorders. Of these only Colonel Jiminez, chief of the "porra," the police strong arm squad, was identified.

Two of the dead were at the morgue, three at the emergency hospital and still another lay directly in front of Cuba's capitol building, his naked, battered body covered with palm leaves by kindly soldiers.

More than 200 injured persons, many of them seriously hurt, were treated at hospitals.

The resignation of Machado and his cabinet members was to be considered by the congress late today, but the session was delayed on the request of certain members as a quorum appeared to be lacking. Some congressmen, long Machado's supporters, were kept at home from fear of the mob.

Nominally President.

Under one interpretation of the constitution Machado continued nominally to be president until congress acted.

Under another interpretation, and this one gained force through the precedent set in 1906 when the Tomas Estrada Palma government resigned, Machado's leave of absence was regarded as automatically in effect as soon as he signed the request.

Under the plan worked out during desperate conferences that lasted all night, Herrera will nominally succeed Machado, as the only remaining member of the cabinet. Immediately, however, Herrera will name Senor Cespedes, secretary of state, and resign in his favor. The veteran diplomat would then legally become president and Herrera would take the post of secretary of war at the new president's request.

For a while during the night and this morning it looked as though the army, which struck quickly and quietly to end Machado's reign in order to forestall the threat of American intervention, might follow up its coup and force the naming of one of its own leaders as active president.

Ferrer Favored.

Many leaders of the insurgent movement, among them Colonel Julio Sanguily, strongly favored Colonel Horacio Ferrer, retired chief of the army medical department, for provisional president. The A B C secret society, the nationalists, the mediation committee and other important political groups also favored Colonel Ferrer.

Ferrer, however, refused the honor, saying he did not want the people to think that the army's movement was designed to place any specific man at the head of the government.

The mad orgy that followed Machado's abandonment of office drove him and all those close to his government into hiding.

Time after time during the day the menacing cry issued from thousands of throats: "Get Machado! Let's get Machado!"

After the looting of Jose Izquierdo's house a girl rode wildly through Havana's streets this afternoon standing on the running board of an automobile and screaming hysterically as she extended her feet on which were men's shoes: "Pepito Izquierdo's shoes! Pepito Izquier.o's shoes!"

The furniture, clothing, fixtures and personal effects of both the Izquierdo and the Zubizaretta homes, which were ransacked by the mob, were carried out into the streets and shattered to pieces or distributed. So far as could be learned no member of either family was at home when the looting occurred.

Unconfirmed reports circulated that the homes of many other government adherents also were sacked by the mobs, crazed with their power.

The detailed story of what happened last night after the army turned against Machado came to light today.

Called Herrara.

Having seized the fortresses and other strategic positions, leaders of the insurrection called Secretary of War Herrera to the general staff's headquarters and informed him that the army believed that the president was bringing on American intervention by refusing Ambassador Welles' proposal to quiet the high office.

The leaders gave the executive 48 hours to get out.

When General Herrera at first refused to bear this message to the palace he was imprisoned by the officers at the Castillo de la Fuerza. Soon he yielded, however, and was released to take the word to the palace that the artillery in Cabana fortress and the Castillo would be trained on the presidential residence shortly unless Machado acceded to the military leaders' demand.

The president, a veteran of Cuba's war for independence, made a dramatic and last desperate play for the army's support when he heard the news which Herrera brought him.

Faces Army.

With his still faithful palace guard attending him, armed with machine guns, Machado left the palace and accompanied by Herrera and other political aides raced out to Camp Columbia to face his rebellious army, once his staunchest support.

At Camp Columbia Colonel Jilio Sanguily, one of the leaders of the movement, told him:

"With all respect, general, you must resign before noon tomorrow."

One after another the chiefs of battalions, the head of the army air corps, the acting chief of the navy and all the other officers whom the president regarded as his enduring friends, faced him and made the same demand.

The president caved in.

"All right, my boys," he said. "I'll resign."

Then he raced back to the palace to make his preparations for abandoning the office he had held through storm and strain for eight years.

No Early Election.

Michado did not actually resign, but adopted procedure agreed upon later, presenting a request for a leave of absence.

Under the constitution, Senor Cespedes may now rule indefinitely or until a vice president, provided for in proposed constitutional reforms, is elected six or seven months hence.

Had Machado actually resigned, Cespedes would have had to call general elections within 60 days. It is generally agreed that Cuba is ill-prepared for voting in that length of time.

The mob-like celebrations by the excited populace were halted early this evening by torrential rains with electrical displays which burst upon the city and quickly cleared the streets of demonstrators.

Homes Are Sacked.

Before the rain came the mob had sacked also the house of Eugenio Molient, secretary of agriculture, on Marina avenue, throwing its furniture and other contents out of the windows.

The excited throngs also looted the residence of Jose Genaro Sanchez, commissioner of the central district and one of Havana's most important land-holders, in the Cerro suburb.

Jose Magrina, whom communists and students accused of having killed Julio Antonio Mella, Cuban student radical leader, in Mexico January 10, 1929, was shot down late today by soldiers.

Machado's request for a leave of absence was received in the congress just after 10 o'clock this morning, Senate President Alberto Barreras said, and, under one interpretation of the Cuban constitution, immediately took effect.

Other authorities contended Machado was nominally president until the congress met formally to grant his request.

Army Is Applauded.

That was not done, despite the call to special session at noon, because all congress feared the turn the mob's spirit might take, and stayed at home.

It did not greatly matter. Cespedes was practically president, the guns at Cabana and Castillo de la Fuerza fortresses had boomed out the 21-gun presidential salute—and Machado was through.

That was all this city needed to know.

By 10 o'clock thousands paraded the streets, clapping loudly each time an officer or private of the army or navy passed, cheering equally the police force which joined the armed forces' movement this morning, and hilariously happy.

By noon—the deadline set by the military leaders—demonstrators had increased to tens of thousands.

A shot sounded here and there. Reckless, shouting A B C members, students and oppositionists—their enmity to Machado's reign long held in check by an iron hand—roared through the streets in automobiles, firing sometimes into the air.

Jimenez Is Slain.

A mob pressed too closely about Colonel Antonio Jimenez, thin, heavy-eye-lidded leader of those men all Cuba knew as the "Porra" and hated as the alleged killers of numerous oppositionists, and Jimenez drew his gun. The crowd came nearer and Jimenez fired.

One man slumped, wounded, and Jimenez and a companion took refuge within a drug store. As the increasing mob held him at bay, soldiers came up and Jimenez fired again. A burst of rifle fire made chaos of his refuge and he and his aide fell dead.

The soldiers who had killed grew to the stature of heroes in the crowd's eyes, and that was the beginning. Thenceforward men who had stood too close to Machado, men whom the mob believed had used ball and powder to strengthen his hand, were hunted down.

Killing Continues.

This evening the death toll was still not finally determined. Hospitals and morgues and first aid stations had counted 21 dead by early evening. None knew how many bodies lay on side streets, forgotten.

In front of the shining, new capitolio—monument to Machado's administration, his friends said: Lasting evidence of his extravagance, his enemies charged—the mob found Julio Leblanc, another man they believed had killed for Machado as member of the Porra.

A police uniform did not save him. His clothes were torn away, and he was beaten and kicked and clubbed to death. Late-arriving soldiers covered his naked body with palm leaves and there it lay, just to one side of the capitolio's wide sidewalk.

In Jesus Del Monte borough, Carlos Lorenzo, another who drew the mob's hatred, was killed and his body drawn about in a hand-cart.

Newspaper Wrecked.

It was the same elsewhere.

Houses of Senator Wilfredo Fernandez and Jose Izquierdo, chief of the Havana central district, were forced open and furniture, clothing and personal effects were carried out, to be torn into bits or distributed among the mob.

Next was Heraldo De Cuba, the newspaper which consistently supported Machado and assailed his enemies. Hundreds battered down its iron doors, broke its furniture to bits, pounded typewriters, teletype printers, linotype machines and presses into scrap metal and left the building bare. Then they fired the handsome edifice, only recently modernized.

Firemen screamed through the thronged streets to extinguish the first flames, but they brought the incendiaries back in shouting triumph atop the fire truck. Again Heraldo was fired. This time it was left to burn. Tonight it was in ruins.

Rioting Spreads.

Even the printing plant of the Official Gazette, wherein Machado published all his decrees and the congress all its laws, was not to escape. It was left in ruins.

Clearing skies brought forth the mob again after the rainstorm which broke suddenly late in the evening and temporarily halted demonstrations.

Tending to confirm the report today that the army had given President Machado, members of his family and of the inner circle guarantees, soldiers tonight stood guard over the houses of retiring Secretary of State Orestes Ferrara and Senator Baldomer Grau, Machado's son-in-law.

Nonetheless the crowds got Grau's automobiles out and tore them to bits.

A dispatch from Santiago said a mob, celebrating the downfall of President Machado, had smashed the building of the newspaper Diario De Cuba and ransacked the homes of officials connected with the Machado government.

Disorders at Santiago.

Some estimates said tonight that 30 persons were slain or fatally injured and that more than 50 houses of men who stood close to Machado were sacked or burned.

Dispatches from Santiago said four persons were killed and 25 wounded there in general disorders and that mobs sacked and burned homes of government officials and houses at Army headquarters.

Accompanying Machado on his flight were former Secretary of the Treasury Octavio Averhoff, former Chief of the Havana Central District Jose Izquierdo, former Chief of Police A. B. Ainciart, an aid of the latter, and Captain Jorge Vila, president of the Cuban Aviation Company.

An edict went out from the general staff tonight that none but necessary cars should be on the streets tonight, and those should stop at the first order. Otherwise they would be fired on.

Late tonight there was no news concerning the progress of the Machado plane.

JUNTA IS VICTORIOUS AS MACHADO FALLS

Objective Is Accomplished Within 2 Months After Group Is Dissolved.

By FRANCIS A. JAMIESON.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The objective of the short-lived Cuban revolutionary junta—the overthrow of the government of President Machado—was accomplished today, less than two months after the group had dissolved.

Unrelenting in its fight to unseat the president, the junta, representing the six powerful anti-Machado parties in the island republic, voluntarily broke up when Ambassador Welles undertook mediation of the Cuban difficulties.

Three of the junta leaders, who had been exiled from their homeland, remained in New York. They were silent tonight, awaiting private advices from Havana before expressing their opinion of the selection of Manuel De Cespedes as provisional president.

These leaders, Dr. Carlos De La Torre, octogenerian president of the junta, and Colonel Carlos Mendieta and Colonel Roberto Mendnez Penate, heads of the nationalist party, were credited with having played an important part—behind the scenes—in developments what led to Machado's withdrawal.

A few hours before De Cespedes became provisional president, Mendieta and Penate joined in the following statement:

"The opposition will accept as a substitute to Machado any outstanding civilian who has not shared any responsibility of the Machado government or any complicity in its misrule, and who would be capable of guaranteeing equally the rights of all Cubans."

Associates of Mendieta, defeated by Machado in 1924 and mentioned as a possible candidate in the 1934 general elections, said he would probably leave for Cuba within a few days.

Soft spoken, even-tempered, Mendieta is 59, a veteran of the wars of independence and, until he turned to politics, a practicing physician. He was elected to the Cuban congress in the early days of the republic and was an unsuccessful candidate for vice president in 1916.

De La Torre's plans were not known. It was De La Torre who four days ago said there were but two solutions of the Cuban situation in the offing—the removal of Machado or revolt of the army. The latter prediction came true.

The junta organized in April, with the six most powerful anti-Machado parties joining. The parties banding together were the ABC, the nationalists, the conservatives, the students, the professors, and the anti-Machado liberals.

Dr. Mario Garcia Menocal, former president, and Dr. Miguel Mariano Gomez, former mayor of Havana, enthusiastic supporters of Machado during his first administration, joined with the junta.

Not only was the junta's plan to overthrow Machado successful but it realized in its desire selection of a provisional president who will serve until the 1934 elections.

Bombings, Assassins Fail, Strike Conquers Machado

Soldier-Hero of Revolution of 1895 Bows in Defeat After Long Fight To Retain Power.

By the Associated Press.

Even his bitterest enemies credit General Gerardo Machado with making a strong fight to hold the presidency of Cuba.

He found the presidential seat a powder keg, but made drastic use of his military resources to prevent his foes from setting it off. There have been battles and bombing all around him, almost continuously since the August, 1931, rebellion.

There have been several attempts to assassinate him since he became president for his first term on March 20, 1925. But an impregnable wall of defense was set-up around his presidential palace and he was under close guard whenever he sought a change of scenery in the country or on a fishing trip at sea.

General Machado boasted that he would never quit Cuba, for whose independence he had fought, and declared that he was determined to die in the land where he had lived his turbulent life. He gained control of all political parties and had the old constitution, bequeathed to Cuba by the United States, so amended as to insure him of the presidency until May 20, 1935.

Machado was elected in 1925 for a four-year term and under a pledge not to stand for re-election the Cuban congress in 1928 adopted an amendment making the term six years. Machado stood for the new term. He was in control of the popular and conservative parties as well as his own liberals and, therefore, was unanimously elected.

That Machado was able to achieve this extension of power was in no small way due to his training and influence as a military man. He was primarily a soldier. He was cited for exploits of valor in the revolution of 1895 when as a youth of 24 he fought under General Juan Bruno Zayas, and was promoted gradually to the rank of brigadier-general.

President Machado obtained direct authority over the national army of 15,000 and about half as many more rural guards and national police forces. When the attack against him progressed beyond the verbal stage and the opposition flared into open rebellion, the old campaigner personally made the rounds of the army posts. The opposition had little chance of victory in open conflict.

Constitutional guarantees were suspended for several periods and he rigorously applied the weapon of censorship of the press. Menocal was leader of the August, 1931, rebellion, and President Machado in person went to the front.

Menocal and Colonel Carlos Mendieta, his chief, later an exile in New York, were captured in Pinar Del Rio; an expedition that landed at Jibara, Oriente province, was wiped out; and the last opposition leader, Dr. Mendez Penate, surrendered in Santa Clara.

Although amnesty was granted all those involved in that revolt, disturbances continued with occasional outbreaks in various parts of the country and continued bombings. President Machado created a national militia composed of all members of the national police and additional volunteers.

The opposition continued their cry of illegality in demanding the rescinding of the 1928 amendment and many Cubans held that Machado ceased to be president earlier in 1933 when his second four years in office were completed.

About that time revolt broke out in Camaguey and Santa Clara provinces, but the revolutionary junta in the United States disclaimed this development as the "real revolution." It was quickly stamped out.

Then suddenly came the new form of attack—the general strike. It has been debated whether it was aimed at Machado's overthrow, but it served the purpose of embarrassing him as did none of the open fighting of past years.

Machado struggled to get the thousands of Cubans in various lines of work to return to their jobs, and the Cubans, facing starvation as a result of a tie-up of food supplies grimly carried on their campaign. Employes of the government, who had received no pay for months, joined the movement.

Then came the strike demonstrations, the first real outbreaks resulting in casualties, and, finally, the firing by soldiers on a crowd before the presidential palace. A state of war had been declared—Machado's ace in the hole—in his last desperate effort to break the back of the strike.

Of late years, De Cespedes—an tensive landholder—has rested, be ging off of an ambassadorial missi to Mexico because of poor health.

Cuba's provisional president is t son of Carlos Miguel De Cespedes wh like George Washington in the Unit States, is revered as the father of h country. The elder De Cespedes, the plantation of Yara on October 1868, touched off the first revoluti and became the president of the fi revolutionary government.

illion-Dollar Operation n Spurious Bonds May nvolve Officials.

By R. GORDON BROWN.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 12.—(AP)—
if working on a gigantic puzzle, vestigators are slowly piecing to-her the tangled operations of Ron- Finney, bond broker and market culator, in the Kansas bond forgery ndal.

When the picture is complete and osed to the public gaze—either at lawsuit or impeachment proceed-s, as Governor Alf M. Landon ob-ved—it is expected to show Fin- had placed at least $1,000,000 spurious bonds and other securi-s as security for loans or deposits.

Three state banks have been ced to shut their doors as a re-t of the disclosures. Federal au-rities, seeking to throw additional ht upon Finney, questioned Miss vian Tracey, who worked in the easury for a time and was known Topeka as a friend of Finney. But ss Tracey shook her red head and id she was "too dumb" to know ything about bonds.

Those were the surface indications t several things were amiss in the nsas capital this week. Some ought persons high in the state's ancial circles might be involved fore the inquiry ended.

Officials said Finney apparently d not loose the forgeries upon the neral investing public. So far as known they all were placed as col-teral for loans or as security for ate or county funds deposited in nks. In these places, Finney had ne measure of control over them.

Investigations were started last ne.

As a bond broker, Finney provided e printed bonds for issuing munici-lities. Upon one pretext or another, ficials said, it was simple to have e printing houses run a second or ird issue of the bonds. All that s needed then were copies of sig-tures.

Who will stand the loss ultimately a question. Some of the forgeries e so good it may take a court to cide who holds original and who lds spurious bonds. The state asurer's office is bonded for a to- of $850,000.

Finney and his assistant, Leland ldwell, the only persons so far ar-sted, face hearings next month.

illion Paid in Taxes y Car Owners in '32

Motor car owners paid in taxes a tal of $1,076,000,000 during 1932, hile in the same year the total pro-ction of the automobile industry nounted to $1,500,000,000, according figures compiled Saturday by the lanta Motor Club. Registrations in 32 declined, but taxes paid by otorists advanced.

Motor car taxes amounted to 48.5 r cent of the total revenue of Geor-a in 1932, and this state stood ninth the list in percentage of taxes paid rectly through ownership of motor hicles, while in mileage of the state ad system Georgia stood twenty-cond. Georgia was ninth in the list local and state roads with an es-mated total of 102,284 miles.

Gasoline consumption in the Unit-States dropped from 221,893,000 llons in 1931 to 199,031,000 gallons 1932, the figures show. Of 24,136,-9 vehicles registered in the country, re than 20,900,000 are automobiles.

40 Relief Projects in City, County Reach High Mark of Productivity

Work relief projects, launched nine months ago for the benefit of the unemployed and supervised since then by the work relief section of the Atlanta and Fulton county special relief committee, have reached a high-water mark of productivity this summer, according to a recent report issued by W. E. Mitchell, chairman of the committee.

There are 40 projects, employing 3,800 men and women. They include improvement of parks and school grounds, construction of new streets, beautification of highways, mosquito control, wood cutting, community gardens, a shoe repair shop, a tool room where tools used on the projects are kept in condition, handicraft classes and a utility project for the solicitation and renovation of clothing and furniture.

The entire work relief program comprises work that would not otherwise have been done and in no way conflicts with or supplants established channels of labor. The projects serve the triple purpose of providing work instead of charity, a program of civic improvement and activities for the direct benefit of the unemployed.

The morale-building effect of the work relief schedule is not the least of its virtues. "The privilege of working for his relief," said Mr. Mitchell, "is of inestimable value to a man's self-respect. It also provides an interest that, in many cases, has gone far to relieve the tension in homes where there has been protracted unemployment. The benefits of work relief as opposed to direct relief are infinitely greater for the client as well as for the community."

In connection with the construction work on school grounds, parks, streets and highways, the committee employs a civil engineer and a landscape architect. "With the provision of skilled supervision for this work," Mr. Mitchell said, "the community is assured of a lasting mark left by the depression that will be a source of pride instead of regret. Work on the schools and parks includes leveling and improving of unsightly spots, as at Girls' High school, general landscaping, construction of drives and walkways, open-air theaters, tennis courts, basketball courts and football fields." Up to June 1, 100,000 cubic yards of dirt have been moved, and 1,800 men have been given two days' employment a week on these projects.

1,100 Work in Gardens.

Eleven hundred men are at work on the community gardens raising vegetables on some 500 acres of land, the use of which has been donated by landowners of Atlanta and Fulton county. One hundred and one thousand, nine hundred and ninety-six pounds of vegetables have been produced since the fall, which afforded 33,616 meals to families of average size. In addition, seed has been distributed to 3,600 unemployed families for the planting of back yard gardens.

A project of considerable civic interest is the work of beautification being done on the Roosevelt highway. For a stretch of 10 miles the right-of-way on either side of the highway is being landscaped, sodded and laid out with shrubbery and flowers. The work is being done under the supervision of Mrs. Ronald Ransom, chairman of the Roosevelt highway committee, and in co-operation with garden clubs of Atlanta. Approximately 2,000 evergreen trees and shrubbery plants and 3,000 Cherokee rose bushes have been set out.

Extensions of several streets are being cut through under the direction of R. W. Torras, of the city planning commission. These streets connect important arteries of traffic, and are proving a great convenience in their respective locations. Herman, Stovall and Pendleton streets have been completed, and work on Lena street is still under way. Under the present budget of the street department this work could not have been begun in several years.

Well-Equipped Shoe Shop.

A well-equipped shoe shop gives work to a number of skilled shoe repairers, at the same time serving as a place where the relief agency can send its clients for shoe repairs. Shoes are repaired at an average cost of 14 cents per pair, and approximately 700 pairs are mended weekly.

One of the most useful projects is the tool room. Many thousands of broken and discarded picks, shovels, axes and wheelbarrows have been put into usable condition and given new handles. The equipment thus supplied enables the committee to give outdoor employment to several thousand unskilled workers.

The utility project was initiated to answer the need of the many who have suffered a gradual depletion of such necessities as clothing and household furniture. Solicitors, who are thereby given two days' work a week, are sent into the business and residence districts to collect unneeded materials such as broken furniture, discarded clothing and old ice boxes and stoves. An activity concomitant with this project is the handicraft classes, which are not only providing an occupation and an interest, but also a possible future means of livelihood. Carpenter tools are needed here, also flour and sugar sacks for garments of all kinds, and scraps of material for quilts. Donations are being received at 23 Pryor street, MAin 3215.

An upper floor of the relief headquarters is devoted to the repairing of dresses, hats, and other articles of clothing. A staff of women is occupied with this work in three shifts per week. Every garment is either laundered or dry-cleaned by a company giving this service gratis. A large staff of carpenters and cabinet makers rotates at the work benches of the furniture repair shop at 45 Auburn avenue. All articles are renovated and distributed without charge to the unemployed.

Approximately 300 men, working two days per week, have been engaged since last fall in cutting wood. Over 2,000 cords have been cut, this amount having been distributed to some 8,000 families during the past winter. The use of tracts of wooded land has been donated by land owners of Atlanta and Fulton county, and work is continuing during the summer months in anticipation of the winter's need.

New Alderman

Alderman J. Sid Tiller, named by council to fill the interim term of Ben T. Huiet, of the third ward. Tiller Saturday expressed his appreciation for his election. He is opposed in the September 20 primary by James E. Jackson.

Labor Day Program To Be Planned Today

Plans for celebration of Labor Day on Monday, September 4, will be completed at a meeting of the Labor Day committee of the Atlanta Federation of Trades at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Labor Temple. A Steve Nance, president of the federation, is general chairman of the committee, and William Strouss will be grand marshal of the day.

Labor Day will be given an added and deeper significance this year in its relation to the NRA program, the federation inviting business concerns of Atlanta to enter floats in the parade, it was announced. The only stipulation is that the firm entering a float closes its plant or store and allows its employes to join in the celebration without restriction during the entire day.

Those desiring to enter floats are requested to advise the committee in order to insure proper placement in the parade, it was said. A number of subcommittees have been appointed to handle various details of the celebration.

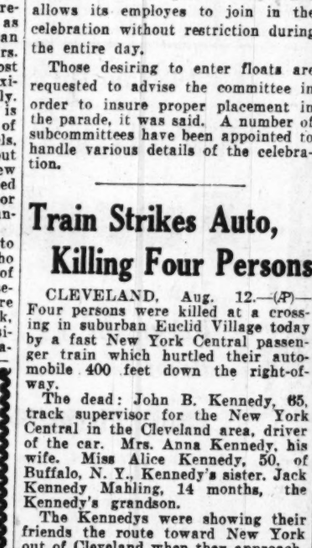

Train Strikes Auto, Killing Four Persons

CLEVELAND, Aug. 12.—(AP)—
Four persons were killed at a crossing in suburban Euclid Village today by a fast New York Central passenger train which hurtled their automobile 400 feet down the right-of-way.

The dead: John B. Kennedy, 65, track supervisor for the New York Central in the Cleveland area, driver of the car. Mrs. Anna Kennedy, his wife. Miss Alice Kennedy, 50, of Buffalo, N. Y., Kennedy's sister. Jack Kennedy Mahling, 14 months, the Kennedy's grandson.

The Kennedys were showing their friends the route toward New York out of Cleveland when they approached the Euclid Village crossing. A freight train was some distance away, and Kennedy drove on the tracks, apparently unaware that a fast passenger train was coming down another track, westbound from New York.

To Advise on Shoes

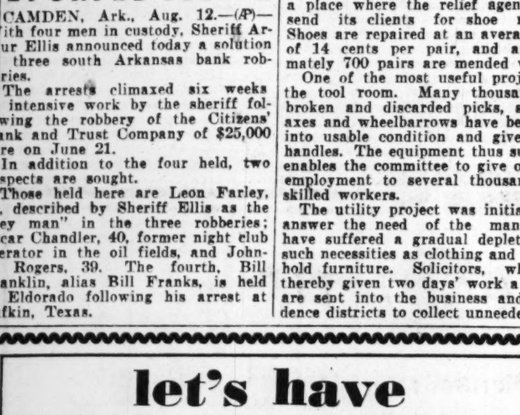

J. E. Maginness, special representative from the Dr. Locke clinic in Williamsburg, Ontario, will be in the M. W. Locke shoe department at Davison-Paxon's on August 14, 15 and 16 to advise in the fitting of the proper shoes for customers' feet. Davison's, through its affiliation with Macy, New York, has been appointed distributor of the M. W. Locke shoes in Atlanta and the southeast.

M. W. Locke
SHOES
for Men and Women

Who is Dr. Locke? He is an unassuming country doctor in an obscure Ontario village. He is said to conduct the largest "one-man medical practice in the world." He is a licensed physician. A graduate of Queen's University. A post graduate in surgery at Edinburgh University. You have read newspaper accounts of how his fame has spread, until now "the world" finds its way to his door. From the United States, from every province in Canada, from foreign countries, men and women go daily to Dr. Locke's place in Williamsburg, Canada. They find a quiet doctor who apparently knows feet and certainly knows shoes.

Four Lasts for Women!

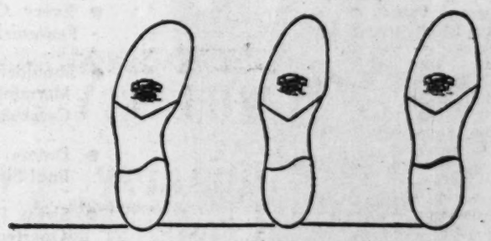

THE ONLY SHOES DESIGNED AND APPROVED BY DR. M. W. LOCKE. After years of study and experiment, Dr. Locke has finally approved a shoe designed by himself, built to his specifications, and bearing his name. In our opinion (and we have dealt in orthopedic shoes for years) these are the finest orthopedic shoes that have yet been made.

NOW, IT IS DAVISON'S POLICY NEVER TO GIVE MEDICAL ADVICE. That is the province of your doctor. If your feet are in bad condition, by all means go to your family physician or to a foot specialist. If you need the comfort of scientifically designed shoes (and 9 out of 10 people do need it) the M. W. Locke shoe is at Davison-Paxon's—exclusively in Atlanta! The three important features of the M. W. Locke shoe are:

1. An inside wedge to lift the inside of the foot and throw the swing to the outside.
2. A socket for the heel to allow it to rest naturally without flattening.
3. An inner "flange" to support the arch and instep.

Two Lasts for Men!

There is only one Dr. Locke. There is only one group of shoes designed and approved by Dr. Locke. These are the shoes. Substitutes and imitations of these scientifically constructed shoes will appear on the market. So bear this in mind—the only shoes designed and approved by Dr. Locke are the shoes that carry the name "M. W. Locke."

Priced $10.50 pair

a representative from the Dr. Locke Clinic, will be in our new M. W. Locke Shoe Department on August 14, 15, 16, to give expert advice on the fitting of these shoes. Consult him about the proper shoes for YOUR feet!

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

A World Passed By. Scenes and Memories of Jewish Civilization in Europe and North Africa. By Marvin Lowenthal. With illustrations. The Foreword, which is by the author, is written in a style that will impress the reader with the interest already anticipated in reading a book which is "for everyone who wishes to understand the drama of Gentile and Jew throughout the ages."

In its criticism the New York Tribune says "the book is written with learning, wit and grace of style. A thoroughly civilized book." The author says: "The history of the Jew is a Gulf Stream through Europe."

This handsome volume will meet with approval by both Jew and Gentile for it is a most comprehensive account (said to be the first in any language) of the artistic work of the historic sites, the memorials, etc. If the reader will only look over the list of illustrations there will be both surprise and appreciation of the work that has survived on down through the centuries.

The author says that the book was written for both pleasure and use and, while it will prove quite valuable to the tourist as a guide book, it should be in every library in America—it is history—it is rich in history. The Introduction is "The Trail of the Wandering Jew." "Thou tellest my wanderings . . . are they not in thy book?" Ps. 56:8. "In every corner of Europe and North Africa the wandering Jew has left the blazings of his trail." In the introduction, which covers five or six pages, there are many historical facts perhaps unknown to many people. The story of symbols, cathedrals, synagogs—the figures so finely wrought by human hands are made of wood and stone and yet so artistic is the designs, so lasting the work, they might be carved of silver and gold. An interesting chapter is "A Thousand Years Along the Rhine."

Among the many comments written on "A World Passed By" is one by Hendrik Willem van Loon, who says "Books of this sort have got to be by people of vast knowledge, reliable scholarship and a sense of humor that must reach from here to the utmost confines of the universe. Such people are rare. Hence my joy at discovering 'A World Passed By.' For now I shall never be able to pass the world by again as I have done during these last 50 years."

The many readers of this unusual book will no doubt agree with Van Loon in realizing that it has become a part of their own world. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

When Marvin Lowenthal, above, was in Pisa some ten years ago he found an abandoned ghetto, and he became interested in looking up other unknown Jewish scenes in places visited by tourists. His search has yielded rich treasures. In Morocco he found people living under the same conditions as in mediaeval times; in Toledo, Spain, a national shrine which has been successively a Jewish synagogue, a mosque and a Catholic church; in Avignon a ghetto dating back to 600 A. D. with historical relics older than European civilization; in Paris ghettos dating back to 1100; and so on all over Europe and North Africa.

Rush Hour. By James Cleugh. The title of this story by a well-known writer spells action, and when you have looked over the table of contents there can be no doubt about it being a rush story: The Start; The Way In; The Way Out, and then The Finish. The rush hour is from 6 to 7 in the evening, and yet in that length of time the author has covered his subjects thoroughly. The reader will find it an exciting "rush hour."

After reading Mr. Cleugh's last book, "Inflections 1931," J. B. Priestley wrote: "He is a young writer who is probably destined to be a novelist of great distinction." (H. C. Kinsey & Co., New York.)

Mystery at Peak House. By Arthur J. Rees. Author of "The Shrieking Pit." Mr. Rees won many new readers over his last mystery story who will thoroughly enjoy his new story, for it is not only exciting but full of terror as the tragedy of Peak house on the wild barren hills of Derbyshire is unfolded.

The outline of the story is also exciting for one night when the secretary of the famous scientist returned after an evening walk she found the house deserted, even the servants had disappeared. No lights, the current was dead, and even before she could decide what was the best thing to do there came the sound of quick footfalls and then a crash. Upon being found unconscious by a neighbor and revived her first words were "See! The nodding tree! The nodding tree!" The reader will wonder what, if any, connection between her words and the murder of the scientist. It is well written and thrilling from the first chapter to the last.

The author's style of writing a mystery story is equal to "The Bat"—there is always a sound of terror on the back steps or in the dining room when the lights go out, and if you want a good night's rest do not begin the reading of the terrors of Peak House at night. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

Tiger. The Story of Live in a Great City. By Sterling North. If you are going to spend your vacation at the seashore or the mountains, or even if you are going to the Chicago Century of Progress exposition by train, motor or air, you will need to be entertained en route. So why not take with you the latest contribution of Sterling North, the literary editor of the Chicago News? No summer fiction can be more up-to-date, entertaining, bright, breezy and clever than 'Tiger," a title that is story explained as it weaves a story around Jerry, poor, pretty, pleasing, and yet with a little of the independence that will cling to a girl with responsibilities. Under such circumstances what would you do if your employer adventurer, yachtsman, playboy and Tiger said: "The house I am offering, the car, the trust fund and help your family, or—get out!" Now, what would you do?

The story, and a lively story at that, is woven around what Jerry did. It is needless to say there is not a dull page in the story. The author wrote "Tiger" in "one sitting," so it will keep the reader busy to follow the line mapped out by Mr. North in his latest contribution. (Reilly & Lee, Chicago.)

Prime Minister's Pencil. By Cecil Waye. Author of "The Figure of Eight," a book that was widely read, and which gained some notoriety by the solution through Christopher Perrin of the political tangle in this story, who is now interested in the study of the death of Cuthbert Solway, for years secretary to Lord Rushburton, a well-known political figure, who had been the object of many threats, receiving warning that if he did not cease his work of following up mysterious crimes his life would be the penalty.

The story has a mysterious air from the beginning of the first chapter, that is from the very hour Miss Rushburton called on him at his office to the moment of the mysterious explosion in the house of commons, which caused the death of the prime minister. It was too great a temptation for Perrin not to make an effort to solve this death. So he begins a quiet work of trying to locate the author of the two deaths and to prove that both were to work of the same agent. He realized that there was danger and that the men behind the crime wave in America or England had power, and did not hesitate to use it, but he worked on and the result is one of the most thrilling dramatic stories yet published in which the hero is Christopher Perrin, a well-known private detective. (H. C. Kinsey & Co., New York.)

NEW FICTION.

The Spanish Lady. By Arnold Fredericks. Author of "The Mark of the Rat." This story is delightful as a romance, plenty of thrills as the story is unfolded, the hero and heroine being an English aristocrat and an American girl. It is written most attractively and there is not a dull page in it. (J. S. Sears & Co., New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Faith. A Historical Study. By Stewart Means. With an introduction by Erwin R. Goodenough, who says: "A reader of Dr. Means' 'Faith' hardly needs to be told that the book is a rare combination of learning and insight." (The Macmillan Company New York.)

How Shrewd Speculators Win. A Guide to Behavior When the Market Rises. By Fred C. Kelly and Sullivan Burgess. This might be called a fascinating study in human psychology. It includes some wise sayings. (Sears, Inc., New York.)

Look What Brains Can Do. By Anne Fisher. A gay satire. The adventures of the young daughter of a Washington bootlegger. Illustrations by Albert McKibbin. (W. T. Lee Co., Monterey, Cal.)

The Main Stream of French Literature. By Foster Erwin Guyer, professor of French, Dartmouth College. (D. C. Heath & Co., New York.)

Advancing Our Civilization. By Christian J. Gerling. This volume the writer says was written from an American viewpoint, though he wishes it to have a wider circulation—it is intended for the benefit of every country and nation. (Meador Publishing Co., New York.)

A GUIDE TO CHICAGO.

Literary landmarks in Chicago, as well as sites connected with the life of Abraham Lincoln, are two of the unusual chapters in "A Century of Progress Authorized Guide to Chicago," by John Drury, just published for the World's Fair by the Consolidated Book Publishers, Inc., of Chicago.

This book is a guidebook to the city officially approved by the management of the World's Fair. It also carries the official indorsement of the municipality, this being in the form of a letter from the late Mayor A. J. Cermak, who saw the manuscript before he went on his fatal trip to Miami, Fla. Rufus C. Dawes, president of A Century of Progress Exposition, writes the foreword.

The author of the book, John Drury, is a well-known Chicago newspaperman and is often referred to as the city's "unofficial guide," as he has piloted many notables about town in the past. He is best known as the author of "Chicago in Seven Days" and "Dining in Chicago," both of which books have had a widespread sale. At the present time he is conductor of "Around the Clock in Chicago," a column of Chicago gossip and chat appearing in the World's Fair Weekly, official magazine-program of the exposition.

In his newest book, "A Century of Progress Authorized Guide to Chicago," Drury has pointed out everything of interest to a visitor. It is as complete as a Baedecker and is the first comprehensive guidebook the city has had since the first fair in 1893. There are maps and photographs. The clothbound edition sells for $1 and the paper-bound edition of 50 cents.

Because of her many years as a syndicated newspaper columnist in Hollywood, Dorothy Herzog, author of "Intimate Strangers," has been asked repeatedly when she is going to write a novel giving the "inside" on Hollywood. "Never," Miss Herzog declared. "I'll keep to the genial latitude of New York. I lived in Hollywood too long. I'm afraid I know too much about its lack of latitude to write a novel about it!"

Richards and Barrett Will Contes For Post Without Making Campaig

Atlanta's unique political race was under way Saturday.

Alderman Alvin L. Richards, who is mayor pro tem. and as such presiding officer of council, and former Councilman Ellis B. Barrett were conducting a silent race for the thirteenth ward aldermanic nomination in the September 20 primary.

There will be much vociferous speaking in other contests, oral guns will be trained on audiences at rallies throughout the city; there will be verbose expostulations, importunities and exhortations.

But Barrett and Richards will not speak.

They have agreed to make no speeches; the campaign cigar is barred; campaign workers are taboo; election cards asking voters to cast their ballots for either of the candidates will be absent.

In fact, voters of Atlanta will go to the polls and find Barrett's name first on the ballot, with Richards' underneath it. They will vote for one. That is all there is to it.

The two candidates have entered into a gentlemen's agreement to ab by the decision of the voters with any prenomination salesmanship.

Never before in the history of municipality has such an agreem been made. Both men are well kno and the outcome of the silent strug will be interesting to watch.

With only one week more in wh to qualify, only about 13,500 had t far registered Saturday at the off of J. Henson Tatum, city clerk registrar.

The Atlanta League of Women V ers, allied with about 40 civic orga zations, Saturday mapped plans continue the drive for registrants. L than half of the 35,000 qualified cast ballots in the primary had qu field Saturday, although a jump registration is anticipated this wee Addition of referenda on Sunc movies and Sunday baseball is pected to add impetus to the dr for registered voters. Also a large nu ber of citizens always wait until last minute to add their names to lists.

Nominations for 22 municipal po tions will be made in the primary

Old Ballads Are Sung Again For First Lady at Festival

By BESS FURMAN.

WHITE TOP MOUNTAIN, Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—It took 40 years to do it, but the late Elliott Roosevelt's wish that his daughter, "Little Nell," now Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, meet his Virginia mountain friends was fulfilled in a big way today up here at this rhythm-rocked, tune-filled, crammed pavilion on a peak.

Crack mountain singers, jiggers and cloggers, competing for the final prizes in the White Top Folk Festival, made one tale that mountaineers will tell over and over again.

And Mrs. Roosevelt's reminiscences with her father's friends made another equally sure to go down through generations of mountain annals. She met his faithful old negro servitor, John Smith, 78, two of the Trigg children who sang and rode with him in 1893. Carefully, but in aged hands that trembled, John Smith presented her with a delicate, costly china cup—one of a tea set her father used to entertain friends.

"When he lived in two rooms that he furnished himself at Mrs. John Campbell's at Abingdon, I kept his dogs and horses," said Smith. "I could show you his sick room now, where I stood by him eight weeks, day and night, and rubbed him after he was hurt by an explosion of a lamp."

It was during that illness the 18 Trigg children, three families of cousins, entertained Elliott with singing and he wrote his daughter about it. Jean and Jim Trigg—she had a music studio in Richmond and now he's at Hopewell—told of morning horseback rides and evening songs around an organ with the jolly Elliott.

"I solicited $250 for a church organ from him over the breakfast table," said Mrs. Albert Mock, of Damascus.

And so it went in every interval.

Fiddle tunes—dulcimer tunes—the crack Blevins boys of Marion playing for the far-famed square dancing, the Cruise family of Crandall, Tenn., 16 assorted cousins, and so hour after hour the festival swings on.

"Today, White Top is the musical capital of the world," John Powell, famous Richmond, Va., musician, told the audience.

Old Ballads Revived.

Even while Mrs. Roosevelt ate fried chicken and beaten biscuits, the mountain top pulsed with the rhythm of the jig-tunes. "Cluck, Old Hen" and "The Flop-Eared Mule," played at her log cabin door by the Blevins brothers. They had a freckled 6-year-old star, Murrel Dockery,, a "bear cat" on the mandolin, and a ballad singer supreme.

It was his ragged-rhythm on "Happy Days" that set Mrs. Roosevelt herself to marking time to the delight of the cameramen.

From her hands the winners received their rewards of cash and ribbons. Over Horton Baker, Chilhowie, Va., blind singer, who won first prize with his rendition of that classic tragedy, "The Two Sisters," Mrs. Roosevelt bent low and said a cheering special sentence or two.

Prizes Awarded.

The first prizes for fiddling went to R. D. Ninick, Lynchburg, Va., and to Frank Blevins, Marion, Va., for banjo and band to Jack Reedy and the Blevins boys, and first place in the clog was divided between the talented Jack Reedy, E. S. Marshall and W. T. Spencer, all Virginians. First prize in the folk hymn went to W. E. Alderman and son, of Galax, Va.

To Nancy Baldwin, typical mountain woman, thin and tall, in blue sweater and flimsy dress, who sang "Pretty Sally," Mrs. Roosevelt gave a four-leaf clover memento she had inscribed herself.

Looking on, listening, applauding, were Virginia blue bloods from big houses, mountaineers from little cabins, and erudite college professors grabbing like gold nuggets long-lost snatches of melody and verses of songs.

"Sailor Dad" Sings.

J. M. Hurt, 68, called "Sailor Dad" because he rounded the Horn on a sailing ship years ago, sang an hitherto unrecorded sea-chanty, "Santa Ana," and the music critics "went wild" over it.

There seemed no limit to the lavish hospitality the mountaineers showered on Elliott Roosevelt's daughter. They gave her hand-woven bed spreads, canes of dogwood and of laurel, a painting of a mountain cabin where her father stayed—they even named a baby for her.

The little daughter born early this morning to Mrs. Ryland Haalsee, of Marion, was named Eleanor Roosevelt Haalsee.

Mountain roads were tied up with traffic as autoists of five states struggled to see Mrs. Roosevelt. Mountain towns of the 37-mile front from Abingdon to White Top were filled with cheering crowds. Ovation followed ovation. On her way down the mountain Mrs. Roosevelt paused to visit a negro conservation camp.

and named J. J. Mangham, of Bremen, and Max L. McRae, of McRae, in their stead. Barnett filed quo warranto proceedings against Mangham and they are set for trial before a jury at Buchanan on August 23. Mr. Vereen has made no effort to contest for the seat now held by Judge McRae.

McDonald Holds Up Fund.

At the beginning of the controversy Thomas H. McDonald, director of the federal bureau of public roads, held up the state's road fund and efforts to get Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, administrator of the fund, to override his act have proved futile, despite the fact that all members of the Georgia delegation, as individuals, have sought to prevail on the secretary to do so.

At the request of Governor Talmadge, Secretary Wallace two weeks ago called on Attorney-General Cummings for an opinion on the releasing of the money to Georgia's "de facto" board. The opinion has been furnished Mr. Wallace, but it has never been made public.

In commenting on the situation Saturday, Senator George said he did not know if the delegation would desire to go to Washington in a body or to name a committee to visit the capital.

"All that will be threshed out Tuesday," the senator said. "Whatever is the sense of the delegation will be the plan followed out."

NRA MEMBER U.S. WE DO OUR PART

Our President Has Called for Help!

Mr. Roosevelt has undertaken the most herculean task in all political history . . . devising, perfecting and putting into execution a plan and method of conducting our economic system which is calculated to not only relieve the distressing condition which has prevailed for the past four years, but will point the way for the entire world, and lift it from a condition of chaos and despair into which it has fallen.

Our President is asking for the help of every man and woman and child in our country to the end of creating a better condition whereby all may be gainfully employed at a wage which will insure peace and happiness to all.

The Atlanta Bottlers' Association wishes it known to the world that it has adopted the new code and will do all in its power to carry it out, both in letter and in spirit, to the end that we may assist in the re-birth of our nation.

The new plan, carrying with it as it does, an increase in our operating expense will necessitate an increase in the price of bottled goods to 75c and 80c per case to the dealer with a deposit of 50c per case over the entire territory covered by the Atlanta Bottlers, which we feel quite sure is justified and will be accepted by the public in the right spirit.

FARM HEADS MAP MARKETING PACT

Agreement Designed Chiefly for Nation's Milk Distributing Industry.

By ROY F. HENDRICKSON.

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—In an effort to increase the returns of a tremendous branch of American agriculture, the farm adjustment administration is drafting a blanket marketing agreement to apply to the nation's milk distributing industry.

Prepared for ratification by dairy representatives, the proposal is intended to provide relief for milkmen to offset rises in production costs, particularly of feed, as a result of the drouth in large grain and hay producing areas.

It is the answer of administrators to a complaint of dairy interests that the process of carrying out the farm act is proceeding at "too slow a pace."

Farmers Restive.

As the latest development became known, the National Co-operative Milk Producers Federation, in a statement issued by Charles W. Holman, secretary, said that "dairy farmers are restive because of the slow progress which proposed dairy marketing agreements are making under the administration of the agricultural adjustment act."

"Notwithstanding the fact that the act was signed on May 12, and numerous applications have been made for agreements and a number of hearings held, to date only one marketing agreement has been signed by the secretary of agriculture," the statement added. "It is the agreement covering the Chicago milkshed. The result is that the actual plight of the dairy farmer today is far worse than it was a year ago."

Administrators also continued efforts to obtain more money for farmers for their products, despite any contracts they may have entered into when prices were lower.

Tomato Contracts.

They already have requested tomato canners to increase by 23 per cent the contracts made in advance of the growing season. The administrators now are studying the possibilities of bringing about higher prices for pears on the Pacific coast and sweet corn. Similar efforts are to be made with respect to other fruits and vegetables if growers find their production costs rising rapidly.

The dairy blanket proposal would serve as a substitute pending the drafting and approval of agreements covering individual milk sheds. It is intended to do the same as President Roosevelt's blanket code, aimed to speed up increases in wages and reduction of hours in advance of the approval of individual code agreements for industries.

The milk agreement would affect the production and handling of the product throughout the nation if approved by Secretary Wallace. It is aimed, tentatively, to accomplish two principal results:

Results Sought.

1. To fix prices paid at some previous date, possibly June 1, as the minimum to be paid farmers by distributors, with the figure later to be adjusted by individual agreement and, in case these cannot be put into effect rapidly, by a flat percentage increase in minimums.

2. To outlaw trade practices which producers and their organizations contend are having the effect of depressing milk prices and of challenging present prices. These include price-cutting by distributors, the payment of rebates to selected customers and the granting of premiums to give some buyers advantages over others.

Representatives of producer organizations contend that unless efforts are made to stabilize milk prices, attempts to reduce them to producers may follow the rapid fall in butter prices at New York and other markets in the last three weeks. The New York butter prices fell from 26 cents a pound to 19 during that period.

Minimum Price Level.

Authority to raise minimum prices in each milkshed after a showing would be possible at any time under the blanket agreement.

Consideration is being given a proposal that the minimums be boosted generally through a statistical method which would recognize changes in feed costs as a result of this year's shortage resulting from bad weather and increases in labor costs to distributors as a result of wage boosts following adoption of codes under the NRA.

Farm living costs as well as farm producing costs both have risen substantially since June 15, the bureau of agricultural economics reported.

A conference at Chicago on Tuesday has been called by Holman's organization to work out plans for speeding up application of the farm act to the dairy industry.

Clouds Mar Sight Of Meteor Shower

Overcast skies Friday and Saturday night hampered Atlantans intent on viewing the shower of meteors as the earth made its annual cut through the Perseid orbit, according to F. B. Eason, state director of the American Meteor Society. Only 152 meteors were seen through the clouds between 10:15 o'clock Friday night and 3:30 o'clock Saturday morning, he said.

Several large meteors, traveling at a speed of 140 miles per second, flashed through the heavens below the cloud line, leaving long trains of fire and furnishing a mignificent spectacle Friday. Many more were to be seen Saturday night but the visibility was poor. Thursday night Eason's observing party sighted more than 500 meteors. Each year the earth passes through the orbit of the Perseids, an orbit so vast that it takes the Perseids 125 years to circle the sun.

McCORKLE RETURNED ON KIDNAP CHARGE

C. D. McCorkle, former Atlanta attorney and court reporter who is charged with kidnaping of his 11-year-old son, Charlie McCorkle Jr., from the mother, Saturday was brought to DeKalb county jail from South Georgia by Sheriff Jake Hall. The boy is to be returned to his mother, who was awarded custody by the court.

Len B. Guillebeau, attorney for the mother, will aid in the prosecution as special counsel for the state, it was said. Officers said that if McCorkle makes $2,500 bond in DeKalb county, he will be faced with a Fulton county attachment for alleged contempt of court, involving $1,500 in past due alimony.

at night, by Harllee Branch Jr.; at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon over WSB by O. M. Wellslager Jr., and at 9:15 at night over WJTL by R. L. Attaway.

Campaign workers were busy Saturday distributing the "Blue Eagle" posters brought to Atlanta by three army bombing airplanes Friday. The brilliant colors today will flash from street cars, delivery trucks and other vehicles, in addition to appearing in numbers of store windows.

The posters are striking and depict an employer holding an NRA emblem in one hand and pointing to the slogan, "Sign up, employer, sign today. Adopt the code of the NRA."

NRA Flags Due Soon.

Lewis Gordon, who is directing publicity for the NRA campaign, said Saturday that in addition to the posters, many business firms soon would be displaying a NRA flag in front of their establishments.

Saturday found unabatement of the activity in the federal building in connection with the NRA campaign. Hundreds of employers crowded the offices of W. L. Mitchell, district manager of the department of commerce, seeking information about code practices and operation. A total of 396 employers signed the agreements Saturday, affecting 1,312 employes. The total of signed pledges to date represents 15,650 employers who employ 103,658 employes.

Postmaster E. K. Large reported Saturday that certificates of compliance issued to employers totaled 98, bringing the total to date to 3,062 of the nearly 10,000 Atlanta firms operating a business. Mr. Mitchell had no figures showing the number of employes in Atlanta affected by the NRA campaign.

Building Permits Increase.

In addition to announcing reports of increased deposits in Atlanta banks, the federal reserve announced that building permits had increased during July by more than 10 per cent over June. The Georgia Power Company reported indications of an increase in industrial activity.

Ivan E. Allen, leader in the campaign and prominent businessman, said he had noted an increase in business. Other employers, including several automobile dealers, said they had experienced a pick-up in trade.

Complaints Made to Googe.

While the campaign moved forward Saturday, George L. Googe, southern representative of William Green, president of the Federation of Labor, was preparing to leave for Washington, to make reports on complaints that numerous southern textile mills are evading the minimum wage requirements of their NRA code. He said he would present his information to the textile labor mediation board.

"I have," he said, "received about 500 complaints of NRA textile code violations involving approximately 100 plants."

Mr. Googe said the majority of complaints were in reference to weekly piecework scales and that he believed a number of textile manufacturers were working their employes "under a pace too hard for compliance with the NRA code." He said he had found a number of cases of "clear violation of the code signed by the textile mills."

Points Out Violations.

"I'm not going up there in a belligerent mood to demand immediate prosecution or anything like that," he said, "but the time is about here when the mills should be able to accommodate themselves fully to the rules of the agreement."

In explanation of the wage deduction system he took the case of an imaginary worker whose minimum wage is set at $12 a week by the code.

"This week," he said, "shortage of material or machine breakage or some other condition outside his control cuts his output so that he earns only $9 on his piecework scale.

"Saturday night he gets his check for $12 all right.

"But next week, or the week after, he has a good run, and turns out enough work to give him $15 under the piecework scale.

"But he doesn't get the $15. He gets $12 and a slip reminding him of a $3 'advance' wage payment some time before."

Googe said textile code violation complaints were coming into the southern A. F. of L. headquarters office here at the rate of dozens daily and he had had time to investigate only a small part of the total.

Will Report on Florida Strike.

He said he would also report to the recovery administration and to President Green, of the federation, on an investigation this week of conditions in the Tampa (Fla.) cigar industry, where workers walked out and said they would not return until the industry was under a code. He said the federation would aid the cigarmakers in any way it could.

While other NRA activities were moving on a faster pace Saturday, Mayor James L. Key, who recently vetoed a repeal of an ordinance regulating grocery store operation, telegraphed General Johnson for official approval of his executive order limiting the hours of retail food establishments from 6:30 a. m. to 6:30 p. m., with an extension to 8 p. m. on Saturdays.

Mayor Key said: "This is not in opposition to the NRA movement, but in the spirit of it."

Councilman Joseph Berman said that regardless of the telegram of the mayor, he would insist that council override the veto at the next meeting on August 21.

City Workers Get Salary Hikes.

Meanwhile, more than 2,000 non-school employes of the city received $52,000 voted back to them on the restoration of the 5 per cent pay cut since April.

Atlanta businessmen leaving for other cities Saturday to discuss the NRA included William C. Royer, of the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, who left for Chicago to attend a meeting of the American Hotel Association Monday.

Several prominent druggists will gather in Atlanta Wednesday to discuss the national recovery code of their industr—. Among them will be Carl Weeks, of Des Moines, Iowa; Henry Faxon, of Kansas City, and Thomas Smith, of Wilmington, Del.

Preparing for their drive to "mop up" in the NRA campaign, the Junior Chamber of Commerce Saturday announced the personnel of leaders and team captains for the block canvas. They will meet at 5:30 o'clock Friday afternoon to complete plans for operation. Samuel A. Miller will command the workers and the line-up will be as follows:

District No. 1, first battalion, Benton Gaines, major. Team captains: J. Alex Campbell Jr., Arthur Mims, William M. Gordon, W. R. Carter, Edmund Hurt, E. Tillman Morris, Edgar P. James, Gordon Thurman, H. J. Wilson, Bailey Johnson.

District No. 2, Ed David, major, third battalion. Team captains: Philip Etheridge, Thomas A. Moye, W. R. Carter, Cecil Hall, D. W. Copeland, C. W. May, Walter Candler Jr., Everett Jackson, H. O. Jackson, H. O. Robinson, Milton Smith Jr.

emptying his weapon at the battling sheriff. A companion of Gargotta escaped.

T. A. J. Mastin, prosecutor, said he probably would file a first-degree murder charge against Gargotta in Anthon's death.

The staccato bark of firearms along Armour boulevard, in the midtown apartment hotel district, and the screams of a terror-stricken woman arrested the attention of Sheriff Bash as he was returning with Mrs. Bash, 14-year-old Melva Taylor, and a deputy, Lawrence Hodges, from a lawn party.

Stopping his automobile not far from that of the assassins, Bash seized his riot gun and dismounted to investigate. He was immediately forced into the fight by an attack upon him from the killers' car.

To keep the killers from escaping, the deputy swung the automobile containing Mrs. Bash and the 14-year-old child into the path of their departing car. Meanwhile the sheriff blazed away with his riot gun. The gunmen's car, its driver dying, crashed into the sheriff's blocking automobile.

Pleads For Life.

"I noticed Gargotta crossing the street toward me and shooting as he came," the sheriff said, in describing the brief but sanguinary battle. "I pulled down on him but didn't shoot."

"Don't shoot me, don't shoot me," he sobbed, dropping a revolver at his feet. As Gargotta was taken to jail another fully loaded revolver was found in his pocket.

One explanation of the fatal attack on Anthon offered by police was that a north side gang feared he might be the means, through his Chicago connections, of importing gunmen to resist large vice payments which have been exacted from rival racketeers in other sections of the city.

Anthon was arrested dozens of times in Kansas City, Kan., for liquor activities, and once turned state evidence which led to the resignation of several city officials.

His 24-year-old blonde widow, who witnessed his death at the conclusion of an automobile ride about the city, was taken to the prosecutor's office for questioning.

Compliment Sheriff.

Mrs. Bash, crouching in the back seat of her car while bullets flew about her embattled husband, said she felt no fear, sure that divine protection would shield him.

Congratulations were heaped upon the sheriff. One message from State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney, of Chicago, said: "Heartiest congratulations on your courageous act. It is an inspiration to all law-enforcing officials."

Bash, who rushed into the fray with the screams of Anthon's wife ringing in his ears, is a dead shot by virtue of constant practice with modern arms and a boyhood devoted largely to hunting.

ONE VICTIM FUGITIVE FROM FEDERAL OFFICIALS

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Ferris J. Anthon, machine-gunned to death in Kansas City early today, was a fugitive from federal authorities in Chicago.

He was indicted September 29, with six other men, by a federal grand jury on charges of operating a liquor syndicate that supplied a large section of the middle west with alcohol. Officials were never able to find him.

Police here have no records of the two men who killed Anthon and were themselves shot down by a sheriff.

be taken to remedy this situation. Work will be hastened on the proposed reciprocal trade agreement to stimulate American trade with the island.

Cuba also will be assisted by the United States in reorganizing its internal and external debts on a more satisfactory basis, and the administration is determined to give Cuban sugar more favorable treatment in the United States market.

Social Reforms.

President Roosevelt, as well as Secretary Hull, is deeply interested in plans for the readjustment of Cuban land holdings and other social reforms which will strengthen the new regime.

Considerable progress had been made on negotiations for a new reciprocal tariff agreement before Ambassador Welles undertook mediation in the Cuban political troubles. His time then became so fully consumed by conferences with leaders of the various factions in Cuba that he was compelled to abandon the tariff negotiations temporarily.

Largest City Auditorium In Southeast Planned Here

Plans for the new city auditorium, which would be the largest in the southeast and second to none in the country, were given out Saturday by A. Ten Eyck Brown, the architect, who, with A. Barili Jr. and J. W. Humphreys, associate architects, designed the proposed building.

The new building would seat 9,000 persons, and through its various features, Mr. Brown said, would bring a gross income sufficient to pay for its cost. It is proposed to build the auditorium through R. F. C. aid. Application for the loan has been made. The building would cost $1,500,000.

The city's importance as an athletic, musical, political and convention center would assure the financial success of the project, Mr. Brown said. He pointed out that the present auditorium on Gilmer street, which was built in 1909, is obsolete and inadequate, especially in its armory, and a hazard in many respects.

The building is planned to take care of various things. The design is based on a flat arena, so equipped as to give it an incline when necessary, with a dress circle and balcony above on three sides. The stage can also be used for seating.

The lobbies are large enough to care for large crowds, with ample entrances from the arena, dress circle and balcony. Separate staircases also are provided, opening out in most instances on the street, and set in fireproof chambers. Rest rooms are provided for each level.

The main stage may be lowered and its space added to the larger area. A smaller stage is placed at one end of the larger one, in order to provide for a small and complete theater, with its own entrances. Large exhibition rooms are connected with the main stage.

On the upper levels in the rear are two stories of large studios, with a studio theater for auditions. These can be rented or used in connection with activities in the auditorium.

The ground floor and ground-floor mezzanines provide armory accommodations, including locker and supply rooms, regimental headquarters, howitzer company, service company, medical detachment, battalion headquarters, offices and the like. The drill room on the ground floor would provide room for several companies drilling at one time. Movable seats in the arena can be taken out and additional space provided for regimental drills. This room is mechanically heated and cooled.

The ground floor also contains a large swimming pool, with locker rooms and seats for spectators. Room is also provided for a restaurant.

The building would be of steel frame construction, and would be entirely fireproof. Native stone would be used for the exterior. The effect would be massive and impressive. Mechanical heating and ventilating would be modern. The building would give Atlanta a combination convention hall, exhibition building, theater and armory.

DIVORCES SWAMP NEBRASKA COURTS

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 12.—(UP)—Nebraskans seeking to sever marital knots descended on District Judge Herbert Rhoades in a deluge the first day the state's new divorce law went into effect.

Another judge in an adjoining courtroom was pressed into service. The jam became so great. The two jurists granted 46 divorces, an all-time high for a day in Nebraska.

Nebraska's former divorce law, requiring a six-month waiting period after petition was filed, then another six months before it became final, was repealed by the legislature. Uuder the new law, petitions are heard five Mondays following filing of the suit.

I hope some of you Know this Man . . . he Means just what he Says

SURE, De Soto is smart. But it has more than mere style.

That's what this man means when he says, "It's as good as it looks." He owns a De Soto. He knows it's a real car. Talk to our owners . . . they'll tell you.

Ask them about that 82 horsepower engine. They'll tell you about its speed and power. They know it gives good gas mileage. And it's easy on oil.

Talk to them about Floating Power engine mountings. Ask them if they feel any vibration.

DeSoto has hydraulic 4-wheel brakes. They're always equalized . . . you can stop on a dime. The De Soto body is safety-steel.

Wood is used only for floor-boards and as the foundation for upholstery. Why don't we use a wood body reinforced with steel? Because wood deteriorates! An all-steel body is stronger, safer, more durable.

Honestly, there are 22 points where our De Soto beats competition. It has plenty of old-fashioned, honest-to-goodness value in it.

I'd like to say one more thing. Actually . . . De Soto costs only $4 a week more than the lowest priced cars. You get a lot of extra comfort and real luxury for that $4. Come in . . . and let's just talk it over.

IT'S FUN TO DRIVE A SMART CAR! And it's satisfying to own one that has such built-in quality features as Floating Power engine mountings . . . airwheel tires . . . hydraulic brakes . . . safety-steel body! De Soto has 22 worthwhile features you won't find in certain cars that cost even more!

Week-End Deaths in Accidents Show Need of Insurance Policy

"Second victim of crash dies."

"Sixteen killed during week-end."

Many deaths and still more injured in traffic accidents over the week-end!

That is the story that is told in Atlanta daily papers nearly every Monday. The above headlines appeared in Atlanta papers of July 10, giving an account of the week-end accidents on Sunday, July 9.

Do you notice on nearly every Monday the headlines of the Atlanta daily papers concerning week-end traffic accidents, and do you draw a personal lesson from the news articles that follow, telling of persons maimed and suffering as the result of mishaps in Atlanta and surrounding country during Saturdays and Sundays?

When will your time come? Hundreds are killed and injured every week in Atlanta and throughout this section. What can you do to protect yourself against this common peril, which every moment grows more acute?

The answer: Secure Atlanta Constitution insurance.

The insurance offered you through The Atlanta Constitution is issued by the North American Accident Insurance Company, of Chicago, Ill. This company, during the last several years, has paid to Constitution subscribers and members of their families over $160,000.

The insurance is offered to subscribers and immediate dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 15 and 68 on the one subscription going into the home at the small registration fee of 20 cents with application and 10 cents per month thereafter in addition to the subscription price, or $1 each per policy per year in advance, to subscribers who live in Atlanta; and to subscribers outside Atlanta and suburbs the rate is $1 per year per policy in addition to the subscription price.

The policy The Constitution offers you provides for payment of sums ranging downward from $10,000 for travel, $1,000 for auto and pedestrian injuries, and $10 weekly indemnity for total disability resulting from accidents set forth in the policy, which is at the rate of $43.33 per month. All this for the small fee, as stated above—just about 2 1-2 cents a week, and it is offered to old and new subscribers alike.

In sending application for insurance, the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation, and if beneficiary is desired the full Christian name of beneficiary must be given and relationship of same to the insured.

City, State Heads Will Greet Amy Johnson Mollison Today

A royal reception from local aviation enthusiasts awaits Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, wife of Captain James Mollison, both distinguished flyers, when she arrives this afternoon at 5:55 o'clock on the regular Eastern Air Transport plane from New York.

She will be met by Jesse Draper, president of the Aero Club of Atlanta; Governor Talmadge, Mayor Key and other notables, and tonight will be a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Hopkins, aviation enthusiasts.

Mrs. Mollison will be accompanied by Miss Elvey Kalep, a woman pilot from Esthonia, and Miss Madge Cahill, her nurse. Mrs. Mollison is still suffering from the recent accident to herself and her husband when their plane, after a trans-Atlantic westward flight was wrecked landing at Bridgeport, Conn.

Mrs. Mollison will inspect the facilities furnished by the government at Candler Field and also the E. A. T. overhaul and maintenance depot, one of the five largest in the country. She will leave on Tuesday morning for Washington.

Captain Mollison has returned to England to supervise the construction of a new plane, and his wife will remain here until August 26, meanwhile making inspections of air ports.

As a pilot she enjoys a reputation equal to that of Amelia Earhart. She is chiefly noted for her solo flight from London to Australia.

FLORIDAN IS JAILED ON CHILDTHEFT CHARGE

MARIANNA, Fla., Aug. 12.—Deputy Sheriff K. C. Cooper said today that Eddie Doyle, of Chipley, Fla., was arrested at Cottondale, Fla., today on advices from the department of justice. He was wanted at Merced, Cal., in connection with "child stealing" charges.

Baptist Pastor Held In Attack on Relative

CLARKSDALE, Miss., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Arrested at Memphis last night, Rev. C. M. Powell, 55-year old pastor of the Baptist church at Tutwiler, Miss., was brought here today and lodged in Coahama county jail by Deputy Sheriff Harry Dogan and Ed Sumrall, of Tallahatchie county, who said the minister would be charged in Tallahatchie with criminal assault on a relative.

The officers said Powell had been brought to Clarksdale "because of feeling in his home county." They said Powell had left Tutwiler last Monday after a complaint had been made there and that a week's search had resulted in his detention in Memphis. Powell has been pastor at Tutwiler for three years.

OUTPUT OF LIQUOR FOR MEDICAL USE HITS NEW HIGH

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The bureau of industrial alcohol today set the production of medicinal liquors at 7,000,000 gallons for the calendar year, 1934.

Officials at the bureau said that the allocation, the largest since the eighteenth amendment became effective, was made necessary due to the depletion of medicinal liquor stocks due to relaxation of restrictions on prescription distillates.

Consumption of medicinal liquor, they said, had increased since the enactment by the last congress of the Celler act.

The year's allocation compares with an annual production of 2,000,000 gallons in all previous years since 1929.

Distillation of liquor was abandoned in 1919 due to enactment of the 18th amendment, but was resumed in 1929.

The bureau said that there might be a further reallocation of production in the fall if it appears that the 7,000,000-gallon figure will not be adequate for medicinal needs. The present stock of medicinal liquor is considered sufficient for one year's needs and amounts to 11,000,000 gallons liquor of aged stocks.

The all-time high record for liquor production was in 1916, the bureau said, when the output amounted to 284,000,000 gallons.

Pilot Club Helps Hall Fund

The Atlanta Pilot Club's contribution to the building of Georgia Hall at Warm Springs went into the pot Friday when Miss Juliet Dowling, chairman of Georgia Hall for the club, presented a check to Cator Woolford, vice chairman of the Georgia committee and chairman of the Atlanta committee for Georgia Hall. The above picture shows Miss Dowling tendering the check to Mr. Woolford, who expressed appreciation of the committee for the addition to the fund. Members of a number of clubs have grouped together in making their contributions to the Georgia Hall fund, and it is the hope of the committee that many more will make similar contributions, Mr. Woolford said. Georgia Hall contributor certificates go to the club and to each member. Staff photo by George Cornett.

GLASS AND GRAYSON TO HUNT IN HUNGARY

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Senator Carter Glass and Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson, now en route to Europe, will spend part of the shooting season at Bernard M. Baruch's hunting lodge in Hungary, it was learned here today.

Senator Glass and Admiral Grayson sailed for Europe Wednesday on a vacation tour.

Curb Market Owners Again Seek Permit

Another effort of operators of the Washington street curb market to obtain a permit to operate will be made Wednesday afternoon before the zoning sub-committee of the city planning commission, of which Walter S. McNeal Jr. is chairman.

J. W. Barwick and John T. Toole denied permits several weeks ago, and who appealed to the council in an effort to continue to operate, have filed new applications.

Under present ordinances requiring the closing of all retail food vending places at specified times, which Mayor James L. Key has amended to 6:30 at night except Saturday when 8 p. m. has been set as the closing hour, operators contend that objections to continued operation of the market have been eliminated.

The following other petitions also will be considered at the committee meeting at 3 o'clock at the city hall:

Application of Sam Minsk for permission to operate a junk yard at 366-8 Peters street, S. W.

Application of Philip Bodne to operate junk yard at 395-A Peters street, S. W.

POLICE BOOK PROBE COMING THIS WEEK

Councilmanic investigation of alleged irregularities in solicitation of advertising for the police yearbook, in exchange for which courtesy cards were issued, is expected to begin early this week.

Councilman Aubrey Milam, chairman of the committee, has been out of the city for the past week, but will return to Atlanta Monday.

C. P. Lynes, acting foreman of the Fulton county grand jury, admitted Saturday that the grand jury had "considered the issuance of police courtesy cards," but declined to amplify his statement.

Oscar H. Pendley, secretary of the police department, was one of the witnesses called.

NRA Interpretations

Q. Should the wages of girls employed in wrapping soap by hand who were paid $6 per week of 55 hours in July, 1929, and who are paid the same as of July 15, 1933, be increased to $12 per week of 40 hours at 30 cents per hour.

A. It is interpreted that these girls are factory employes and come under paragraph 3, therefore a maximum of 35 hours a week (except for any six weeks between now and December 31, 1933, when 40 hours can be worked) and the minimum rate of pay for this class of labor is 30 cents an hour.

Q. Is it necessary in order to comply with the spirit of NRA for additional employes to be put on in an office that needs no additional help on account of the company having carried more employes than it actually needed through the depression rather than lay them off?

A. While it is one of the two main purposes of the agreement to put more people to work, in this case it is interpreted that it is not absolutely obligatory to take on additional employes.

Q. If the same office work can be done by the present number of employes working at the reduced hours is it necessary in order to comply with the act to employ others?

A. It is inferred from this question that the same situation exists as in question 5, and that the firm has been carrying more employes than it needed, and the answer to question 5 applies.

Q. Would a social club operated purely for social purposes and not for profit and which employs waiters who work for the most part only a few hours at night, come under the NRA?

A. Non-profit associations are classed as employes under the code. Waiters come under paragraph 2. These appear to be part-time workers and the following interpretation applies:

"The minimum wage for a part-time worker in an employment described in paragraph 2 of the agreement is a wage such that if the employe worked at that wage for a full week of 40 hours he would receive the minimum weekly wage prescribed for him by the agreement."

Q. A small negro barber shop now employs three barbers on commission basis, each barber averaging possibly $5 to $6 per week. The gross revenue of shop after allowing for business licenses, lights, material, rent, heat and other operating expenses, would hardly permit of more than one barber on a $14.50 wage scale, thereby forcing the complete closing of the shop, unemployment of the several persons now employed, and loss of tenant to landlord, which in turn deprives landlord of this revenue necessary to pay taxes and insurance on property. Is there any flexibility in code to prevent the extinction of such small businesses which provide a livelihood for a number of persons, but which are unable to carry a minimum load of $14.50 salary per person per week?

A. "A person who believes that some particular provisions in the agreement, because of peculiar circumstances, will create great and unavoidable hardship, should prepare a petition to NRA asking for a stay of this provision as to him. He should then submit this petition to the trade association of his industry, or if there is none, to the local Chamber of Commerce or similar representative organization designated by NRA for its approval. The written approval of the trade association or such other organization will be accepted by NRA as the basis for a temporary stay, without further investigation, pending decision by NRA. The petition must contain a promise to abide by NRA's decision, so that if NRA decides against the petitioner, he must give effect to the provision which was stayed, from the date of the decision of NRA."

Approximately 58 per cent of California voters went to the polls at the repeal election in June.

M'DONALD SEEKS DANIEL'S OUSTER

Suspended Public Service Board Member Files Court Action.

The fourth of five suspended members of the Georgia public service commission went to court Saturday in an effort to regain the office lost when Governor Eugene Talmadge issued suspension orders after a long investigation. He is Walter R. McDonald, of Augusta, who filed quo warranto proceedings against J. T. (Tobe) Daniel, of LaGrange. The proceedings were filed in Troup county. Judge Lee Wyatt ordered the McDonald petition set for hearing on August 18.

James A. Perry, former chairman of the board, is seeking to certiorari the action of the governor into the courts as is Albert W. Woodruff, of Decatur, and Jule W. Felton, of Montezuma. Felton also filed ouster proceedings against Ben T. Huiet, named to succeed him, but they were denied in Fulton superior court. He plans an appeal to the supreme court.

Perry T. Knight, of Valdosta, is the only member of the commission who has not yet taken his fight into court.

Rich's College Board Approves Costumes To Be Worn by Collegians of Atlanta

Wide shoulders or not so wide! Satins or wools! Tiny hats or brimmed ones!

These were just three of the fashion problems that had to be decided upon by Rich's college board when they held their first meeting for 1933 in Rich's conference room last Friday when they selected what they considered the smartest and most practical apparel for college from the comprehensive collection in Rich's College Shop.

This is the third year that Rich's college board, comprised of prominent young Atlanta girls, has operated. The success of the models they have selected in the past is conclusive proof that they know their college fashions.

This year their task was a bewildering one. For never have Rich's college fashions been so glamorous, so alluring, so comprehensive.

But select they did. And the seal "Approved by the College Board," which goes into every garment selected means the universal approval of a representative group of Atlanta girls for smartness and practicability.

This meeting was the first of a series to be held preparatory to the opening of Rich's College Shop. Oscar Strauss Jr., advertising manager of Rich's, presided.

Beginning Saturday, the 19th, members of the college board will preside in the College Shop on the third floor where they will receive their friends and talk college clothes.

Every afternoon during the week of August 19 through August 26 afternoon tea will be served at 3 p. m. and models will display the costumes approved by the college board with Atlanta's college group in attendance, with lots of chatter about fall clothes in general and in particular those "approved by Rich's college board."

Nation's Youngest Ditty Writer Wins This Week's First Prize

By THE DITTY EDITOR.

Little Miss May Asden Wolfe, America's youngest ditty writer, was awarded the first prize of $5 cash by the judges in the past week's "Do-a-Ditty About Jacobs" contest.

Little Miss Wolfe, who first saw the light of day on Monday, August 7, at Piedmont hospital, lost no time in entering the contest.

Between oh's and ah's of admiring friends and relatives she got right down to business and dictated a ditty to earn $5. I don't know, but I imagine she put up an awful holler until her dad rushed down to his nearest Jacobs store and duly entered the following:

I'm three days old—with parents wise—
I feel so good I want to sing,
'Cause Jacobs' name first met my eyes,
On powder, oil 'n everything!

Submitted by Miss May Asden Wolfe (born Monday, August 7, 1933) Piedmont hospital, 551 Capitol avenue.

The second prize of $5 went to Mrs. H. E. Maddox, 1253 Gordon street, for this ditty:

There are more ways of making money
Than grinding your nose at a stone,
And a sure way is trading at Jacobs'
Where prices are cut to the bone.

The 23 other prize winners will be found in the Jacobs' advertisement elsewhere in today's paper.

In next Thursday's Constitution the winners of the sweepstake prizes will be announced. The judges will be Miss Mabel Loeb, of the Loeb Advertising Agency; Joe Archer, advertising manager of the Atlanta Journal; Melvin Schwarz, advertising manager of the Atlanta Georgian, and John Dodd, of The Atlanta Constitution.

Dean Paden, vice president and general manager of the King Hardware Co., was one of the past week's judges.

MERCHANTS IN SOUTH GEORGIA REJOICE AS CROP MONEY FLOWS

NEGRO PLOWS UP SMALL FORTUNE IN SPANISH GOLD

Cache of Ancient Coins Uncovered in Field on Farm in Elbert County

By EDNA ARNOLD COPELAND.

ELBERTON, Ga., Aug. 12.—An Elbert county negro farmer was busy tilling his soil one morning recently when suddenly his work was retarded by his plow hitting something which made a rattling noise. The negro stopped his work and commenced to dig into "Mother Earth." To his joy and amazement he uncovered gold. Not a pot of it, but a nice pile of gold Spanish coins. After the find was gathered together and taken to the house the negro very secretively polished each gold piece and wisely decided the bank was the only safe place for his treasure.

The coins date to the revolutionary period. Tales had been afloat for years that gold had been buried somewhere on this old place, but like most tales of this nature, it was not accepted in a serious manner. After the negro's luck in finding the gold, extra help was secured on the farm and every acre of land is being turned over in search of more gold.

From the collector's viewpoint the Spanish coins are receiving recognition and a number have been purchased by a western establishment, but not at their true worth.

These coins were placed on exhibition at the Elbert County Museum during the Georgia bicentennial celebration in Elberton and thousands had the privilege of viewing this rare collection. Since then crowds have visited the spot where the coins were found and a great deal of interest has been manifested.

Near the home of the negro, where the gold was found, is an old Indian trail of more than a century and a half ago, which for a distance of 70 miles follows a ridge, a perfect water shed not crossing a stream between Toccoa and the confluence of the Savannah and Broad rivers. Not far distant is the homesite of "Old Dan Tucker" and that of America's revolutionary heroine, "Nancy Hart."

The Melon of Political Peace

A few years ago J. J. Brown, then Georgia commissioner of agriculture, and Eugene Talmadge were bitter political enemies. Talmadge finally defeated Brown for his office and became head of the state farm department in his stead. Later, as all Georgia knows, Commissioner Talmadge entered the race for the gubernatorial seat and is now known all over the United States as governor of Georgia. In the meantime, J. J. Brown, the erstwhile agricultural commissioner, retired to his farm in Ware county, where he has long enjoyed the reputation as one of the most successful planters in Georgia. On a recent visit to south Georgia, Governor and Mrs. Talmadge visited Mr. Brown at his home and are shown above accepting a watermelon, the last to ripen on the Brown acres this year. It is, appropriately, of the "Tom Watson" variety. Photo by Turner Hiers.

Veteran of Arctic Expeditions Lectures Before Young Campers

TALLULAH FALLS, Ga., Aug. 12.—Edward Manley, in charge of the Atlanta office of the Eastern Air Transport Company, and a veteran of six Arctic expeditions, gave an illustrated lecture this week before the boys and girls of Camp Chattooga for girls and the Athens "Y" camp for boys.

H. A. Carter, nature study expert of The Atlanta Constitution, was also on the program, illustrating his talk on nature study with various pictures of wild life.

Mr. Manley showed several reels of life in the arctic, his adventures there and the interesting discoveries that were made by the party of which he was a member.

Both Mr. Manley and Mr. Carter spoke as a part of the combined camps' cultural program for 1933.

40 Years Uninterrupted Service Completed by Lincoln Journal

WASHINGTON, Ga., Aug. 12.—With the current issue, The Lincoln Journal rounds out 40 years of public service, without missing an issue.

Forty years ago Lincoln county was distinctly populist. The followers of Thomas E. Watson needed a political organ, so the Lincoln Journal, as Lincolnton's second paper, was made to fill the need, with Judge T. H. Remsen as editor.

Long triumphant under the leadership of the "Sage of McDuffie" populism finally faltered, but the Journal prevailed over its competitor, the Lincolnton News, as democracy triumphed over populism.

Early in the life of the Journal its second editor, Senator James H. Boykin, succeeded Judge Remsen, and continued for a quarter of a century. Following Senator Boykin were John P. Drinkard and C. T. Burton; Mrs. Boyce Ficklen Jr., who withdrew to accept the position of secretary and treasurer of the state board of control.

The Journal enters its forty-first year with C. T. Burton, owner, and John P. Drinkard, editor.

$500,000 ENTERS MOULTRIE TRADE FROM TWO CROPS

Business Booming in South Georgia Town as Farmers Sell Tobacco and Cotton.

MOULTRIE, Ga., Aug. 12.—More than $500,000 was paid out in Moultrie the first days of this week for cotton and tobacco, warehousemen here said today. It was the second big marketing week of the two crops. While neither tobacco nor cotton is bringing the prices the farmers had expected, such large sums of money are being turned loose that business in all lines is beginning to hum here as it hasn't since 1929, retailers assert.

Many farmers have already "paid out," as they express it. Crops were produced cheaper than they have ever been before. Nothing like the normal amount of fertilizer was used, and the outstanding obligations against the crops were smaller than they have been in many years. The watermelon crop in the Moultrie section sold unusually well and went a long way towards wiping out part of the debts.

Hundreds who had been idle for months, dependent upon the welfare board for necessities have found work recently in the cotton fields, in the tobacco barns and around the warehouses. Their earnings have gone into trade channels. The food merchants were the first to feel the benefits of the new situation. Now other retailers say they are doing a constantly increasing business.

The large number of new automobiles seen on the streets here and in some of the other tobacco towns indicates that the dealers who have been among the hardest hit by the depression are again finding things coming their way.

Tobacco marketing on a big scale will continue for at least two weeks longer, while the markets probably will be open for about a month. Cotton picking will not be finished before October. In the meanwhile marketing of peanuts will have been started and hogs will also be sold. Peanuts are said to have turned out well this season and growers feel confident they will sell much better than they did last season.

Cotton has been coming into Moultrie this week at the rate of more than 100 bales per day, and most of it has been sold at current prices. Tobacco sales through Friday totaled 1,802,345 pounds. The gross money value of it was $259,383. Next week is expected to see the peak of the tobacco selling season. More pounds are expected to be sold than during any other week this season. The grades are expected to be better also. As was known before the auctions began the crop was very "spotted" due to weather conditions and low grades have pulled the average down on most markets.

86 GET DEGREES AT U. OF GEORGIA

Paul W. Chapman Speaks at Summer Graduation Exercises.

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 12.—Degrees were granted to 86 students of the University of Georgia at the summer quarter commencement exercises Friday evening as one of the largest summer sessions in the history of the institution was brought to a close.

"The most important and fundamental thing you can realize," Paul W. Chapman, commencement speaker, told graduates, "is that your vocation was brought into being by some definite need of society."

Keeping that in mind, he continued, it will be possible to develop the maximum usefulness of any work.

Mr. Chapman is state director of vocational education and president of the American Vocational Association. He is also a well-known writer.

"Your personal progress in your chosen work, the extent of the service you will be able to render, and your ultimate happiness will be determined by the way you interpret your call to serve," he said.

President S. V. Sanford, of the university, called to the attention of the audience that this summer, when the enrollment of universities all over the country has dropped, as much as 57 per cent in many instances, the University of Georgia has fallen off less than 150. Last year's enrollment was 1,242 and this year's 1,096.

A violin solo was played by Louis McGarity, the invocation and benediction were pronounced by Rev. Stanley R. Grubb, pastor of the Christian church, of Athens, and the entire audience sang "Alma Mater."

Miss Nolee Mae Dunaway played the organ prelude and postlude.

COTTON GROWERS STRIKE IN SUMTER

Farmers Agree Not To Sell Staple Below 12 Cents.

AMERICUS, Ga., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Sumter county farmers inaugurated a cotton growers' strike here today. Leaders in the movement say that growers will not sell their cotton at prevailing prices. A 12-cent minimum is wanted.

James Davenport named several growers who have joined the movement, among them A. D. Davis, 12 bales; A. D. Gatewood, 50 bales; T. H. Walker, 100 bales; W. C. Kenmore, 15 bales, and Sam Rodgers.

The growers are also protesting the ginning code, now being considered in Washington, which provides for a fee of $7.60 per bale for ginning.

Beer Prices Lowered By Consumers Threat

MOULTRIE, Ga., Aug. 12.—Threat of Moultrie beer drinkers to quit until they could organize a co-operative beer garden unless prices were lowered has brought about a reduction from 25 cents a bottle for the brew to 20 and 15 cents a bottle.

One retailer announced he was putting in equipment to handle draft beer at 5 and 10 cents a glass. This appears to have pacified the beer drinkers who objected to paying 25 cents a bottle straight and the movement for the "co-op" beer parlor has been dropped, temporarily at least.

HOT SENATE CONTEST FORESEEN IN CHATHAM

SAVANNAH, Ga., Aug. 12.—There may be a lively contest in Chatham county for senator from the first district in the next primary. Governor Talmadge's effort to line up the forces throughout the state to get a friendly senate to his policies is making the matter of the first district senatorship interesting. George W. Fetzer Jr., a leader in the last senate, it is said, will transfer his citizenship to Chatham in order to run again under the rotation system. Shelby Myrick, now in the house, but a former senator, is said to be ambitious to go to the senate again, so there may be a contest between him and Fetzer.

AIDS TO JOHNSON IN OPEN BREAK ON BUYERS' CODE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—In the role of peacemaker, Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial chieftain, tonight attempted to settle differences between two prominent members of the NRA organization and bring to an end the first open feud in his official family.

The participants were Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, wealthy chairman of the consumers' advisory board of the NRA, and Professor William F. Ogburn, a member of the University of Chicago.

Johnson indicated today that Ogburn was no longer a member of the board, at the request of Mrs. Rumsey. Later, however, Johnson talked with the economist and then told newspapermen he would try to end their dispute.

While Mrs. Rumsey was out of the city tonight recovering from a nervous collapse on Thursday, Ogburn prepared for Johnson a comprehensive memorandum on his views about the functions of the consumers' advisory board.

He was still a member, Johnson said, "so far as I know."

The weeks of controversy between the economist and the socially prominent Mrs. Rumsey culminated recently in a telegram to Ogburn from Secretary Roper, chairman of the NRA cabinet advisory board, advising him that he was being transferred to the central statistical board created by President Roosevelt to check the economic course of the nation.

Georgia Sheriff Told By Court To Sell Beer

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 12.—Sheriff J. M. Moreland, of Catoosa county, has been ordered by Judge C. C. Pittman to sell 50 cases of 3.2 beer which was confiscated en route to Dalton several months ago.

The sheriff didn't ask the judge how to sell it in Georgia without violating the law, or in Tennessee without a license. A bottle of the brew analyzed last week tested nearly 5.0 per cent.

As the 50 cases are worth more than $150, the sheriff intends to see if Judge Pittman can help him out.

Milligan were extended, if not saved today when Governor Dave Sholtz, who is in Key West, informed attorneys here that the execution of Milligan, scheduled for Monday morning at Raiford, would be stayed pending a decision on Casey's motion for a trial.

Milligan and Casey were to die in the electric chair Monday morning for the killing of Frank D. Palmer, former Macon, Ga., druggist, in a hold-up of his store on New Year's eve, 1931.

Merchants of Dalton Act in Spirit of NRA

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 11.—The Dalton Merchants' Association at a recent meeting showed the real spirit of the NRA. The city council was being urged to adopt an ordinance to regulate retailers' hours.

BARNESVILLE COUNCIL PLANS SCHOOL CHANGE

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Aug. 12.—City council of Barnesville has presented a resolution to the board of trustees of Gordon College and to the city board of education, requesting the removal of the high school department of Gordon as well as the junior college, to the building recently occupied by the Georgia Industrial College.

The original plans of the board of trustees called for removal of the junior college department only. The two bodies will take action on the resolution at an early date.

BEDSPREAD WORKERS SEEK FAIR WAGE CODE

DALTON, Ga., Aug. 12.—Plans have been perfected for a mass meeting of all bedspread workers in Whitfield and adjoining counties to be held at Dalton. For years this has been an important industry throughout this section, but during the depression wages dropped so rapidly and with many manufacturers paying only in fiat money, good only at their commissaries, it has been deemed advisable to adopt an NRA workers' code for correction of the situation.

Plans will be presented for a permanent organization and the adoption of a code to guarantee a living wage, payble in United States currency.

GEORGIA HISTORY NOW ON PRESSES

Professor Coulter Completes Popular Style Textbook on State.

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 12.—"A Short History of Georgia," by Dr. E. Merton Coulter, of the University of Georgia, an abbreviated story of the state from the Spanish occupation in 1566 to the present day, is being published by the University of North Carolina Press. It will be off the press in the early fall and will be 415 pages long.

Written in popular narrative style suited to the tastes of the casual reader, it is also sufficiently documented to be useful as a basis for college courses in Georgia history.

Dr. Coulter is a popular and prolific writer on historical subjects. "College Life in the Old South," published in 1928, is probably his best-known work, but he has published three other books in the last 11 years. They are "History of Kentucky," two volumes, 1922; "Cincinnati Southern Railroad and Struggle for Southern Commerce, 1865-1872," 1922, and "Civil War and Readjustment in Kentucky," 1926.

He also has well over 100 booklets, articles, biographical sketches and book reviews to his credit. Among them are "Spanish Missions in Georgia," a paper read before the St. Augustine Historical Society, and published in four Georgia newspapers this summer, and "William G. Brownlow, the Fighting Parson of the Southern Highlands," the result of a recent research project.

Dr. Coulter is a member of and has held various offices in the American Historical Society, the Georgia Historical Society, the Agricultural History Society and the Mississippi Valley Historical Association. He is editor of the Georgia Historical Quarterly.

Although he has been a member of the faculty of the University of Georgia since 1919, he has taught in eight other universities during the same time, usually in summer schools. They are the Universities of Colorado, Kentucky, Texas, Nebraska, Pittsburgh and Wisconsin, Ohio State University and Duke University.

U. S. Aviation Is Recording Greatest Year in History

By DONALD C. BOLLES.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The giant metal birds that fly the country's air highways are writing in the sky this year a chapter in the progress of American aviation that will outshine any in a lustrous past.

With seven months of the current year behind it, the aircraft industry has enjoyed such an increased volume of patronage from passengers and express customers that statisticians of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce have predicted 1933 will set a new high mark.

An infant at the close of the World War, American aviation has developed a robustness that has amazed even some of its most optimistic prophets and enabled it to forge ahead during the depression years when other industries were striving, many in vain, to maintain the status quo.

Volume in 1932.

In 1932, the worst year of the depression, commercial flying enjoyed the best volume of business in its comparatively brief history. Nevertheless, it is indicated it will be surpassed this year.

The Chamber of Commerce expects that passenger business will show a 10 per cent increase over 1932 for the number of passengers carried and a 30 per cent rise in the number of passenger miles flown. The disparity in the rise is due to the fact that passengers are being carried longer distances.

Patronage of the air lines as an express service has forged ahead as the service improved and more lines entered this field. As a consequence, an 18 to 20 per cent increase in express poundage is expected to result.

Air mail may suffer by comparison with last year due to the fact that the volume fell with the 60 per cent increase in air mail rates last year.

Business Pick-up.

Recent months have shown some improvement, especially since July 1, when air mail rates were cut 25 per cent. This year as a whole, probably will show a drop of 15 per cent or less in mail volume from the peak year of 1932.

Some indication of the progress this year, which has been accelerated by business recovery and new high speed equipment, is given in the comparative figures for the first half of 1933 and 1932. They follow:

Passengers (no.).	229,075	223,834
Express (lbs.) ..	813,353	668,250
Air mail (lbs.) .	3,571,708	4,240,072

In the present, as in the past, American airlines are dependent to a large extent upon air mail contracts for subsistence, but, the goal of many today is to become self-sustaining. It is estimated that fully two-thirds of the aggregate operating revenues of the mail route operators during the first half of 1932 came from the postoffice department.

Subsidies Cut.

The total revenue of air lines in 1932 was about $28,500,000 and mail contracts contributed $19,267,000 of the total. The reduction in mail subsidies this year, to bring such expenditures within the maximum limits of $15,000,000 established by congress, represents a 23 per cent decrease from the appropriation for the previous or 1932-33 fiscal period.

To offset this loss in revenue, air lines have been making rapid strides in expanding the passenger and express business. Several companies have added express service and 44 more transport planes were put in the airlanes during the first five months of the year. More than 600 planes are today in regular service.

While for some time to come operators may continue to rely on the government for the major part of their revenues, it is the view of the Standard Statistics Company analysts that the growth of non-mail receipts and additional curtailment of operating costs may be expected to gradually achieve for them their ambition of being self-sustaining.

Homecoming Day in Union County Draws Hundreds to Blairsville

BLAIRSVILLE, Ga., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Approximately 500 citizens were present here today at the annual homecoming day exercises of the people of Union county, attended also by prominent educators of the state.

The meeting was held at the Georgia mountain experiment station, a branch of the Georgia Experiment station at Experiment, and was sponsored by H. T. Stuckey, dean of the University of Georgia College of Agriculture and director of the station.

Dr. J. T. Lance, president of Young Harris College, was master of ceremonies. The program centered around a barbecue.

Declaring that less than 3 per cent of the property in Union county is under mortgage, Superintendent J. N. Nicholson, of the county school system, outlined the county system of education.

Dr. J. S. Stewart, professor of secondary education in the University of Georgia, stressed the progress which Union and surrounding counties have made in the last 25 years.

R. L. Kincaid, native of Union county, now a publisher at Middlesboro, Ky.; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; J. Phil Campbell, director of the extension service, and Dr. S. V. Sanford, president of the University of Georgia, also spoke on the program.

Wilby Leases Fox Theater Here; Change Effective September 1

R. B. Wilby, widely known theatrical man, Saturday signed a lease on the Fox theater, it was announced by Frank C. Owens, vice president of the Draper-Owens Company, agents for the Theater Holding Company, owners of the Shrine Mosque building in which the theater is located.

Although Mr. Wilby personally signed the lease, it is understood that he was acting as agent for one of the large motion picture companies. Mr. Wilby now operates the Paramount and the Georgia in Atlanta as well as other theaters in Georgia and North Carolina.

The lease is effective on September 1. It is reported to be one of the largest of the year and among the largest since 1929. The current lease on the theater is for a long term of years with an aggregate rental of about $250,000 a year.

"No definite operation policy has been determined regarding the Fox," Mr. Wilby said. "It is the finest theater in Atlanta and one of the finest in America."

The theater was built in 1929 and at first operated by the Fox interests. Later it was subleased to Loew's who operated it for about two years. Since then it has been operated by a local organization.

At the head of the Georgia delegation will be the state's commander-in-chief, Governor Eugene Talmadge, who will be flanked by members of his military staff and statehouse officials. More than 300 private citizens are expected to accompany the governor on his special train.

Addresses will include those by Governor Talmadge, United States Senator Richard B. Russell Jr. and a talk over the radio by President Franklin D. Roosevelt. One of six states so honored by the National Broadcasting Company, Georgia's program will be broadcast over a nation-wide hookup, according to Mr. Allen.

Asheville Widow Freed In Death of Husband

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 12.—(AP) Mrs. Louise Klibler Glenn, held in jail here on charges of murdering her husband, was ordered released in a habeas corpus hearing here today by Judge P. A. McElroy, who held that evidence presented by the state was insufficient to hold her.

Mrs. Glenn, who is 36, was arrested the day after her husband, T. Orr Glenn, Asheville dry cleaner man, was found lifeless at the bottom of a 100-foot cliff on a highway near Weaverville.

His wrecked automobile lay near by but investigation disclosed he had been shot through the breast, apparently before the car plunged over the cliff.

IMPROVEMENT NOTED IN DIAMOND TRADE

ROTTERDAM, Aug. 5.—(By Mail.)—Business conditions in Europe are improving, according to Captain J. Van Dulken, of the Holland American liner Statendam, which has been docked here this week. In an interview before leaving for America today, Captain Van Dulken explained his reasons for his belief.

"I have an almost infallible way of telling whether the world is spending money or holding on to it. I ran over to Amsterdam several times this week while my ship was in harbor at Rotterdam and at nightfall noted the workers who came out of the diamond cutting and polishing shops.

"There are something like 20,000 men engaged in these trades in Amsterdam when money is easy. Most of the world's finished diamonds come from that city. Six months ago the number of diamond workers appeared to be pitifully few and the men lacked the air of prosperous skilled workers. This week it looked as if their number had doubled. You can spot the men in these trades by their stooping shoulders. You can recognize them easily in the cinemas because close microscopic work changes the focus of their eyes and they seem to squint at the screen. I saw more of them at the movies and they wore better clothes. That tells me that they are earning more money and the fact that more of them are working means that the diamond business is looking up."

TOURISTS WILL VISIT OLD SCOTTISH COLONY

MURRAY BAY, Quebec, Aug. 12. Native Scots or people of Scottish descent who come here from New York on the summer cruises of the Anchor liner Transylvania to the Saguenay will find a delightful Scottish colony at Murray Bay, a colony with an interesting bit of history behind it. The Scottish lined calls here on all her summer cruises.

Murray Bay perpetuates the name of Governor General James Murray, a Scotsman, who as a brigadier general under Wolff, commanded the left wing of the British army at the Battle of the Plains of Abraham in 1759. Upon the death of Wolff Murray succeeded to the command of the British forces in Quebec, being eventually appointed governor general in 1760.

With the cessation of hostilities Murray Bay was selected as the site of a Highland colony. Some of the soldiers sent home for their wives, others for their sweethearts, and those that had neither began to see that the French-Canadian young women were beautiful and consequently many marriages took place. The result at the present time is a most interesting and attractive population of about 5,000 people.

BEAR BOARDS BOAT, OUSTING OCCUPANTS

FRENCH RIVER, Ont., Aug. 12. A bear that steals honey is not news, but a bear that steals a ride in a lumberman's boat, ousting two of the occupants, is decidedly news! Jack Strathdee, manager of the French River bungalow camp here, reports that while motorboating from Woolsey Bay recently he came upon three French-Canadians towing a raft of logs up the river. A half-grown bear swam toward their boat.

The Frenchmen excitedly loosed the raft and one of them struck bruin on the head with a peavy. The bear managed to get one foot in the boat and then climbed in. As he did so the Frenchmen got out, forgetting to shut off their motor.

There was the bear, sitting on his haunches, sniffing the air and riding up the river! Two lumbermen swam ashore, but Strathdee had to pull the other one out and take him ashore, so he could not follow up the bear. The boat was headed for a ledge of rocks, so it is probable that the bear jumped out on touching the shore and disappeared. Jack left the three men excitedly chattering in French and waving their arms.

TRAIL RIDERS REACH 9,000-FOOT ALTITUDE

BANFF, Alta., Aug. 12.—Ascending to an altitude of more than 9,000 feet, where vast snowfields alternate with flower-bedecked alpine meadows, climbing boulder-strewn ridges where passage appears almost impossible, traveling where practically no man has penetrated previously, made the current annual ride of the Trail Riders of the Canadian Rockies, July 28-31, the most spectacular in its history.

The ride left the Chateau Lake Louise July 28 and the highlight occurred on the second day's trek in making the crossing from the Bow Lakes trail to the Saskatchewan river one. The cavalcade ascended a newly-blazed trail up the slope of Dolomite mountain to Dolomite pass. The last half mile of that climb, a half mile of twisting and clambering over and around huge boulders to several hundred feet above the actual water divide was a strenuous trail rider test. This divide, which affords no foothold for horses, makes necessary the difficult climb to above the 9,000-foot altitude, from which vantage point the riders saw Mount Assiniboine, the objective of last year's ride. Four long steep descents brought them down to the timber-line, where the going was easier.

K. OF C. HERE TO HOLD BARBECUE FOR CHARITY

More than 300 Catholics and their friends are expected to gather at the annual barbecue to be given by the Knights of Columbus, Atlanta Council No. 660, at the clubhouse on Peachtree street Wednesday. The food will be served from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock and proceeds from sale of tickets at 50 cents each will go to charity.

Clement L. McGowan, grand knight of the council, said in addition to Georgia style barbecue there would be "plenty of Brunswick stew." The barbecue will mark the twenty-fifth annual celebration of the event and non-Catholics as well as Catholics were invited to attend.

Let's Back NRA and Roosevelt, Muse, of Volunteer Group, Says

By CHARLES C. MUSE.
Manager and Advertising Director of the Atlanta Volunteer Food Store System.

Volunteer Food Stores all over Atlanta are flying the blue eagle. These independent merchants were among the first to sign the code and pledge themselves to NRA. They did not merely come up to NRA's requirements but in most instances are paying higher salaries and wages than the code demanded. The Volunteer merchants have always employed clerks of the highest type, capable of serving you courteously, efficiently and intelligently. These men are anxious to please their customers.

Volunteer Food Stores have come through the depression with flying colors. They are certainly well qualified to serve the public in the approaching period of prosperity. They will not become gamblers, taking advantage of an easy-going, carefree, unsuspecting public. They will do in the future what they have done in the past. They will sell merchandise at a reasonable profit above replacement cost, according to the wishes and spirit of the NRA.

I recall World War experiences. I was not in the front-line trenches, but close enough to see the flash of the guns. Orders would come back of the line in the dead of night and whole battalions and regiments would be awakened from deep slumber and instantly move as one man and carry out orders given without confusion.

Orders were instantaneously obeyed without question whether in the front-line trenches or in camps back at home. Everything was done fast and furiously with a precision and efficiency that was uncanny. It was the spirit of Woodrow Wilson, the greatest president that America had ever known.

Today the battle cry of America is "Roosevelt, We Are Back of You To a Man"—millions will do and move as one upon your command.

America today is emerging from a greater peril than in 1917. Today we are passing through the greatest panic the world has ever known. Food and raw materials have been known to have been destroyed in certain parts of the country because there was no demand for them, and at the same time people were suffering in other parts of the country for lack of food to say nothing of lack of winter clothing and other necessities of life. It is not natural for America to have to face conditions like the present periodically. It is the most insane, idiotic condition that has ever existed. The whole trouble has been lack of a leader and a people willing to follow a leader.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt is another Woodrow Wilson. He will go down in history as the greatest leader the world has ever known. Let's make it easier for him. Let's back the national recovery act to the limit. Let's do more than our part. And permanent prosperity will soon return.

CARTER HARRISON AGAIN WILL SERVE

73-Year-Old Leader of Chicago Dynasty Is Called By Roosevelt.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Carter Harrison dynasty, already spread over the pages of Chicago's political history for a half a century, has been recalled to political activity.

Carter Henry Harrison, aged 73, has been brought out of 18 years' retirement life into the maelstrom of public life by President Roosevelt. The Harrison name once more is listed on the roll of officialdom here.

The president has appointed him collector of internal revenue for the Chicago district and chairman of the federal public works commission for Illinois.

The name Harrison, in Chicago, is symbolic of some of the city's finest traditions. For 10 terms a Carter H. Harrison has occupied the office of mayor.

First in 1879.

The regime began in 1879 when Carter the first, a pioneer in a rising city, was elected mayor. His son, Carter Jr., was 19 years old then. The elder Harrison served four consecutive terms as mayor until 1887 and then was replaced by a republican.

In 1893 he was returned to office by a heavy majority as the World's Fair mayor, and on October 28 of that year was killed by an assassin, the first of the two Chicago mayors to meet violent deaths.

The present Carter Harrison Sr., former publisher and editor of a newspaper, real estate operator and attorney, stepped into his father's political shoes. Four years after the assassination he was elected mayor. Like his father, he served four consecutive terms until 1905 and then was re-elected in 1911 for a four-year term.

When he went into retirement in order to care for his private interests he said he never expected to return to politics. They called the Harrison age "old-fashioned." His retirement came as Chicago was embarking upon a new civic life.

200 AUTO DRIVERS ARE HONORED HERE FOR CAREFULNESS

The list of "careful drivers" found in Atlanta passed the 200 mark Saturday with the addition of names to The Constitution's "Careful Drivers' Honor Roll." Again Saturday a staff member of the newspaper organization observed traffic and listed those who indicated an unusual willingness to observe all traffic regulations.

Those selecetd for the honor roll will receive guest invitations to Loew's Grand theater Monday morning. Again Monday a list of 10 more careful and courteous drivers will be compiled and guest tickets will be mailed to them.

The list of careful drivers selected Saturday included:

G. W. Robinson, 3727 Fifteenth avenue, S.; Georgia Power Company, B. B. Ivey, 995 North Highland avenue; R. B. Cook, 722 Myrtle avenue, N. E.; East Point Chevrolet Company, 308 North Main street, East Point, Ga.; Mrs. J. M. Smith, Fitzgerald, Ga.; V. W. Hodges, Clark University; William H. Beery, 634 Boulevard, S. E.; W. T. Winters, Stone Mountain, Ga.; Joseph Whitner, 694 Cooledge avenue, S. E.

VIRGINIA MAY USE ADVERTISING LAW ON NRA VIOLATORS

RICHMOND, Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Reinforcements for the claws of the blue eagle in Virginia in the shape of prosecutions under the state advertising law loomed as a possibility here today.

C. Victor Werne, counsel for the Virginia Better Trades Association, began investigating several reports of NRA agreement or code violations, with an eye to prosecution under the state advertising law and a similar, but stronger, Richmond city ordinance relating to false or misleading advertising.

After a series of conferences with John M. Miller Jr., chairman of the state NRA board, and his associates, Werne sent the following telegram to Donald R. Richberg, counsel for the NRA administration in Washington.

"Will prosecutions under state advertising law for false display of emblem sign interfere with administration policy?"

Under the state law misleading advertising is forbidden. In addition a Richmond city ordinance provides a fine of $100 for each day the misleading sign or advertisement is displayed.

EASTMAN OPENS STUDY OF MARKET PROBLEMS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Looking to the improvement in methods of handling and charging for freight service, Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, today began a nation-wide market survey of transportation.

A questionnaire was sent to approximately 100,000 shippers and receivers of less than carload, package and parcel freight handled by railroads, express agencies, trucking and forwarding companies.

This questionnaire, Eastman said, will be "a first step in a nation-wide market survey of transportation, and will be followed shortly by other questionnaires prepared by the section of transportation service and sent to the various classes of carriers."

GOVERNOR AUTHORIZES INDIANA BEER SALES

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Fortified by a favorable opinion from Attorney-General Philip Lutz Jr., Governor Paul V. McNutt today authorized the sale of draught beer in hotels, restaurants, dining cars and boat dining rooms.

The order becomes effective at 9 a. m., Tuesday, August 15.

Scouts May Aid in Hunt For Rabid Dog's Victim

LINCOLN, Neb., Aug. 12.—(AP) A house-to-house Boy Scout canvass may be launched here in the vicinity of the filling station where an unidentified boy was bitten a week ago by a dog with rabies.

A three-line want ad which brought to light an unknown woman who also had been bitten by the mad dog and newspaper pleas have failed to give any clue to the boy whom doctors fear may die if he cannot be found and Pasteur treatments administered.

Scout Executive B. B. Dawson last night issued a call to Scouts to watch for information about the overall-clad lad who exhibited teeth marks in his arm from the Fox Terrier puppy. Dawson was asked to consider organizing the Scouts to canvass a large district to find the boy whom no one seems to know.

AROUND LOCAL CONTRACT TABLES

MEMORIES OF ASBURY.

Hal Sims is a great host as well as a wonderful bridge player. He has the happy faculty of making his guests feel absolutely at home without the slightest hint that he is trying to entertain them. He invites you to his home, then lets you do what you want to do and instinctively you feel at home and enjoy the visit.

All Sorts of Systems.

How many systems did we run across while attending the championships? All sorts and varieties and sizes. One couple had a most complicated system that was something like this: Their original one club and one diamond bid was artificial, their opening spade bid was highly artificial and might mean anything, and their opening heart bid was sound. All their first-round responses were cue bids. By the time they got this far in the explanation I called it a day and told them I thought I understood it perfectly.

Who did the Atlanta players think were the best players they encountered? Well, opinion would likely vary. Mrs. Wagar would rate Sims at the top with Burnstine a close second. Many of the players attending the tournament, in fact probably the majority, would tell you that Baron Von Zedtwitz is the greatest card player in the country. Sims is a better judge of human nature than the studious baron, however, who is as near a machine as any player can become. Very careful, very analytical and with an uncanny knowledge of the play. He is certainly one of the real masters of the country.

Is duplicate popular in the east and is auction bridge dying? Yes to both questions. At Asbury and its suburbs there is a duplicate tournament every night. At the Sims home it is duplicate if there are as many as eight players. If they have this few it is team-of-four. If more they get up a snappy pair or individual tournament. Who wants to sit down and play rubber bridge when duplicate is at hand? In the long run I suppose the best player will win at either variety. But it is mighty hard to see some terrible, atrocious imitation of a bridge player sit down with real players and just because said atrocious player holds every king and ace in the deck, is the biggest winner at the close of the game.

Getting Back To Local Affairs.

Here is Billy Barrett in our town for the week-end. In another section of this paper you will see about the law partnership William has formed in Augusta. Word flows out of that city, backed up by the statement of the young barrister himself that he has retired from competitive bridge and will devote himself to serious business. Maybe it is the best thing for him and every iota of my moral nature tells me to congratulate Billy on his good resolutions. But my vagabond nature rebels at the announcement and I am prone to call out to him "Billy, say it ain't so." At any rate whether or not he has retired from bridge the law profession gets quite an edition even as the bridge world loses a splendid player and charming personality. Best of luck to you Billy and may you get many clients and may they be cash clients.

Another Beautiful Cup.

The Georgia Bridge Club, that home of delightful bridge and enjoyable tournaments, has started a 10-tournament series for one of the handsomest cups ever given in competition in a like tournament in the city. The conditions call for the winning pair at each tournament to receive five points and the rest in inverse order through the first five pairs to finish. At the conclusion of the series, the player having the highest total wins the handsome trophy.

All the talent in the city is out for the cup and the last tournament saw an almost record-breaking number on hand.

All who went to Mrs. Annie Adair Foster's tournament on last Wednesday evening voted it one of the best tournaments ever held in Atlanta. Mrs. W. D. Thompson ran it and she did such a swell job that I was afraid Mrs. Foster would fire me as her tournament director. Nice and cool out at Druid Hills Club where Miss Annie is holding her evening tournaments.

I regret to say that some sort of a record was set at the Cavendish Club Friday evening by Miss Peggy Porter and Ed Nix in the matter of scoring. A careful survey of the score card reveals that they got no less than eight zeroes and four ones. It was really a most distressing exhibition.

The following extract from the Augusta Chronicle will be read with interest by his many friends in Atlanta:

"Colonel William Dickey, internationally known bridget player and authority, is spending a few days with William K. Barrett here. Colonel Dickey plans to enter a bridge tournament following the completion of his visit."

'PHANTOM' SHIP SIGHTED AGAIN IN ARCTIC ICE

By E. Q. ANDERSON.

SEATTLE, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The battered hulk of the "ghost ship" Baychimo, for two years a plaything of the Arctic ice near Point Barrow again has been sighted by man.

Coast guard headquarters here received a message from the cutter Northland today saying it had found the fur trader about 10 miles off Wainwright apparently close to where the ice pack relentlessly closed on her in September, 1931.

"Jim Allen and natives are aboard her," the Northland wirelessed. "Captain Pedersen, of the Patterson, reported her sitting on a large pan of ice. We propose to run over to her, communicate with Allen, then proceed to Barrow, then return and ascertain more definitely the possibilities."

There was no mention as to how the sturdy steamship had withstood the grinding of the ice during the past two years, but mariners marveled that she existed.

Late in September two years ago word came that the Hudson Bay steamer was caught in the ice near Wainwright. An unusually short summer and early forming of ice trapped the Baychimo.

In October airplanes flown from Nome reached her and removed passengers, the crew and part of the $600,000 fur cargo. On Christmas Day a terrific storm burst. At noon the next day the Baychimo had vanished.

Some days later O. D. Morris, a trapper, heard that Eskimos had sighted the ship. With three natives he made his way 15 miles over the ice and brought back furs worth $35,000.

The vessel again disappeared. Early in February Pilot Frank Dorband made a 5,000-mile aerial survey around Barrow and Wainwright but never saw the ship.

That same month Pilot Bill Graham and Mrs. Edna Christofferson, Portland aviatrix, flew to Nome to search for the ship, believing they could salvage some valuable furs, although Captain Sydney Cornwall had said there was nothing left worth salvaging. They searched unsuccessfully.

Two months later Eskimos sighted the derelict. They went out to her. A wind arose, breaking up the ice and they were carried 30 miles out to sea. After four days on the ice pack they finally fought their way back to shore. The ship again disappeared.

LA. FACTION FIGHT RESUMED IN COURT

Long and Anti-Long Groups Seek Control in Bitter Quarrel.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Renewal of open warfare between the Huey Long and anti-Long political forces over last November's election will be started next week in New Orleans courts.

Since the exciting maneuvers of last week when troops were called out and martial law declared by the Long forces, each side has rested on its arms but in nowise under a flag of truce.

Under the surface ferment has raged but next week the battle will be fought in the open, with law books as weapons instead of bayonets and guns.

The issue has been drawn down to criminal action against election commissioners by the political camp opposed to Long's politics and to contempt proceedings against a New Orleans publisher and a grand juror brought by the Long faction.

Ballot Count Continues.

Counting of ballots on the constitutional amendments will be continued in open court next Tuesday by a citizens' committee and plans will be made for the prosecution of election commisioners charged with making false election returns.

But regardless of the outcome of the two court contests spokesmen for both sides agree that the results of the November election will not be changed. The election has been certified, the time limit for protest has expired and in some cases bonds have been issued and sold.

"The action is for prosecution of fraud and the purification of the polls and the election results will not be affected," said a leader of the anti-Long camp.

Fifteen amendments were adopted in the election, three of them being for the issuance of bonds. One of them authorized the city of Shreveport to refund into bonds an operating deficit or floating indebtedness of $950,000. John McW. Ford, finance commissioner of Shreveport, said $882,000 of the authorized $950,000 was sold to a Shreveport bank early this year.

Another amendment authorized the issuance of $5,000,000 of bonds to pay debts contracted by the state board of liquidation and the Louisiana State University. The full issue was sold to banks in the state, mostly in New Orleans. Of the total issue, approximately $800,000 went to the state university with the balance used to pay debts for which banks had advanced funds to the state board of liquidation for what the board said were "emergency expenditures," which anti-Long leaders denied.

Interest in Ferries Cool.

The third bond authorization was for an issue of $750,000 for the city of New Orleans to acquire the ferry systems in the Mississippi river within the city. This issue has not been made and A. Miles Pratt, commissioner of finance of New Orleans, said there were no plans for issuing the bonds and they may never be issued. He said the plan for the city to take over the ferries had cooled off.

Bond experts have told state officials that regardless of protests and the count of ballots, the bond issues were legal and could not be affected.

The first attack of the Long group in the renewal of hostilities will be efforts to have Leonard K. Nicholson, president of the New Orleans Times-Picayune Publishing Company, and James M. Colomb, a member of the last grand jury, convicted of contempt of court for publishing a statement by Mr. Colomb exposing operations of the grand jury, which he charged sought to return a "no true bill" in the election fraud charges without investigating the contents of the contested boxes. His charge started the general inquiry which resulted in the Long faction calling out troops, declaring martial law and having troops guard the grand jury. Their attack collapsed when the grand jury was discharged by a criminal court judge and the ballots were ordered counted by another criminal court judge.

The last thrust of the Long group was made against the publisher and the grand juror on the grounds that grand jury proceedings were secret under the law. Mr. Nicholson and Mr. Colomb have been ordered to appear in court on Thursday for a hearing on the charges.

The New Orleans States and the New Orleans Item also printed the Colomb statement but these publishers were not cited to the court.

Zora Fair's Famous Exploit For South's Cause Recalled

Editor's Note: The following article by Mrs. John R. Gunn on the famous exploit of Zora Fair, beautiful southern girl who spirited her way into General Sherman's headquarters here and was the first to learn of the plan to burn Atlanta and make the historic march to the sea, was inspired when Mrs. Gunn reread the story while looking up the answer to one of the questions in The Constitution's daily editorial page feature, "Day by Day in Georgia's History."

By MRS. JOHN R. GUNN.

A story of patriotic heroism is that of Zora Fair, a beautiful southern girl.

The dark clouds of the Civil War enveloped the south. People who could were refugeeing from war-danger zones to places of safety, usually to quiet, remote villages. The little village of Oxford, Ga., the seat of Emory University at that time and until removal to Atlanta in 1915, was considered an ideal place for refugees. People came from various sections of the south to this quiet town fleeing from their own war stricken communities.

To this pretty village with its cultural atmosphere, Abram Crews, a man of prominence from Charleston, S. C., brought his family. With them also his niece, Zora Fair, lovely, though frail, young girl. Mr. Crews had been appointed by the Confederate government to run the blockade to Europe. This was a dangerous commission, and before undertaking it, he decided to establish his family in Oxford where friends had preceded him.

Mr. Crews' niece, Zora Fair, possessed all the patriotic zeal of a genuine South Carolinian. Her courage was as strong as her patriotism. Mr. Lucian L. Knight in his history, "Georgia Landmarks, Memorials and Legends," compares her to that greatest of all women patriots—Joan of Arc. One great desire possessed Zora Fair's soul—the desire to help her beloved southland in its desperate struggle with the northern foes. But no opportunity came to her. There was nothing for a young and inexperienced girl to do. Months slipped by, and still the war continued, both the north and the south fighting desperately, each determined to win its respective cause.

Sherman's Seizure of City.

At last, in the summer of '64 after terrific fighting, Sherman captured Atlanta, and he, with his troops, occupied the city. After the Battle of Atlanta, the great number of wounded soldiers made it necessary to convert churches and college buildings into hospitals. Many of the wounded men were removed to Emory College at Oxford. Bullet-riddled soldiers who had fought valiantly under the command of General Hood were tenderly nursed by the splendid women of the town.

The strong desire to be of definite help in the southern cause now grew into a real determination with Zora Fair. In her patriotic mind, a plan of action was definitely formed. The dangers and difficulties of her plan she fully realized, but with the courage and daring of a veteran soldier, she prepared to execute the undertaking.

Her plan was this: She would disguise herself as a mulatto negro woman, get in behind the enemy's line in Atlanta and if possible obtain information that would be valuable to the Confederate cause.

One night, after her uncle's family had gone to bed, she started on her big adventure. She cut off her brown hair, stained her face, neck and arms with dark, walnut juice, tied a bandana handkerchief around her head and donned a voluminous costume similar in style and color to that worn by negro women. Her disguise was complete.

Silently and unafraid, this brave girl set out on the 40-mile trip to Sherman's headquarters in Atlanta. Upon reaching the Yellow river she found the bridge had been burned by the enemy. A less courageous person would have faltered and turned back, but not Zora Fair. A little above the bridge she saw a mill dam and decided to walk across it. Upon investigation, however, she found it had been partially destroyed and was unsafe. Realizing the danger, but with characteristic bravery, she determined to attempt the crossing. Before doing so, however, she knelt in prayer asking the guidance of the Divine Hand to direct her safely across. The perilous trip was made in safety, even though in some places she had to crawl on hands and knees. Mrs. Howard M. Lovett, of Augusta, in her story of this admirable girl, states that she did not forget to kneel and return thanks when she was safely across the dam. Along the dusty, country roads, farmers, believing her to be a tired negro woman, gave her lifts from time to time in their wagons. After many hours of travel, footsore and weary, she at length reached the picket lines of the enemy near Atlanta. In perfect negro dialect she addressed the guards, "My ole man has done left home to run away with Marse Sherman an' please, suh, let me go behind de lines and try t' find him." Thinking her to be just a simple, harmless creature, the guards allowed her to pass without questioning.

Persistence Wins Out.

General Sherman occupied the Leydon home on Peachtree street, an old mansion familiar to Atlantans for many years after the war. When Zora Fair appeared there with her tale of woe regarding her runaway mate, the officer curtly informed her that General Sherman had no time to see her and she must be on her way. But she had not tramped most of the way from Oxford to be so summarily dismissed by a blue-coated officer. Resorting again to negro dialect she begged permission "jes' to wait in de corner somewheres 'til Marse Sherman had time to see her."

Again her persistence won out and she was permitted to wait in "de corner." "De corner" in which she waited happened to be in a room adjoining one in which General Sherman and his officers were discussing military plans, certainly not intended for rebel ears. She heard the detailed plans for the burning of Atlanta and the famous march to the sea.

The "mulatto negress" finally grew tired of waiting and told the guards she would "go now, and come back when Marse Sherman had mo' time." Having accomplished her mission, she was impatient to get away.

Upon reaching the picket line at nightfall, she found getting out was more difficult than getting in. For some reason, the guard became suspicious and commanded her to halt. But Zora Fair had no idea of halting and darted past, disregarding the command. Another sharp command to halt was also disobeyed. This was followed by a rifle shot from the guard. Deciding that "discretion was the better part of valor" at this particular time, the "mulatto woman" promptly fell to the ground as if shot. The high weeds and friendly darkness protected her as she cautiously crept into the blackness of night—and to safety. The guard who had fired the shot did not look further for her, thinking perhaps, that an injured negro woman was of little consequence.

Anxious to report her information to Confederate authorities, she made all possible haste to get back home. Alarmed and mystified over her strange disappearance, her family was overjoyed at her safe return.

If Zora Fair had been more cautious with the important information she had gained at such peril, historians might have written a different ending to the Civil War. But in her haste to get her story to General Joseph E. Johnston, stationed at Lincolnton, N. C., she impulsively wrote all she knew concerning Sherman's plans, signing her name to the letter. The letter never reached General Johnston, but fell into the hands of the enemy.

Of course, her capture as a spy was sought by the Federals. Officers were sent to Oxford and made every effort to find the woman spy. But to no avail, for Zora Fair's friends had spirited her away to a place of safety where she remained until all danger was passed.

The south is justly proud of her women of the Civil War period. But for genuine courage and patriotic devotion, it is doubtful whether there is another who excels this youthful patriot, Zora Fair.

ROME ROARS MIGHTY 'VIVA' FOR BALBO

Over Seas

By BYRON DARNTON,
Associated Press Cable Editor.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—At the turn of the century, when gentlewomen affected the hourglass figure which only this year has been returned by the cycle of fashion, the United States fought a war that cost $200,000,000, produced a smelly scandal in the matter of army supplies, and laid the groundwork for our activity in the Cuban crisis in the last few days.

Losing a hundred dead on the field of battle, and 5,000 from sickness in our army camps, we freed the Cubans from Spain. The ensuing diplomatic negotiations resulted in the Platt amendment, the shadow of which has been over Havana since President Franklin D. Roosevelt sent Sumner Welles there a few months ago as his ambassador.

The Washington government repeatedly let it be known that it had no plans for intervention, but dispatches from Cuba show clearly that armed action by the powerful republic to the north is what many Cubans have been thinking about.

To Pacify Cuba.

The announced purpose of the United States in the Spanish-American War was to pacify strife-torn Cuba and set her free. When the war was over and the late General Leonard Wood was serving as military governor, a constitutional convention met in Havana. Its purpose was to provide the island with a government and pave the way for the withdrawal of the American military. Also, it was to set forth its opinion of the relationship which should exist between Cuba and United States.

Once the Cubans had expressed themselves on that point, General Wood said, the United States would "doubtless take such action on its part as shall lead to a final and authoritative agreement between the people of both countries, to the promotion of their common interests."

The final form of that action by the United States—which was taken before the Cuban had expressed themselves—was the Platt amendment, deriving its name from Senator Platt, of Connecticut, who presented it, for parliamentary reasons, as an amendment to the military appropriations bill for 1901-1902.

Permanent Treaty.

In due course the amendment was tacked on to the Cuban constitution and was inculcated in a permanent treaty between Cuba and the United States. Economic and strategical military considerations in the main dictated the American policy established in the measure, the principal provision of which is:

"The government of Cuba consents that the United States may exercise the right to intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence, the maintenance of a government adequate for the protection of life, property, and individual liberty, and for discharging the obligations with respect to Cuba imposed by the treaty of Paris on the United States, now to be assumed by the government of Cuba."

America immediately informed Cuba that the right of intervention thus set up was "not synonymous with intermeddling." And a few days ago, when President Machado's liberal party took its first stand against the pacification program calling for Machado's retirement, it was held that the United States was in truth "intermeddling."

Four years and four months after the government of Cuba was established—on a constitution of which the Platt amendment was a part—the United States, acting at the insistent request of the president of Cuba, intervened to end insurrection.

Germany Resents Rebuke in Austrian Affair

A warning to France and England that no interference will be tolerated has been issued by Chancellor Adolf Hitler following a rebuke from the French foreign office to Hitlerites who have been "bombarding" Austria from the air with pamphlets attacking Chancellor Englebert Dolfuss and radio broadcasts from Bavaria. France and England contend that the nazi actions are a violation of the Versailles treaty. At left, Chancellor Hitler; right, Chancellor Dolfuss.

FERRARA ARRIVES IN U. S. FOR ASYLUM

Machado's Secretary of War and State Barely Escapes Machine Gun.

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Orestes Ferrara, secretary of state of the fallen Machado government, flew here late today from Havana. He was fired upon when he left his native capital, and booed when he arrived here.

He left tonight for New York.

The former secretary said Machado had not been deserted by the Cuban army, but that officers, learning he would resign, took matters into their own hands.

"I leave criticism of Welles' policy to history," Ferrara said.

The Cuban and his wife escaped Cuba in a shower of bullets. Their plane was hit several times. A mob seized their baggage as they prepared to leave. A machine gun spat bullets about them. Their pilot—an American—shoved the couple into the ship and took off "like a shot."

When they arrived here a crowd of Cubans hissed Ferrara. One man challenged him to a duel. The Cuban stepped forward quickly to answer the insult, but police interferred. Ferrara has fought 11 duels.

Ferrara revealed that the bullets were fired from machine guns just before the plane made a hasty take-off in Havana. He said he believed the bullets came from persons who thought the plane was bearing away President Machado.

The former secretary told a harrowing story of riot and danger which he encountered in procuring and delivering the papers making the change of government today.

"This morning I visited the palace," said Ferrara, "arranging the necessary papers for the change of government. I noticed that a state of intense fear gripped the employes and servants.

"When the news became known that the president had abdicated, the servants quit their work and ran madly about the palace, smashing furniture and other movable goods.

"I was standing talking with an undersecretary in the entrance of a hallway. A servant opened the front door. Immediately there were shots from the streets, a bullet striking the servant in the chest, killing him."

Other bullets hit around Ferrara and the undersecretary but neither was harmed.

From the palace, Ferrara said he drove through the streets bringing the papers of change in government to Ambassador Welles. The latter at that time offered Ferrara an asylum in the United States, he said, as did the Spanish ambassador in Spain, and representatives of other countries.

Ferrara then went home and to the house of an unnamed friend for luncheon.

"About 2 p. m.," he said, "it was getting hot. Mobs were howling in the streets outside."

Realizing that the mob spirit would increase and determined to show no fear, Ferrara said he and his wife drove in an open car along the main streets of Havana to the Pan-American airport.

As they drove along, some persons cheered, others booed, and shouted threats.

While Ferrara and his wife were examining their baggage, alongside the plane at the docks, a mob ran up, shouting and cursing. Members of the mob seized the baggage, ripped it open, tore up clothing and scattered the contents.

A machine gun sounded. Bullets went overhead, some striking the wings of the plane.

Les Terletsky, Pan-American pilot, shoved Ferrara and his wife into the plane and took off "like a shot." Ferrara credited Terletsky with saving their lives.

Ferrara declared Machado had not been destroyed by the Cuban army, but that officers, learning that he would resign took matters into their own hands.

"I leave criticism of Welles' policy to history," commented the former state secretary.

FRENZIED CUBANS SLAY AND BURN IN CELEBRATION

building that would burn, and the blaze died out. Debris was left in the streets to a depth of eight feet in some places.

The thoroughfares were filled with so much noise and confusion that it was difficult for one to make his way about the city.

Big groups and little groups paraded through the streets, carrying flags and palm leaves, yelling and cheering to the accompaniment of guns fired into the air. The din was terrific.

Only a heavy downfall of rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, put a temporary damper on the temper of the mob. The crowds quickly sought shelter of buildings, and the tension was over.

There was no denying that the excited demonstrators, surging with patriotic emotion, were out to get the blood of those who had shown sympathy to the Machado government.

Fire trucks, ambulances, cars filled with police and soldiers and even private automobiles raced madly through the streets in a bedlam of noise augmented by pistol and rifle shots fired into the air.

Havana had gone wild with excitement and disorders were rampant.

Signs reading "for rent" were pasted on doors and windows of the palace, while thunderous applause filled the air.

One picture, that of Carlos Mendieta, leader of the national party, was taken from the walls, held high in the air by the marchers and paraded through the streets.

In the wild enthusiasm of the demonstration pistols were fired into the air, people were knocked down by each other in the rush and sticks and clubs were wielded freely as the mob beat against the building and upon the wreckage demonstrating its rage.

From the Heraldo de Cuba the marchers hastened to the homes of Octavio Zubizarreta, retiring secretary of interior, and of Jose Izquierdo, chief of the Havana central district, and ransacked them.

Then the marchers moved to other parts of the city shouting and waving their arms and improvised weapons. Shots rang through the narrow streets from time to time, but whether they were fired in celebration or in fighting could not immediately be discovered.

Automobiles filled with cheering demonstrators raced madly through the city, blowing horns and sirens, beating on tin pans and waving flags of the Cuban republic.

The mob moved on to the building of the Official Gazette, at which were published the decrees and orders of the Machado government and sacked and looted it as they had the Heraldo de Cuba.

Labor Conditions Scored In Eastern Leaf Areas

HARTFORD, Conn., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Immediate improvement on sanitary conditions in tobacco plantation boarding houses in Connecticut was urged today by representatives of the Massachusetts and Connecticut departments of labor.

Basing their findings on a two-day tour of plantations in Massachusetts and Connecticut, the labor officials said they found several boarding houses in Connecticut that were "utterly filthy, unsanitary and unfit for human habitation."

The inspection group said it was "amazed that such disgraceful conditions, so dangerous both to health and morals, could be tolerated either by the growers or the general public."

SUNDAY FUNERAL BAN HIT, PRAISED

such similar movement here 20 years ago, when they tried to enact a city ordinance prohibiting funerals on Sunday. My recollection is that it blew up. This kind of a regulation won't last."

Greet Plan As "Good Thing."

On the other side of the question were the opinions of Dr. Ellis A. Fuller, pastor of the First Baptist church of Atlanta; Sam R. Greenberg, Ed Bond and Carlos Hemperley, undertakers, who greeted the plan as "a good thing," although they qualified acceptance of it by stating that "it may work a hardship on some persons who can't get off from work on a week day to attend a funeral."

Dr. Fuller, while pointing out that "it really makes no difference to me as I am ready to go on if it is best for the people," said that the ban probably will work relief from hardship for those who work at funerals, and that "there is no real necessity for Sunday funerals, nor any urgency for any particular day under modern conditions." Dr. Fuller said that he does not believe a minister can do his best work in the pulpit of a Sunday night if he is worn out by funeral services during the afternoon.

"Civilization is too large and too complex, with relatives and friends living far apart, to postpone funerals a whole extra day in many cases," said Dr. Dodge. "It is the preacher's business to respond whenever he is called upon, and, in a case of death all else is secondary.

"Will Work Hardship."

"It is unfortunate that such a regulation should have been adopted. It undoubtedly will work a hardship on the underdog and on people in moderate circumstances. It will prevent many persons from attending funerals of their friends and loved ones, unless they are willing to give up a day's work which they can ill afford to lose in these times."

"Then," said Dr. Dodge, "there are the nerves and feelings of the relatives and friends to consider. Carrying over a funeral for another day frequently causes prolongation of the suffering. Whenever people are affected by the death of one near them they generally want to hold the funeral as soon as possible, and it is the mission of a preacher to serve when he is called on. Frequently persons die on a Saturday, and it is the desire of the family for a Sunday funeral. We have no control over death."

No Burden To Minister.

Dr. Turner said that "funerals are never a burden to a minister on Sunday."

"No doubt some ministers do have a large number of Sunday funerals," Dr. Turner said. "But I have never heard any complaint of that in our ministerial meetings. The tendency of funerals now is toward simplicity, and I cannot see where any minister would be overworked. In my case, for instance, I had two funerals on a recent Sunday, the most I have had in six months. I imagine that funerals will go on on Sundays just the same."

Mr. Poole said that "such a regulation will not help the undertakers, because we have to stay open on Sunday just the same, what with ambulance service and answering calls in cases of death. The banning of Sunday funerals will work a hardship on the poor, because Sunday is the only day many persons can attend funerals. I understand that a similar plan has been tried out in some middle-sized cities where there are only a few undertakers, but I do not believe such a plan will last here.

Howard L. Carmichael, East Point undertaker, said that he does not believe that the Sunday funeral prohibition will stand. "I cannot see where it will meet the approval of everybody," he said, "and I believe that there probably will be general resentment of it. So far as I can see, there is no way the cemeteries can keep people from burying their dead on any day they choose, so long as the families own lots in the cemeteries and there is no state law against it. I believe that the cemeteries would have to open up on demand by lot owners. Sunday funerals do not work any terrible hardship on anyone, and families should have every sort of co-operation in their hour of distress, rather than have their choice of a funeral day denied to them."

"I do not believe that undertakers, as a general rule, mind the work attached to Sunday funerals," said A. S. Turner, Decatur funeral director. "I do not believe that a prohibition of Sunday funerals could last very long, as it is not treating the working man fairly.

"I am fairly certain that it would not stand up at all in the country. Most country people and a large number of city residents prefer Sunday funerals, because the day enables relatives and friends to attend without hardship. The funeral is a very delicate matter, and I believe that the wishes of the family should be given every consideration.

"If I bought a lot in a cemetery and had to bury someone dear to me, I would certainly feel that I would have the right to name any day which best suited me. Such a ban on Sunday funerals may be a good thing for some of those who have work to do in connection with funerals, but on the whole I favor the Sunday funeral."

Greenberg Takes Divergent View.

Sam R. Greenberg, Atlanta undertaker, took a divergent view, expressing belief that "it is a wonderful thing for the preachers and cemetery men, who are frequently overworked with all-day Sunday activities calling for seven, eight or ten funerals. It also is a fine thing for the florists and the taxi drivers and others necessary to conducting a funeral, giving them at least one day of rest. And then, today people don't hold big funerals like they used to."

Ed Bond, of Brandon, Bond & Condon, undertakers, said that "a number of big cities in the east and west adopted the no-Sunday funeral plan years ago, and the ministers have wanted Atlanta to adopt the plan for a long time.

"We will go-operate with the cemeteries in their plan. The only hardship it could work would be on those who can't get off on a week day to attend funerals, possibly causing some to lose a day's work."

Carlos Hemperley, East Point undertaker, said that the laboring class will be under a hardship in the no-Sunday funeral plan, but he expressed belief that the regulation "will help more than it will hurt." Hemperley said that he favors such a plan, "which is the law in some states."

Under the cemetery association's resolutions, the only exception to the rule will be where officials of the board of health request a Sunday burial. Cemeteries adopting the resolutions were West View, Greenwood, Crest Lawn, Crown Hill, Hollywood and Magnolia, and the Georgia Cemetery and Mausoleum Company.

The resolutions are as follows:

Whereas, the custom which has grown up in Atlanta of having burials on Sunday is an unnecessary custom in that it would work no hardship on anyone to confine funerals to the six working days of each week, and

Whereas, said custom of Sunday funerals is unfair to the ministers of the city whose regular church services must necessarily come on Sundays, thus making it an unfair hardship on them to attend funerals on the same day, and

Whereas, such Sunday funerals also work an unfair hardship on the employes of cemetery companies, morticians and florists, who by reason of said custom, very rarely have an opportunity to have Sunday as a day of rest and religious worship,

Now, therefore, be it agreed by the undersigned that in the interest of the ministers and the classes of employes above referred to that we each of us agree not to arrange for or permit burials in our cemeteries on Sunday except in special cases where requested by the board of health.

COAL CODE TANGLE BALKS NRA CHIEFS

Private Efforts Will Be Substituted for Public Hearings on 30 Plans.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—A private effort to bring the manifold factions of the bituminous coal industry together on a code of competition was started today by the national recovery administration after public hearings on the antagonistic demands had ended.

Dispute continued as testimony was terminated after four days of strife between different interests of the industry. The work of drawing up a proposed code promptly was taken over by NRA—admittedly one of the toughest jobs it has assumed during its brief but dynamic career.

"This is the first time we have had more than two codes for a single industry up for public hearings," said Kenneth M. Simpson, the deputy administrator who presided at the hearings. "This indicates the great complexity of the problem before us."

A study of the voluminous testimony will be made by the recovery administration and the various groups of operators will be asked to appear here on August 22 for a general conference.

In the meantime, they were requested to be available for emergency calls to Washington in the event they were needed singly or in groups in the administration's effort to work out a satisfactory code.

Approximately 30 proposed codes have been submitted, some differing sharply, some almost identical, some designed to apply to the industry throughout the country and some to apply only to regions or branches of the soft coal business.

HAPSBURG 'SCARE' FAILS TO AFFECT AUSTRIAN CAPITAL

Restoration Talk Is Overshadowed by Dollfuss Government's Fight Against Nazis.

VIENNA, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Restoration of the Hapsburgs is widely and persistently reported to be just around the corner—except in this city, where they reigned for more than six centuries.

Here it is difficult to find anyone in a position of power or influence who will concede that a return of the monarchy is more than a distant possibility.

"I am a monarchist," said one government official, "because I don't believe you can build an enduring republican regime on the foundation of a thousand years of monarchic tradition.

"But I am realist enough to know also that the question of restoring the monarchy is the last thing we should venture to discuss at this time. We have too much on our hands already.

"First build your house; then decide what color you are going to paint it."

Otto Out of Headlines.

Others in high position who are not monarchists are even less inclined to take the restoration question seriously.

Even the boulevard press, which in postwar years has regularly used the scareline "Otto in Austria" or "Zita in Austria" whenever news was dull, has been so busy with Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss' campaign against the nazis that for weeks on end neither Otto nor his mother has figured in the Vienna newspapers.

In Hungary the legitimists are more active. There is an outspoken demand for return of the Hapsburgs.

But the opposition of the government under Premier Julius Goemboes is no less outspoken. Repeatedly the premier has emphasized that no faction will be allowed to jeopardize solution of the Danubian question "which is complicated enough as it is," by injecting into it at this stage the question of the dynasty.

Horthy's Power Increased.

By way of emphasis the government has extended the powers of the regent, Admiral Nicholas Horthy. Particularly it has given him the right to suspend parliament.

The regent and the premier both played vital roles in frustration of the late Emperor Karl's last attempt to regain the throne of Hungary.

A further emphasis is seen in Goemboes' recent statement that "the government sees in the person of the regent a stable national political factor—a view diametrically opposed to the one-sided attitude that the regency is merely a temporary affair."

Zita's Brother Active.

Nevertheless every visit of Prince Sixtus, of Parma, brother of the ex-Empress Zita, to Vienna or Budapest or Belgrade, revives reports that something like a restoration is afoot.

When Sixtus was in Belgrade last month it was reported that he came as confidential agent of France to persuade King Alexander, of Jugo-Slavia to accept a solution of the Croatian problem which would permit restoration of the Hapsburgs in an Austro-Hungarian-Croatian empire with the 20-year-old Archduke Otto on the throne.

Belgrade Decries Reports.

The Belgrade government denounced this report as "a tendencious attempt to present the Croatian question as a subject of French interference in Jugoslav internal policy."

The Jugoslav government denied that Sixtus' visit was of either official or political character and called attention to a declaration in which the Little Entente viewed restoration plans as "a direct attack on the peace treaties."

Lindberghs Discover Greenland Mountain

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Reports reaching here tonight said Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh reached Angmagsalik, Greenland, this evening, after a flight from Juliannehaab, Greenland.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, on an aerial survey of the north Atlantic, have reported existence of an unrecorded mountain and an unexplored 100-mile fjord in Greenland.

The mountain, reported to be higher than any other known peak on the island, was sighted on the eastern coast.

Ice conditions always have prevented exploration of the fjord, it was believed. The Lindberghs left their course to follow the waterway, located between Scoresbuy Sun and Angmagsalik.

Bartenders Define Barflies in Code

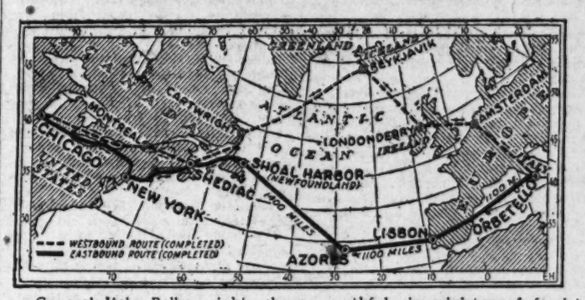

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—"Barflies," who have been called all sorts of names off the records, were precisely defined in a bartender's code prepared today by a group of beer tavern proprietors.

They are, the code said, those "who do not purchase or pay for their purchase at any time, but merely beg, mooch or panhandle from other customers or consumers."

The code put squarely up to the bartenders the delicate task of deciding when a person has had plenty.

Italy Hails Air Hero

DISORDERS FEARED IN IRELAND TODAY

De Valera's Banning of 'Blue Shirt' Parade May Bring Trouble in Dublin

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Forbidden by President De Valera to parade his uniformed national guard in a memorial observance tomorrow, General Owen O'Duffy, leader of the recently formed "blue shirt" military body, canceled orders for the march and announced tonight that he and his followers would boycott the ceremonies.

Banning of the parade clarified the troubled political situation in the Free State but did not entirely allay anxieties that disorderly incidents may occur tomorrow as a result of the conflict between the De Valera government and the opposition chiefs.

William T. Cosgrave, former president of the executive council, and a severe critic of the De Valera regime, joined General O'Duffy in denouncing the government's attitude and in deciding to abstain from tomorrow's ceremonies which are to honor the memories of Arthur Griffith, Michael Collins and Kevin O'Higgins, deceased "strong men" of the state's early days.

The program calls for a gathering at the cenotaph in Leinster Lawn to pay tribute to the famous dead.

Under new arrangements by the government only about 100 persons will be permitted to enter Leinster Lawn tomorrow and these will be relatives of the dead leaders and a limited number of members of the dail eireann.

U. S. Chickens Entered In World Competition

ROME, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The ancient market of Trajan, one of Rome's scenic highlights, will become a poultryman's paradise September 6 to 15, 1933, with the opening of the fifth world congress of poultry farming.

The congress will be held under the patronage of King Victor Emmanuel and is expected to bring together more than 1,500 delegates from more than 20 states and nations.

The outstanding feature of the congress will be the poultry show which officials say will be the most complete of its kind ever held. In it live fowls will vie with machine exhibits and detailed illustrations of all problems connected with the breeding, feeding, hygiene, organization and marketing of chickens. The United States has officially promised to send delegates and exhibits to the congress.

BERLIN NAZIS HUNT FOR RED PROPAGANDA

BERLIN, Aug. 12.—(UP)—Secret police and storm troopers today searched all automobiles, motorcycles, bicyclists, and milk and vegetable carts entering or leaving Berlin, for possible communist material.

Widespread raids were conducted in Baden, and numerous arrests and confiscation of forbidden propaganda, arms and explosives were reported.

ALL-YEAR SERVICE IS SEEN FOR GRAF

Completion of Base at Rio and Additional Zeppelin in Prospect.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Agreement between Dr. Hugo Eckener, of the Zeppelin Company, and the Brazilian government for construction of a dirigible base in Rio De Janeiro, has brought year-around ocean Zeppelin service nearer and spurred Rio's ambition to become the air capital of South America.

Although urging a change in minor details of the Zeppelin proposals, the federal treasury has agreed to supply a credit of 12,000 contos (about $900,000) for construction of hangars and gas tanks. The ministry of communications will build roads to the base and install a lighting system.

On its own initiative, the government has started work on a large central airport for land and seaplanes in preparation for the trans-ocean air mail service of the German Luft Hansa and the French Aero-Postale Company, which probably will start in 1934. The present Aero-Postal service uses fast boats for the ocean crossing.

As far as year-round Zeppelin service is concerned, Dr. Eckener explained that its initiation is dependent upon completion of the Rio De Janeiro base. The present nine-trip service between Friedrichshafen, Germany, and Rio is limited to the European summer.

Once the Rio base is built, the Zeppelin company will start its all-year service with two dirigibles, using this city as the principal base during December, January and February, when the weather is bad in central Europe. In these months, the dirigibles would travel between Rio De Janeiro and Seville, Spain, leaving out the trip to Friedrichshafen.

Dr. Eckener said that the new Zeppelin service will take 80 hours from Friedrichshafen to Rio and 95 hours from Rio to Friedrichshafen.

Moroccan Rebels Stand-Off French

MORROCO, Aug. 12.—(UP)—In a broiling heat that runs as high as 140 degrees at noontimes, 5,000 Berber tribesmen, poorly equipped but fighting with such stubborn resistance that their enemies applaud their courage, today stood off a French foreign legion assault on their fastnesses.

The Berbers, armed with rifles and furnished only with a few rounds of ammunition, kept in the pockets of their cloaks, have suffered enormous losses. In turn they have inflicted heavy casualties on one column of the French colonial troops now attempting to scale the rugged, bare peaks of the Atlas mountains, where the Berbers are entrenched.

The French high command tonight reported that 42 French and friendly Moorish allies were killed, and 55 severely wounded on the single day of August 6. Two French fighting planes, flying over the scene of operations, were brought down with a loss of two pilots and two machine gunners.

12,200-MILE TRIP OF AIR FLEET ENDS AMID CELEBRATION

Young Commander of Intrepid Fliers Made Air Marshal as Ancient Capital Stages Greatest Show.

ROME, Aug. 12.—(UP)—Racing in from the Mediterranean, General Italo Balbo's mighty air fleet returned from America tonight to a thunder and tumult of welcome such as Romans never before had given conquering heroes in the history of this ancient capital.

The swift armada, which twice conquering the perils of the Atlantic ocean in the greatest mass flight ever attempted, came in from Lisbon to land on the river Tiber at Carlo Del Prete airport, Ostia, outside Rome, at 6:35 p. m. (1:35 p. m., E. D. T.)

General Balbo tonight was promoted to the post of air marshal, a position recently created by the government, in recognition of his leadership of the flight.

Nearly every one of the officers of the Balbo squadron was given a promotion of one grade, while several were advanced more than one rank.

Lieutenant Colonel Ulissee Longo was promoted to a colonelcy and General Pellegrini received the gold medal for aeronautical valor.

100,000 Roar Acclaim.

Approximately 100,000 persons roared acclaim as General Balbo's leading triad dipped over the Lido di Roma and then sent a flurry of spray flying from the water as, in perfect formation, they landed at the end of a 12,200-mile voyage.

Premier Benito Mussolini, standing stiffly at attention, threw up his right arm in the fascist salute to the black-bearded air minister who had led the flight to Chicago and return. General Balbo returned the salute.

Then, while royalty, diplomats, cabinet members and many thousand of cheering spectators looked on, the fascist premier warmly embraced the general and congratulated him on the success of his daring venture.

The pride of fascist Italy in the epochal journey of the air fleet captured all of Rome—and the nation—which strove to outdo Chicago and New York in heaping honor and cheers upon the fliers.

Black Shirts.

Every cabinet minister wore a fascist black shirt as they waited in the premier's box for the fleet to land. Also at the field were Signora Balbo and her three children; Crown Prince Humbert, the crown princess, the Princess of Piedmont, the Duke of Aosta, the Dowager Duchess of Aosta, United States Ambassador Breckenridge Long, who was in the premier's box, and scores of other dignitaries.

The end of the flight found Balbo with 23 of the 25 planes which set out from Rome to visit a Century of Progress in Chicago. Two had been wrecked—at Amsterdam and in the Azores—with the loss of two lives out of 100 men originally on the trip.

The fleet had been 43 days en route, covering 12,200 miles.

It had crossed the Alps to Holland, thence to Ireland and then by stages across the north Atlantic to Canada, and thence to Chicago. Returning, it had flown east to New York and thence northward to Newfoundland, where weather conditions prompted General Balbo to take the southern course via the Azores Islands and Lisbon, Portugal, which was left at 6:10 a. m. (2:10 a. m., E. D. T.) today. The last stage of the flight via Gibraltar and Mallorca, was 1,500 miles to the river Tiber. It required 12 hours and 35 minutes.

Perfect Formation.

As it had departed from Lake Orbetello on July 1, the fleet came home in perfect formation, circling over the mouth of the Tiber while Mussolini watched closely from his box.

General Balbo emerged from the cockpit of his craft as it reached the landing stage. He walked immediately toward the premier. Behind him followed his pilots, all of whom were congratulated by the premier.

Sirens and whistles raised a terrific noise as the planes arrived. Cannons roared in salute and the whole city joined in the wild welcome.

Japan Accuses U. S. Of Fortifying Manila

OSAKA, Japan, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Shanghai correspondent of the Mainichi Shimbun sent a dispatch today saying that the United States was secretly strengthening the Manila naval base in contravention to the Washington treaty.

The dispatch was printed under a sensational headline. It asserted that all of the labor on the naval base was being done by life-term convicts brought from America, and it gave as its authority for the information one of these convicts who had escaped.

The work at the naval base, the correspondent said, would result in greatly strengthening it.

Various Japanese newspapers have alleged recently that the United States is violating its commitments by increasing its naval facilities in the Pacific. These stories have been met with denials in Washington.

MEXICO DENIES U. S. TO OPEN NAVAL BASE

MEXICO, D. F., Aug. 12.—(AP)—The foreign office today flatly denied that there was any negotiation between Mexico and the United States for establishment of an American naval base at Magdalena bay, lower California, as suggested in recent dispatches from Japan.

A statement signed by Foreign Minister Puig said:

"The press for the past two days carried rumors said to have originated from Japanese sources in Tokyo to the effect that there were supposed to be negotiations between the governments of the United States and Mexico for establishment of a naval station in Magdalena bay.

"These newspaper stories are wholly without foundation in fact."

Japanese War Department Plans To Train 6,000 Officers Each Year

TOKYO Aug. 12.—(UP)—The Japanese war office will carry out a new system of recruiting reserve military cadets in 1933. It expects to train 6,000 reserve and non-commissioned officers a year under the system. The new system has been introduced primarily for filling the growing need for trained officers, acutely felt in the recent campaigns.

Briefly, 6,000 young men will be singled out from recurits. They will receive special training for three months under a committee of officers.

At the end of three months they will be divided into A and B classes, depending on their respective showings. Those classed as A, of whom there will be 3,500, will be qualified as reserve officers upon receiving their discharge.

Those designated as A class will be appointed to the rank of superior private, and will be promoted two months later to corporal, and in another two months will again be promoted to sergeant. Those designated as B class, of whom there will be 2,500, will be appointed superior privates, in which rank they will remain until discharged.

The new system is elastic. Even those who are promoted to the rank of sergeant may be demoted to B class the moment they are found not up to par, or those who are designated as reserve military cadets may be dropped to the ranks of ordinary recruits.

Compromise Settles Long Litigation Centered on Lock of Napoleon's Hair

PARIS, Aug. 12.—(UP)—After seven years of court battles, a lock of Napoleon the First's hair finally has been awarded to the National Museum at Bologne.

Mlle. Ada Scavini, wealthy resident of Bologne, bequeathed to the Society for the Protection of Animals all her possessions with the exception of a little casket in which reposed the treasured lock and which she bequeathed to the same society in Turin. There was one condition, and that was that the Turin society should feed all of the dogs that came into the town daily. This was a greater undertaking than the society could stand, and it finally was decided that Napoleon's lock must be sacrificed.

The society at Bologne came to the front and claimed possession on the grounds that all of the other goods of Mlle. Scavini had been left to them. Then the parents of Mlle. Scavini appeared with lawyers to object, maintaining that this part of their daughter's will could not be considered as a part of the legacy left to the Bologne society.

Then the seven-year struggle began, fought out alternately before the tribunals at Bologne and Turin, while the object of the fighting reposed in a metal box in the safety deposit vaults of a Bologne bank.

The court has finally decided to award the wisp of hair to the Bologne Zoological Society.

POLITICS IN OUSTER CHARGED BY PERRY

Governor Knows Nothing About Rates,. Suspended Chairman Says.

Governor Talmadge knows nothing about rates and cares less, James A. Perry, suspended chairman of the Georgia public service commission, said Saturday in a formal statement renewing his attack upon the governor for suspending him and his fellow commissioners.

Mr. Perry charged that the governor was actuated solely by political motives and not by a desire to serve the people.

The governor also was attacked for getting the new commission appointees from outside the state to important positions in the rate department.

Mr. Perry's statement follows:

To the Public: With no purpose in mind, other than to discharge what I conceive to be a duty, to those who elected me to office I beg space for a fair presentation of some of the facts showing the great damage of martial law in command of a wholly politically-minded governor, in matters pertaining to rate regulation in Georgia. For some several years Governor Talmadge has been making political statements about railroad rates in such manner as, apparently, he felt would most impress an unsuspecting public. He knows nothing about the subject, cares less, but in this instance, as characterises his every action, he approaches it from a political viewpoint.

While he was commissioner of agriculture, rates on live stock in Georgia came to be a very important subject. A hearing on the same subject involving rates in Alabama was had. He attended this hearing, but finding that his utterances would not be taken seriously, he announced that he would meet the same tribunal on the same subject in Atlanta. In due course such a hearing was held in Atlanta, but without any assistance whatsoever from Governor Talmadge. Since the Atlanta hearing several similar investigations have been held, but without the suggestion of help from our governor. The Georgia commission fought this case and, for eight years, kept rates in force of special advantage to the Georgia producers of live stock, but with no help from the governor, who now proposes to direct rate regulation in Georgia.

The governor now has, in the beginning, under martial law, a rate regulatory board of his own choosing and he has told the world that if they don't do what he thinks ought to be done they, too, will be discharged. If only a personnel of this commission can exist, such as will do the bidding of Governor Talmadge, then why have such a commission. It is very expensive, and if it is to serve no purpose other than the governor's direction, why not save this expense. If he is to direct the judgment of the commission it is easily inferred that he has directed the selection of the personnel of the rate department. We learn one comes from Texas, another from Ohio or the Carolinas. Just why he went so far from home with efficient men right at his elbow, native Georgians, is a question of much concern to a large number of unemployed people.

The governor's chief topic when out on political campaigns is to talk about rates on watermelons. The old commission carried on an extended program, with much hard work and expense, improving shipping conditions of the Georgia melon growers. During all this time Governor Talmadge has never appeared before any legal authority with facts in support of the subject he presumes to discuss. While commissioner of agriculture the railroads sought to have placed in effect certain packing requirements in the shipment of melons, which would have cost the Georgia growers approximately $400,000 per year. The Georgia commission defeated this effort of the railroads, but not one word of help did we get from the one who now proposes to take charge of rate regulation in Georgia.

I will not again refer to the hoax of his trial of the old commission, other than to repeat that nothwithstanding he went about it with a fixed mind to destroy the commission, yet he ran into so many commendable things reflecting the work of the old commission that he undoubtedly found great difficulty in summing up the flimsy excuses he assigned in his dismissal of the commission. He had produced sworn evidence, undisputed, during his sideshow of a trial, showing that the Georgia commission has in recent years saved the state over three million dollars in rates on roadbuilding material; that the old commission successfully prosecuted a case all the way to the supreme court of the United States, relieving the lumber interest in south Georgia of an unfair handicap in favor of the Florida lumber interest; that the old commission led all other states in constructing rates on a mileage basis, whereby the smallest shipping point in Georgia now can compete on equal terms with the large shipping interests in the big cities; he found rates on fertilizers reduced; he found we had reduced rates on practically everything that goes to and comes off of the farm; that Georgias' rates, railroad, light and power, gas and utility rates generally compare favorably with similar rates in adjoining states, and as a rule, lower in Georgia. While the persecution of the old commission and its destruction had its inception in the belief that it would be good politics, on account of a well-known prejudice against certain utility interests, yet imagine his chagrin when the sworn evidence showed that the commission had successfully led the effort that resulted in bringing natural gas to Georgia, coming in direct competition with electric current, chiefly of the Georgia Power Company, and with it a saving of approximately three million five hundred thousand dollars in Atlanta territory alone; he found that in adjoining states, rate regulatory boards, the courts and the interstate commerce commission hold the old Georgia commission and its work in high esteem, progressive and worthy of their approval; he found that the work of the old commission has resulted in the saving of millions of dollars to Georgia citizens; he found that the commission has been alert in moving to bring relief to Georgia, without complaint; and yet he forms a conspiracy to destroy the personnel of a department that has done a work of splendid results, and without any reason yet announced, of a substantial nature he destroys the usefulness of such a department for purely political purposes, and at the same time permit him to pay a large number of political debts. While martial law outraged every sense of decency, about the state capitol Governor Talmadge, under military guard, paraded himself into and out of the room where he conducted his sideshow, in the form of a mock impeachment proceedings, with the cowardly effort to coerce and terrorize every department at the capitol, lest the personnel of some one department should not do his bidding.

Governor Talmadge found that the Georgia commission had spent months of labor, in the preparation of necessary data, looking to a revision of rates for telephone companies, all this he destroyed, and now, we are informed that the Talmadge commission will have a hearing on this same question. Light and power rates are not lower from Savannah to the Georgia-Alabama line, along the Coast Line railroad because of the Talmadge greed for more power. The public is anxiously concerned to know why Governor Talmadge desires to take control of the public service commission; just in the same manner are they concerned to know why he only wants men who will act as his rubber stamp in the general assembly. If only Governor Talmadge's views are to be of force in Georgia, then why have a meeting of the legislature, just as we could as well get along without several departments of our state government. There is just cause for grave apprehension as to possible sinister motives back of the unheard of and disgraceful procedure of Governor Talmadge, which has and which will cost Georgia citizens millions of dollars. The public will not be satisfied, if his answer is to be that the courts have enjoined the rates of the new commission: neither will the public be satisfied for the new commission to undertake reckless procedure, in matters of rate reductions, only to have such action set aside through legal process.

The public wishes to know governor, why it was that you not only did not offer the old commission any of your rate views, but when appealed to by them for the benefit of such views, you turned a deaf ear. You even gave your much-hated highway department the opportunity to serve, under your direction, but not one suggestion did you offer the old commission. Not very long before you completed your conspiracy, you were heard to say that the commission was doing good work; you knew the commission had reduced railroad rates, effecting big savings on movements to and from the farm, and the very time you were completing your conspiracy the commission was waging a hard fight in the courts to save its orders in this respect, right at your very door, and yet you continued your plans for a pretense at a fair trial of the commission, later to destroy the work we had done, and with it the personnel of the commission. Are the people in Georgia ready to let one man select the members of the legislature? A man drunk with authority, now demanding the law making authority be placed under his thumb. I have confidence that an outraged public will in due course, repel this administration of terrorism with all of its disgrace and wild extravagances. These are serious questions, and must be answered by every sincere, God-fearing, law-abiding citizen in this state.

WILLIAM BARRETT STARTS LAW PRACTICE

By WHITNER CARY.

The many Atlanta friends of William K. Barrett, of Augusta, Billy to the bridge world, will be interested to know that he has started practicing law in his native city.

The firm of Dunbar, Nicholson and Barrett is the firm name with which Billy starts out his legal career. Clem Dunbar, the senior member of the firm, is a former associate in the practice of law with John W. Davis, of New York, former candidate for the presidency on the democratic ticket. Mr. Dunbar was associated with Mr. Davis for several years, returning to Augusta, his home town, in 1930.

George Nicholson, the other member of the firm, is a young lawyer of Augusta who recently graduated. Billy graduated this spring. The newly-formed firm, which opened offices last week, will do a general practice.

Billy, who gained national prominence several years ago by being a member of the Culbertson bridge team which won the national championship at team-of-four play, is recognized not only in the south but in the east as a bridge player of great ability.

It will, therefore, be sad news to his many friends and bridge associates to learn that he has decided to retire from tournament play. Social games in his home town will, for the present, be the extent of his participation in the game which brought him national honors and one national title, according to Billy, who is in Atlanta for the week-end.

"Have to settle down now and start work and will have no time to take in the bridge tournaments," was the way he expressed it Saturday when asked would his legal work prevent his attending the many eastern tournaments which in the past have seen him.

Billy is the son of the late Frank Barrett, former well-known cotton factor of Augusta, and the uncle of Tom Barrett, recently elected mayor of Augusta. His pleasing personality and undeniable brain power make his host of friends predict as great a legal success for him as he achieved in the bridge world.

Repeal Conventions Attacked by Chase

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—State ratifying conventions on prohibition repeal were described as unconstitutional in a letter addressed to President Roosevelt tonight by William S. Chase, superintendent of the International Reform Federation.

The letter said the conventions "are neither representative nor deliberative conventions . . . but in reality are referenda."

It asked that the president refer the question of their constitutionality to the attorney-general and said such conventions "falsely assume to be truly representative in voicing the will of the people."

Tobacco Crop Cut Will Be Proposed

GREENVILLE, N. C., Aug. 12.—(AP)—J. Conrad Lanier, recently appointed to the tobacco division of the United States department of agriculture, told a mass meeting of farmers today he would recommend to the department a reduction of from 10 to 15 per cent in next year's flue-cured crop.

Growers would be paid from $35 to $50 for each acre of tobacco taken out of cultivation under Lanier's plan.

Lanier expressed belief this year's bright leaf crop would sell for 18 cents a pound.

A processing tax, probably 3 1-2 cents a pound, would be placed on tobacco manufactured for domestic consumption, under the reduction plan, he explained.

Reuis was picked up adrift on a log yesterday by Captain D. E. Quidley, keeper of Wade Point light, after he had been in the water for four hours and a half and without food for 24 hours.

SALES TAX BALANCES MISSISSIPPI'S BOOKS

State on Cash Basis After Many Years of Big Deficits.

By JAMES H. STREET.

JACKSON, Miss., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Mississippi—harbinger of the sales tax doctrine—came out of the red this week and is back on a cash basis for the first time in many years.

The Delta state, whose backbone is a cotton stalk, had a cash deficit of $7,423,028.77 in January, 1932, when Martin Sennet Conner—his friends call him Mike—took the office of governor.

Five months later a sales tax, the nation's first, went into effect. And 14 months later Mississippi wiped the deficit off the slate. Its only big obligation now is its bonded debt. And that's only $36,000,000.

Conner Responsible.

It was Conner—"Call me Mike," he told the farmers when he was in the hustings hunting votes—who brought the sales tax to this agricultural empire of gumbo dirt, piney ridges and crawling swamps.

"We've been in the wilderness long enough," said Conner, "and we have got to come out of the wilderness like the old gray mare."

The best way to get out, he said, was to make everybody pay taxes and everybody cut expenses. So they passed a sales tax with a basic rate of two per cent. And now when you get your suit cleaned and pressed for "four bits," you pay the cleaner 50 cents and the state one penny. Or when you buy a dollar's worth o calico, you pay $1.02.

"Two cents for Mike!" became a motto.

The tax brought $1,535,507 the first seven months of its life and enabled the state to come tearing out of the wilderness.

Young Governor.

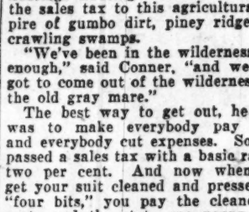

Conner—one of the youngest governors in the nation—has been studying politics and tax problems since he was a boy. His father down Hattiesburg way told him when he was just a youngster hunting foxes and shooting quail that some day he should be governor.

The young man went to the state university at Oxford and then to Yale. He came home and began his fight to get Mississippi out of the wilderness.

He served as speaker of the house of representatives the first year he was in the assembly. He was about 21 then and the best fox hunter on the hill.

Then he ran for governor and kept right on running for eight years until he was finally elected. Henry Whitfield beat him once. Theo Bilbo did the same thing. But the third time was the charm and he was elected on a tax reform platform.

Conner is the type of man who smiles when everybody else frowns. He loves good dogs, true guns and white clothes. He is not a spellbinding speaker, but he speaks the language of the farmers.

THANKS TO YOU!

Record Meteor Shower Delights Astronomers

MOUNT WILSON OBSERVATORY, Cal., Aug. 12.—(AP)—One of the greatest showers of meteors in modern times fell into the earth's atmosphere last night and early today to brighten the skies and record itself on sensitive photographic plates of astronomers stationed on southern California mountains.

J. Wesley Simpson, of the American Meteor Society, here from Illinois to watch the spectacle, said he and his assistants had counted 1,100 fire balls, some of them as bright as the planet Jupiter and one, the trail of which glowed for 15 seconds, brighter than Venus.

"Of course," he commented, "some of our counts were necessary duplications, but J. Fletcher Hickerson, on Mt. La Crescenta has not reported his count yet, and it is safe to say that our figures will be increased at least 500 or 600 by his observations."

Texas Growers Seek 16c Cotton Price

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Formation of a permanent organization aimed at promulgation of a federal code to fix a minimum price of 16 cents per pound for cotton was perfected here today at a meeting of Texas cotton farmers.

J. E. McDonald, Texas commissioner of agriculture, was instructed by the organization to go to Washington immediately to confer with federal officials on provisions of the proposed code.

He also was requested to invite agricultural commissioners and leading cotton farmers of the south to join him in pressing for immediate stabilization of the cotton market through governmental action.

McDonald probably will leave early next week for Washington.

A resolution stating that the declining cotton market would prove disastrous to the south unless checked was adopted. It suggested 16 cents a pound as a price at which farmer could pay the organizations and provide for their families on the rising commodity market.

It was the sense of the organization that any plan, however radical, be employed to stem the declining market and advance it to an adequate price level.

$600,000 SPENT ON ELLIJAY ROAD

Audit Made Public by Governor; Board Meets Monday and Tuesday.

The state highway board will proceed immediately on work on the Ellijay-Chatsworth highway, Chairman J. J. Mangham announced Saturday. Mr. Mangham said the board would meet this week to determine whether or not to complete the work itself or to let a new contract. A contract for the building of the road with Murray and Gilmer counties was cancelled by the board Friday.

An audit of the project made public Saturday by Governor Eugene Talmadge revealed that up to May 31, a total of $319,013 had been expended on the road in the two counties. At that time $42,000 was due Gilmer county and $48 due Murray county. It is estimated that the work done during May and June will cost the state $200,000, making the total cost of the project to date approximately $600,000.

The audit revealed that on May 31, $60,000 of the fund paid out by the highway department to the counties had not been expended.

It also was shown that V. C. Pickering, former state senator, who has been doing the work on the road under an agreement with the counties was due $8,000 from Gilmer county and was overdrawn $1,000 in Murray county. It was said that he had put up his own money to carry on the work, anticipating repayment when funds arrived from the highway department.

It was said that the counties had not made a written contract with Pickering but merely had entered into an agreement with him. No set figure for the job was fixed, it being agreed that Pickering's compensation was to be fixed when the road was completed and the amount he was to receive was to be determined by the amount he saved out of the funds put up by the highway board.

The audit, consisting of more than 1,000 pages of figures and photostatic copies of checks, orders and letters, was completed last week by State Auditor Tom Wisdom.

The highway board will meet Monday and Tuesday of this week. A number of delegations are scheduled to present petitions for roads and other matters of importance are to be considered.

Among the proposals to be taken up by the board is one which calls for abolition of the department's maintenance division and the turning over of all maintenance work to the counties, the state retaining only about 20 engineers and supervisers of the now more than 600 employes of the division.

Another proposal to reopen the department quarry at Elberton, which has been shut down for a number of years, also will be taken up at the sessions.

Dean's Wife's Blue Hair Startles Chapel Hill

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Mrs. T. J. Wilson Jr., wife of the dean of registration of the University of North Carolina, unwittingly startled Chapel Hill when she appeared on the streets with blue hair.

"It's this way," she explained. "I went to a beauty parlor to get my hair washed and said I didn't want my white hair to take on a creamy tinge. I was told the way to remedy that was to have it washed in blueing. I did. The solution was too strong. The blue stayed."

Always mindful of hamony, Mrs. Wilson appeared here with a blue voile dress to match her tresses.

Clouds To Hover Over Section Today

Clouds which hovered about Atlanta Saturday but failed to produce rain will remain over the city long enough today to send down intermittent thundershowers, Meteorologist George W. Mindling predicted Saturday.

There will not be much change in temperature, however, according to Mr. Mindling. The showers will not be frequent and heavy enough to break the heat wave. Temperatures will probably range from 70 to 89 degrees.

Three Killed, 4 Hurt As Express Overturns

SALISBURY, Md., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Three men were fatally injured and four others hurt near here early today when the Pennsylvania railroad fast express "The Cavalier" struck a section of track that apparently had been tampered with and overturned.

The dead are W. Oscar Brown, of Delmar, Del., the engineer; E. R. Massey, of Delmar, the fireman; an unidentified negro who was riding the trucks of a baggage car.

The injured: William L. Simons, of Salisbury, mail clerk; Thomas Donoho, Wilmington, Del., news agent on the train; Samuel Wilson, Delmar, a passenger; H. C. Huchens, Wyoming, Del., a passenger.

After an investigation of the wreck A. F. McIntyre, trainmaster in charge of the division, said it had been caused by "malicious tampering with the rails." He did not amplify the statement.

Board To Formulate Employment Policies

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Fifty men and women prominent in industrial, labor and civic circles were drafted by the United States employment service today to serve on a federal advisory committee which will formulate policies and help solve problems relating to employment.

The group is headed by Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, and will hold an organization meeting here Monday. Secretary Perkins will address it.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Henry I. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, and Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, were named vice chairmen; Frederic A. Delano, president of the American Civic Association, treasurer, and W. Frank Persons, director of the United States Employment Service, secretary. Members include Donald Comer, Birmingham.

How can she have a clear skin, too?

There is one way which many have found efficient . . . by restoring deficient red-cells and hemo-glo-bin (skin and tissue purifier) to the blood.

The right amount of hemo-glo-bin in the blood makes a vast difference in the way you feel and look.

Ford Motor Company,

Henry Ford
Dearborn, Mich.

Last week we told you how the 8-cylinder motor made its entry into the low-price field.

But an "8" is not the whole story. There are two varieties of the "8".

We have chosen the V-8 —a motor with two banks of cylinders set at an angle opposite each other, instead of all eight cylinders in a line. There are good reasons for this.

When we take 8 cylinders and set them four on a side, the length of the motor is reduced about half; it becomes a sturdy and compact power plant. The V-8 motor is 4 cylinders long; if the cylinders were set in line the motor would be 8 cylinders long. This would sacrifice compactness.

One simple advantage of the V-type is that it gives more room in the body of your car. In the medium-size car that is built for economical operation this is important. And it accounts for the generous interior body room of the new Ford V-8.

Another advantage concerns the motor itself. The V-8 type of motor, with its two short banks of cylinders, cuts in half the distance which the gas mixture must travel to the end cylinders. This gives a more uniform distribution to each cylinder and makes a smoother running motor. Also, two water pumps and two streams of water cool the cylinders instead of one stream. This means more uniform cooling.

Other points of advantage I reserve for another letter. To mention one:—When we seemed to be slow in introducing the new Ford V-8 the delay was caused by our doing a very important thing in the interest of strength, long service and efficiency.

We were perfecting the V-8 cylinder block as a one-piece casting.

As a result our cylinder block is not made of two or three castings bolted together. It is one compact whole, which permanently keeps the operating parts in perfect alignment. We cannot expect the general reader to appreciate the difficulties we had to overcome before this could be done. But if you ever have a chance to see our cylinder block casting before it goes into an engine, you will marvel that it could be done at all.

We are the only manufacturers now doing it this more expensive way.

Our new car is making its way so rapidly, on its own merits, that it is worth knowing some of the reasons for its success.

The Man Who Invested In Atlanta WILL PAY FOR YOU!

Three young men came to Atlanta.

Each was full of ambition, energy and ability. Each found opportunity here in the city that others had built. The field was fertile--- each profited hansomely and built up large surpluses through trading with Atlanta people.

"Atlanta has been good to me," said the first man. "I AM GOING TO INVEST MY SURPLUS WHERE I MADE IT. I will be a REAL citizen and help further develop Atlanta." He bought Atlanta real estate---he improved property. He became one of the builders of the community.

But immediately---this first man became liable for large tax payments to the City, the County and the State each year. He cheerfully paid and paid all that was demanded of him---and then---came the depression. LAST YEAR PART OF HIS PROPERTY WAS SOLD FOR TAXES. THE REMAINDER IS UNDER FI. FA.

The second man, however, figured differently. He sought out tax-free securities for his investments—sent a large part of his money AWAY FROM ATLANTA and sat up nights seeking legal methods to safeguard his hard-earned surplus against the tax collector. HE CONTRIBUTED ABSOLUTELY NOTHING TOWARD THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE CITY IN WHICH HE MADE HIS MONEY and practically nothing toward the maintenence of the benefits which he received and enjoyed from this city. Yet—today, the community says to him:

"You are a successful business man. You are a leader and we are proud to have you among us. You are an example for our youth. Stay with us to continue to reap a harvest in our fields. We will charge you nothing. THE MAN WHO INVESTED HERE WILL PAY FOR YOU!"

The third man also profited—but he spent his earnings in gambling and riotous living. That part of the community capital which he collected vanished completely. All he ever paid the City or County out of the large income that he made from the community was a few dollars a year in street tax and a trifling personal property tax.

But the community says to this third man—"We will continue to provide you with services, conveniences, opportunity—YOU OWE US NOTHING.

"THE MAN WHO INVESTED IN ATLANTA WILL PAY FOR YOU!"

Why should the man who invests in Atlanta—the man who builds Atlanta—the man who, through devotion to his community and belief in the future stability of the City which gave him opportunity, put his savings back into that community HAVE TO PAY THE TAX BILL FOR THOSE WHO INVEST THEIR MONEY WHERE IT IS NOT TAXED?

It is only through this CLASS TAXATION system of ours that such injustice is done. BUT IT IS DONE—AND IT MUST STOP IF MEN ARE TO CONTINUE TO BUILD ATLANTA!

This moth-eaten theory that land is the basis of all wealth may have been sound way back in 1877 when our present tax system was adopted—BUT IN 1933 IT IS AN ABSURD THEORY. Nobody even contends that it is true in these modern days.

But under this theory of TAXING ONLY THE ACCUMULATIONS OF WEALTH IN THE SHAPE OF REAL PROPERTY, those who are able to derive earnings from our economic structure and put these earnings to work for them through tax exempt sources and those who dissipate their earnings and accumulate no tangible wealth receive all the benefits of local government free AT THE EXPENSE OF MEN WITHOUT WHOM THERE WOULD BE NO COMMUNITY OR OPPORTUNITY HERE—the owners of homes and other real property.

There's a change coming, however—the people are thinking. The tremendous injustice AND THE HANDICAP OF INSUFFICIENT REVENUE FOR EFFICIENT LOCAL GOVERNMENT because of our present tax system is apparent.

A NEW DEAL IN LOCAL TAXATION IS NOT FAR DISTANT.

Those who receive the benefits of local government must learn to pay for those benefits DIRECTLY according to the ability of each to pay, regardless of whether land or air or water or sunshine is indispensable in the production of wealth.

EACH CITIZEN MUST PAY HIS OWN BILL!

WILBERT ROBINSON NAMED CRACKER MANAGER

When an Irishman Meets Hard Luck, He Just Begins To Fight

It was one of those days. They were letting Charley Moore go as manager of the Atlanta Crackers because the owners hire a manager and the fans fire him.

It might have been a sad afternoon. It would have been had it not been for Colonel Tillinghast L'Hommedieu Huston. He said: "Moore is Irish. When you put the pressure on the Irish they come forward. He will get a better job."

Wilbert Robinson was down in the dumps. Nothing else will express it. "I don't want to do this," he said. "I'm doing it because I want to see if I can help Atlanta. I think Charley was the victim of circumstances as much as anything else. He had some players who didn't play ball for him. I'm too old to be doing this." (The Old Oriole is near 70 but when a lot of us get to be 70 I hope we are as young as the Old Oriole.)

Charley Moore took it standing up. I wish some of the fans who have yelped at him from the security of the bleachers and the grandstand had been there and seen the great way this great boy took it. "I'm just getting started," he said. I hope the fellows who have paid 75 cents and 40 cents to criticise him are satisfied. Only I guess they won't feel so good inside now that they have got their wish. The owners hire. The fans fire.

The owners did what they thought best. It was perhaps the best. It is a break for Moore. He had been given some players who didn't hustle. He couldn't make them put out. Some of them were self-satisfied veterans who are about through and who consider themselves valuable ball players.

We all sat around talking. We all shook hands. A lot of junk, I guess. But we all felt pretty bad. A great fellow like Moore was getting the gate.

Connie Mack finished last for seven straight years. A lot of great managers are not always successful their first year.

The owners can't be blamed. They have to pull them in the late. As far as the managers were concerned they can't lose.

But I wish the fans who have yelped for his scalp could have been there to see it.

FIFTY MILLION FRENCHMEN.

It is an old gag but it appears that fifty thousand, or was fifty million, Frenchmen can be right at that. There is the new ruling of the boxing commission, for instance.

A lad who goes into a French ring must be introduced by his own name. He may not adopt that of some other fighter or the name of some beast.

This would make it rather difficult on our noble exponents of the manly art of self-defense. (The public hasn't perfected one yet.)

We have grown used to many little fighting lambs covering themselves with a wolf's name. We have plain John Smith who is just a plug-ugly pug who can't fight a lick. But when he is introduced as Tiger Jack the public shivers a bit. Or maybe plain Bill Jones becomes Gorilla Jones and no one thinks of him as just a kid who is scared to death in his corner and who does not believe his ancestors were gorillas anyhow.

It is an old custom in this country. And we love it. Or if we don't we make no objection about it. The Tigers and the Gorillas and the Battlers parade and pass on.

And the old custom of taking the name of some fighter who could fight and then disgracing it is allowed all the way.

There are a lot of Young Jack Dempseys and a gross of Corbetts and a bale or so of Sullivans. And not one has ever been able to fight worth paying a peso to see. The wrestlers are taking it up. There are already a few Young Londos boys who hardly know a full nelson hold from a grape vine.

A ROSE BY ANY OTHER NAME.

There is King Levinsky. He would be introduced in France as Harry Krawkow. That's his name. And Jack Sharkey would be John Cucoskey. And Battling Bozo would have been Curtis Hambright. Although personally I think Bozo is better. Buffy Griffiths was Gerald Ambrose Griffiths and so maybe there was some excuse for changing.

The nicknames are the best. Tiger Flowers was the only fighter with a jungle nickname who ever got anywhere. Unless my memory is playing me tricks there were no other Tigers who rode up to the crest.

There was Terrible Terry McGovern. And he got to the top. And was a great fighter. But mostly the nicknames are given by some enterprising boxing reporter. They call Luis Firpo "The Wild Bull of the Pampas" when as a matter of fact he had never been near the pampas. But it sounded swell. They get up some great names for the slashers.

And personally I think it is a mistake. It is very disillusioning indeed to see some lad named "Terrible Tiger" Jones bring on his face being counted out while some boy named Eddie Wagner looks on.

WILDCAT MADDOX.

The worst example of nicknames I ever saw was that of Wildcat Maddox. He came out of Atlanta, a brown boy, to fight Bob Lawson, who was a stablemate of the late Tiger Flowers.

In the first round the Wildcat dropped six times for a count of nine. When the bell rang for the second round Lawson rushed from his corner. The Wildcat leaped out of the ring.

He explained afterwards that he had eaten something and was ill. But to see a Wildcat run from a plain name like Lawson was too much. I have never quite believed in wildcats since. In fact if I were to meet one I am afraid I would punch it right in the nose. Which would be a mistake.

ROBBY NAMED CRACKER PILOT; BEGINS MONDAY

Moore Leaves With Best Wishes of Cracker Owners.

By Ralph McGill.

Atlanta baseball officials yesterday afternoon named Wilbert Robinson, president of the club and for 16 years manager and president of the Brooklyn club, as manager of the Crackers to succeed Charley Moore.

The move was made as an emergency one to see if the club could be pulled off the bottom and also to determine what players would be kept for the Atlanta lineup next season.

Atlanta owners, disappointed in the players, saw Charley Moore as sacrificed on the nonchalent play of many of his players. It was the old case of the owners hiring and the fans firing.

BEST WISHES.

"We have the highest respect for Charley Moore," said the owners. "He leaves here with our best wishes. We realize that he has not had the best of luck. Many of the players purchased on their records have failed to live up to their records.

"We regret to take this position, but feel that the fans have demanded it. Wilbert Robinson takes over the club for the remaining schedule to look over the players and determine which of them we want to keep. Wilbert Robinson takes the position only at our earnest behest. He had no idea of ever becoming manager when he came here as president. We hope to improve the standing of the team before the end of the season."

ROBBY DISTRESSED.

Wilbert Robinson was distressed at the situation. "I regret that Moore is to go," he said. "It is just one of those baseball situations. It is one which all baseball men know. We have the highest respect and the best wishes for Charley Moore. He was unlucky. When you are unlucky in baseball it is too bad. He would have been a hero had he managed to get the team up there.

"I did not have an idea of ever managing another club. But the owners asked me to do it and I am glad to do what I can to help out. Atlanta is a wonderful city and deserves the best. I hope I can get things lined up for next year."

ACTIVE AGAIN.

Robinson, who has been in baseball for 50 years, returns to active duty again for the first time since 1931. He was manager of Brooklyn for 16 years and won two pennants. He was out of baseball last year. He returned to the game as president of the Crackers when the new organization took charge this spring.

Robinson is already seeking a coach. Hank DeBerry, catcher for the Brooklyn club, is one of those under consideration.

Atlanta plays Memphis here Monday afternoon.

Donald Budge Wins National Junior Title

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Donald Budge, red-headed youngster from Oakland, Cal., is the new junior national tennis champion. He won the title here today by defeating Gene Mako, Los Angeles, the heavy favorite, in a hard fought five-set match.

Daring drives deep into the corners, smashing cross-court placements and a fine overhead game, along with Mako's early match wildness combined to give Budge the championship. The scores were 6-4, 6-2, 1-6, 0-6, 8-6.

Another Oakland lad—Robert Harmon, won the boys' championship of the United States on an adjoining court by defeating Robert Riggs, of Los Angeles, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2. Riggs put all he had into the first set, keeping the new champion on the run. He was easy prey, however, to Harmon's steadiness in the following two sets.

Mako got a bit of revenge later when, teamed with Ben Dey, also of Los Angeles, he won the junior championship by defeating Budge and William Seward, Beverly Hills, Cal., 6-1, 6-2, 6-0. Mako and Dey are the southern California doubles champions.

Miss Dorothy Round Is Singles Winner

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(UP)—Dorothy Round, demure English Sunday school teacher, today won the women's singles title in the eastern grass court tennis championships by defeating her countrywoman, Mary Heeley, 6-2, 6-4.

The women's double crown went to the Anglo-American team of Freda James and Elizabeth Ryan, who defeated Miss Round and Miss Heeley, 6-4, 6-1.

Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill, of California, national doubles champions, won the men's tandem title with a 6-2, 6-2, 6-4 victory over George Lott and Gregory Mangin.

Tomorrow Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, defending champion, and Sidney B. Wood, of New York, meet for the men's singles championship. Sutter gained the final bracket with a 6-3, 6-4 victory over Mangin, while Wood upset the highly favored California giant, Lester Stoefen, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3.

East and West To Meet at Polo

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The east and the west, which Rudyard Kipling said never could meet, will cross him up at Onwentsia Country Club, no later than tomorrow afternoon, when the first intersectional all-star battle in polo history will be played.

Headed by the greatest player of them all, Tommy Hitchcock, the eastern team will go into this first game of a best-two-in-three series as favorites and it will take all the hard riding and canny shooting of the Plainsmen to win. Hitchcock will be supported by Mike Phipps at No. 1, Winston Guest at No. 3 and Raymond Guest at back. Hitchcock himself will be at No. 2.

Two Games Today At Poncey Park

While the churchmen's injunction "killed" the scheduled Sunday game between Atlanta and Memphis, the city will not be without its usual Sabbath baseball game at Ponce de Leon park today.

Through Mayor Key's indorsement, there will be a double-header for charity, starting at 2 o'clock with a game between the Bellwood Aces and the Buckhead Juniors, followed by another between the Buckhead All-Stars and A&P. There will be no admission charge, but the customary free-will donation for charity.

Martin's Daughter To Give Trophy

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Unable to go to Atlanta next Thursday night to present the opening day attendance trophy for Class "A" cities to the Crackers, John D. Martin, Southern association president, today nominated his daughter, Miss Savilla Martin, to act in his stead. She will be assisted by Miss Norma Lee of Memphis.

Miss Martin and Miss Ann Watkins, of Memphis, presented the Chattanooga Lookouts with the Class B trophy earlier in the season.

CRACKERS SPLIT TWIN BILL HERE WITH MEMPHIS

Harry Kelly Fails in 'Iron Man' Role; Scores 5-8, 4-1.

By Jimmy Jones.

Playing their farewell games for Charley Moore, the Crackers went out yesterday and hustled with commendable spirit in the double-header with Memphis, the result being that first half champions had a hard time getting an even split. They had to come from behind in the ninth with two out to beat Carlos Moore, 8 to 5, and in the second, Hormidas Aube let them down with two hits, at the same time frustrating Harry Kelly's attempt to pull his famous "iron man" stunt, the Crackers winning, 4 to 1.

For once, the Crackers were not awed by Harry Kelly's pitching. They didn't seem afraid of him at all. They clouted him right lustily in the first game and overcame the three-run lead the Chicks amassed in the first inning with some solid hitting in the second and third that netted two runs in each frame.

TOUGH ON CARLOS.

Carlos Moore took up the pitching assignment after Max Butcher was batted from the box on three straight hits in the first inning and pitched beautiful baseball for seven innings. He retired Lieber, Reese and Cortazzo in order to stop the Chicks in the first and then pitched six more scoreless innings. He deserved to win, did Carlos, and everyone thought he was a cinch when the Crackers still held their 4-3 lead going into the eighth. But Lieber, the boy who replaced Joe Hutcheson in the outfield, knocked a home run in that inning to tie it at 4-4.

Still the Crackers had the power to come back and went ahead, 5-4, in their half. Carlos Moore had two men out in the ninth when old man Frank Brazill, the best money player in the league, dropped a triple on the right field bank like a bolt out of the blue sky to tie the score again. Moore grew temporarily upset and walked Lieber. Then Andy Reese was passed purposely to get at Shine Cortazzo.

The little "eye'talian," who hadn't got a hit during the game, apparently resented this and dropped one over third after Moore had two strikes on him which went for a double when Asa Wall, subbing in left for the injured Bonowitz, charged the ball and let it jump over him. Brazill, Lieber and Reese all scored and "blooie" went the ball game for the Crackers.

HARRY AGAIN.

Since the Chick pitching staff is on the blink with a siege of sore arms, Kelly again assayed to stop the Crackers in the second game. But he was greeted by a two-base hit by Buster Chatham, who had a good day, starting the first and Red Rollings singled him home. Rollings singled again in the fifth and Eddie Phillips scored him with a double. Red Barron, by smart base running, stretched a single into a double, scoring Phillips.

Jack Aube was so good that the Chicks couldn't touch him, saving in the sixth when a base on balls to Hamel, a hit batsman and a single by Lieber netted the only run.

In the first game, Hamel started the rout of Butcher by walking Chiozza doubled and Chapman bounced a

They All Look Alike To 'Hutch'---Prothro

By Jimmy Jones.

"He doesn't even know who's pitching," said Doc Prothro, the Memphis manager, speaking of Big Joe Hutcheson, his ex-rightfielder, who now is engaged in the business of pinning the National league pitchers back in a lazy sort of Louisiana way.

"And he doesn't care who's pitching," chimed in Tom Watkins, the Memphis owner, who sold Big Joe Hutcheson to the Brooklyn Dodgers for the neat sum of $15,000, plus a couple of ball players. "He doesn't care whether it's Hubbell or French or Schumacher or anyone else."

These two gentlemen have been following the exploits of the strapping Joseph with a great deal of personal pride—Dr. Prothro, because he is very found of Hutcheson and predicted that he would make good in the big leagues and Mr. Watkins, because of all the ball players he has sold to big league clubs, he has never yet recommended a lemon.

It has been pleasing to Prothro and Watkins to read in the papers where their protege is going "4 for 4, 4 for 3, 4 for 2 and rarely 4 for 0," as the ball players say. Joe Hutcheson was never a 2 o'clock hitter. He hits them in the ball games and off left-handers, as well as right-handers.

For instance, he got three hits off Carl Hubbell, the National league's best left-hander, the day that Hubbell allowed the entire Brooklyn team but four hits. In his next game he hit a home run off Hal Schumacher, the Giants' ace right-hander. When Brooklyn bought Hutcheson, Max Carey had intended using him only when right-handers were pitching because Joe cuts from the left side. But he made life so miserable for the southpaws as well that now Big Joe plays almost every day.

LIKE MILO.

"He reminds me of Milo Allison, a ball player we had at Memphis a number of years ago," added Watkins. "Milo could never remember the names of even the star pitchers in the Southern league. They were just pitchers to him and frequently he would play through a whole game without

Moore Wishes Robinson Luck

Charley Moore, the retiring manager of the Crackers, leaves Atlanta without malice, but only with regret that he could not produce a winner in his first season here.

"I'm sorry that I couldn't win for the fans here, for they're the greatest fans I ever saw, but maybe those who succeed me will give them a winner; anyway I wish them all the luck in the world," he stated.

Moore also took occasion to praise his players, stating that, if anything, they had tried too hard to win on occasions.

"This ball club has had more tough breaks than any I have ever managed; it never actually got a break of any kind on the field; everything

SENATORS WIN OVER RED SOX IN GREAT DUEL

Bluege, Myer Hit Hard as Washington Downs Boston, 2-1.

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The powerful slugging of Ossie Bluege and "Buddy" Myer today enabled the league-leading Washington Senators to make a clean sweep of their three-game series with the Boston Red Sox, by a 2-1 margin, and gave Earl "Lefty" Whitehill his fifteenth victory in 21 starts.

Whitehill and Bob Weiland, southpaw ace of the Sox's hurling staff, engaged in an exciting duel until the eighth inning, when Myer started the Senators' winning rally with a long triple down the left field foul-line. He broke the 1-1 deadlock by scoring after the catch on Manager Joe Cronin's long fly to right. Bluege's homer over the left-field fence with one out and none on tied the score in the fifth.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The Athletics and the New York Yankees battered each other all around Shibe park in both games of a double-header today, winding up in an even break which left the second-place Yanks 4 1-2 games behind the Washington Senators, who won one game. The A's won the opener, 11 to 9, when Jimmie Foxx clouted his second homer of the game and his thirty-fourth of the season in the tenth inning. The Yanks came back to take the nightcap, 8 to 6.

ITALIAN STAR FACES GOGGIN IN FINAL TEST

Unknown to Golf Renown Defeats Hines on 35th Green.

By Paul Mickelson,

Associated Press Sports Writer.

BLUE MOUND CLUB, MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen rode into the finals of the national professional golf championship with Willie Goggin, an unknown to golf renown, from a San Francisco municipal golf course, today.

Poles apart as fame goes in golf, they will meet for the prized title dropped by Olin Dutra, of Los Angeles, in a 36-hole final over the short Blue Mound course tomorrow.

Sarazen, open champion of the United States and Great Britain last year, sailed into the finals on the tide of an easy 5 and 4 triumph over another prominent star, Johnny Farrell, of New York. Goggin, on leave of absence as golf professional at a municipal course 10 miles from the Golden Gate to compete in his first important golf championship, survived after a great duel in which he turned back another unknown of the ranks, Jimmy Hines, of the Timber Point Club, New York, 1 up. He salted away his victory with a birdie on the 35th green.

STRANGE CONTRAST.

Never before did the semi-finals of a national championship produce a stranger contrast in golf. Sarazen, who was teased to forget his squabbles with the Professional Golfers' Association of America and compete for the title he has twice held and once missed in the finals, was an easy master as he routed the man who won fame back in 1928 by beating Bobby Jones in the play-off for the national open title.

He led 4 up after the front 9 of the morning, saw his lead dwindle to only one hole on the backward stretch and then went out and won almost as he pleased with perfect golf in the afternoon.

Johnny outclassed, made valiant stand, but Sarazen ended the duel by matching his birdie 4 on the 32nd green. Sarazen had only 2 birdies all day, but got both when he needed them.

GREAT STAND.

Gene, out to recoup his championship losses, blanked Farrell on the first 9 holes with even par, hitting tremendously long wood shots but missing five separate chances for birdies. It was on the back 9 that Farrell, off most of the day with his approach shots, made his greatest stand. As they passed the 12th hole, Johnny stood 4 down but found the range and finished with a medal of 33, 2 under par, to pick up three holes and go to lunch only one down. He had four birdies on the back stretch. He was able to win but three holes in the afternoon as Gene romped along confidently.

Sarazen won five of the front nine in the afternoon to Johnny's one to draw away to a 5-up lead and divided the final four coming home. Farrell, who was 5 over par on the out nine, was forced to shoot birdies to win his final two holes.

Goggin, a 200-pounder who thrilled the large gallery with spectacular recovery shots, was tied five times with Hines before he broke the deadlock finally on the 400-yard 35th. The hole was a heart-breaker for Hines, who first gained attention of the galleryites Tuesday by tying Mortie Dutra, of Detroit, for the medal with 138 shots.

ARCHES SHOT.

Goggin arched a pretty shot 5 feet from the pin on the deciding green and Hines, his rival's superior with every shot except recoveries and putts, stuck one on 9 feet away. His putt rimmed the cup and jumped out an inch away. Goggin then stepped up and dropped his for a birdie 3 to go ahead. The final green sang a sad swan song for the husky 27-year-old dark horse from New York. They were even with long, straight drives and pitched beautifully on the green, but Hines' ball refused to take the back spin and rolled 30 feet past the cup, leaving him a near dead stymie from 15 feet because of the undulating nature of his putting line. He putted as close as possible to "Walloping Willie's" ball, but the stymie ended it.

The ball stopped a bare foot wide of the pin.

Sarazen, naturally, ruled as a prohibitive choice to win in tomorrow's final because of his greater experience. His game hasn't been nearly as brilliant as Goggin's, but he and everybody else figured a reaction was due to strike the big clouter from the Pacific coast, a player who has been flirting with rough and traps all the week only to break par into shreds with spectacular recoveries.

Earnhardt Swims At Cape Cod Today

Osterville, Mass., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Crawford "Fish" Earnhardt, 26, Duke University graduate and known throughout the south as a swimmer, will try to swim the length of the Cape Cod canal tomorrow, the first time it has ever been tried.

Earnhardt said tonight he would enter the water at Buzzard's bay and strive to reach the coast guard station at Sandwich, nine miles away. He plans to enter the water at 10 a. m. and hopes to finish in three hours.

Strupper Heads Officials Group

Everett Strupper has been named president and Buck Cheves and Count Boyer chosen vice presidents of the newly organized Georgia State Prep and High School Officials' Association, which held its first meeting Friday.

Pup Phillips will act as secretary and treasurer of the new group.

The new group was formed for the purpose of improving officiating by developing younger men for the jobs and speeding up games. It takes the place of two similar groups formed last year. A rules discussion meeting is planned soon.

PIRATES PILFER SECOND PLACE, BEATING CUBS

Hal Smith, Meine Turn In Two Victories for Pittsburgh.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Sharpshooting Pittsburgh batting behind impregnable pitching today gave the Pirates a double conquest of the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 2 and 3 to 2, and boosted them back into second place in the National league.

In terminating the Bruins' short-lived tenacy of the second rung, the Bucs had the benefit of top-notch twirling by Hal Smith in the first fray and Heine Meine in the nightcap, although Meine got off to a staggering start.

A big sixth inning gave the Pirates command of the first clash. Paul Waner rifled a single to center to start the inning. Then came two sacrifices, two Cub errors, a one-baser by Traynor, a triple by Suhr and a double by Piet to bring four runs.

The Cubs got two in the eighth but Smith quickly quelled their uprising.

Paul Waner's triple and a long fly produced Pittsburgh's first tally in the second game, while two more were added in the second on two hits and two sacrifices. After that Root was invincible. He gave up only seven hits as against Meine's 12, and helped in the scoring with a double. The triumph puts Pittsburgh a game and a half ahead of the Cubs and three and a half behind the top-rung Giants.

PIRATES 5-3; CUBS 3-2.

Fitzsimmons Beats Phils, Breaks Jinx.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Big Fred Fitzsimmons broke his losing streak that had lasted since July 1 today by whitewashing the Phillies with five hits to give the Giants a 2-to-0 victory. It was the nineteenth shutout recorded by the Giant pitching staff this season.

Fitzsimmons' batting helped win his own game. He clouted a double in the second after Blondy Ryan had singled. The runner reached third and scored on Hughey Critz's base hit. Frank O'Doul's eleventh homer of the season accounted for the other run in the third.

Sandlot Tournament To Open Wednesday

North Side Terrors Play in Regional Meet at Gainesville.

Atlanta's North Side Terror team, winners of the city and state sandlot baseball championships, will participate in the 9th annual regional tournament of the American Legion tournament, starting Wednesday at Gainesville, Ga.

Drawings for the games Wednesday will be made Tuesday night at the Dixie Hunt hotel at Gainesville, when representatives from Mobile, Ala.; Gainesville, Fla.; Jackson, Miss., and the Terrors, from Georgia, will be present. Teams from those cities won state championships, and the winner of the Gainesville tourney will participate in the eastern division tourney at Springfield, Mass.

Atlanta's entry will be well fortified with pitchers, for in Jim Bagby Jr. and Eugene Crockett the Terrors have two of the best-looking youngsters in this section. Both have unusually fine earned run averages and have kept the opposition hits well scattered.

CROCKETT WITH PURPLES.

Crockett played with Boys' High this past spring, doing all his playing in the outfield. This was his first season with the Terrors. The first game that the Terrors played was against the Macon Buddies, who later won the city title at Macon. Crockett was called on to do the hurling, and what a fine job did he do for himself as well as for his team! He allowed only three hits and one run, fanning nine, while his teammates collected enough runs to put three men across the plate to win, 3-1. In the same game he had two hits out of four tries.

In the 17 games that Crockett has played, either in the box or in the outfield, he has been able to get at least one hit in every game except one, that being against Albany. He has hit 30 times out of 64 tries for an average of .469.

When "Sarg" Jim Bagby is doing the hurling for the Terrors, Crockett plays in center field.

PLAYS IN OUTFIELD.

In the first Aces-Terrors game for the city title, Crockett was playing center field and was highly praised for his alert fielding ability by Uncle Wilbert Robinson, president of the Atlanta Crackers.

In the last two games that Crockett pitched, both being against the high-powered Aces, he allowed only four and three hits and the last game he held them scoreless.

The record below shows how Bagby and Crockett stack up as first-class sandlot pitchers.

Bagby's record:

ip.	h.	r.	pb.	so.	w.	l.	pct.
54	31	13	8	51	4	2	.666

Crockett's record:

Middlebrook Stars As Buford Wins

It was one of the best games of the season here, despite seven errors made by Buford.

MISS ROBINSON WINS WESTERN

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Lucille Robinson, a comely youngster from Des Moines, Iowa, dealt the national champion, Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, a 6-to-5 lacing today to win the women's western open golf title, a prize that has eluded the Chicago star for nine years.

Miss Robinson has played fine golf throughout the tournament, but was accorded no more than an outside chance of defeating Miss Van Wie, who, until today played at the top of her game. Today, however, the champion went about her work with surprising indifference, and was on top only until the eleventh hole of the morning round. The young Iowan, erratic and brilliant by turns, was one down at the morning turn, but steadied and defeated her famous opponent with amazing ease.

The national champion was herself during the first nine holes, when she gained a one-up margin. Miss Robinson bore down, making the most of long straight drives to offset weakness in her short game, and at lunch had gone two up.

After halving the first hole of the last 18, Miss Robinson applied pressure as Miss Van Wie became wild. Lucille won the twentieth and twenty-first holes, the latter with a birdie four, but dropped two out of the next three to see her lead reduced to two up again. She was in all kinds of trouble on the twenty-second and twenty-fourth, picking up both times. However, Miss Van Wie needed four to reach the green on the next hole and conceded.

They halved the next two, but from there on Miss Robinson had everything her own way. She won the first two holes of the homeward nine, halved the next one, and ended the match with a nice birdie three on the thirty-first.

The new champion was runner-up to Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, for the 1932 title, and played brilliant golf throughout the tournament this year. In her second-round match she played out bye holes for a 77, to equal Van Wie's course record.

BIRD DOG CLINIC TO AID HUNTERS OPEN IN ALBANY

Dr. Hays Battles Disease That Destroys Finest Animals.

By Ralph McGill.

The nation's finest bird dog and bird hunting section, that about Albany, Ga., is the site for the first clinical and research laboratory to be established. It will combat the alarming spread of filaria (heartworm) among the hunting dogs of the nation.

Dr. I. M. Hays, former head of the department of veterinary medicine at the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn, has opened the clinic and hospital and it is now in operation.

Dr. Hays, who discovered a cure for heartworm in dogs, was reported in The Constitution last winter. He had discovered the remedy, which cures invariably under certain conditions, while at Auburn. He cured a number of fine hunting dogs there.

So great was the demand for his services that he resigned from Auburn, at the insistence of a large number of hunting dog owners, and opened the hospital at Albany. It is located just two blocks out of Albany on the Dawson road and is in a modern building with all modern equipment and outside runs.

HUNTING DOGS.

The disease, which is killing hundreds of valuable dogs, can infest any dog. It strikes hunting dogs more than any other kind because they are more in the open. There are two known methods of infection—through mosquito and flea bites.

The disease was not known north of Florida except along the coast, before February, 1932. It was known in the Carolinas and in Florida for a number of years. Dr. Hays first had the disease brought to his attention when a well-known owner of fine hunting dogs in the east shipped him his entire kennel. Nineteen dogs were found to be infected. There was no known treatment.

Dr. Hays was in Atlanta Friday and gave the following interview about the disease:

"I started work a year ago last March after working with the dogs shipped from up east," he said. "I found that the death of the dogs was caused by a thread-like worm called diro-filaria-immitis.

FILARIA PLENTIFUL.

"The astonishing thing about this filaria is that it has an average length of 12 inches and a diameter about that of a baling wire or knitting needle. In dogs too badly infested to take the treatment I have found a handful of these worms, as many as 300 or 400 in one dog.

"These filaria live unattached in the cavities of the heart and the large blood vessels leading to and away from the heart. They do not lay eggs as do ordinary parasites, but give birth to living young. These young, which are, of course, microscopic, cannot become mature without living a part of the life cycle in the body of an intermediate host. The two chief hosts, those we are sure of, are the common dog flea and the ordinary mosquito. They live in these hosts about two weeks and are then transmitted back into the dog and have then the power to create new life."

This story, which is just beginning because Dr. Hays realizes that he has just begun his research, is one of the most amazing in veterinary medicine. It is possible that the filaria may in time adapt itself so that it can live in human beings. There is one known filaria which does occur in human beings.

DISEASE SPREADING.

The disease is spreading. "I wrote an article for a magazine saying that the disease was largely confined to the south," said Dr. Hays. "It was answered within a few months by a Canadian mounted police officer, who said that heartworm was the greatest menace the sled dogs of the arctic had at this time."

"The symptoms vary materially. Often the source of infestation is broken and the dog is infested with only a few worms. His symptoms would require months and months to really develop. The symptoms depend on the number of filaria in the blood and their location. The symptoms, according to Dr. Hays, include everything from indigestion to paralysis.

"Each case becomes a problem," he said. "When a dog is generally run down despite good treatment the odds are he has heartworm. Often we are able to build up a dog so that he can take the treatment. We had one fox hound brought to us. He was carried in. Six weeks later he was able to run a fox all night long."

The new clinic, which is also a hospital for small animals, is already open. It is modern, with hardwood floors, large windows, all interior white enamel and open-air yards with individual pens.

Dowler To Coach At William-Mary

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Tommy M. Dowler, former Colgate star, will serve as backfield coach at William and Mary College this fall, Athletic Director William S. Gooch Jr. announced today.

He will assist Head Coach John S. Kellison in directing the play of the 1933 eleven.

The freshman team will be coached by W. L. Scott, with Otis Douglas assisting him.

SMITHIES HEAD FOR GRID CAMP EARLY FRIDAY

Training Program Includes, Tennis, Swimming, Rowing, Hiking, Baseball.

By Roy White.

Boys' High football activities for the 1933 season will start moving early Friday morning when more than 20 of the ambitious candidates journey to Lake Burton, in north Georgia, for a preliminary training of two weeks.

There is no set time for the boys to assemble and practically all of them will go in private cars to the Magnes fishing camp, which will be the training camp site.

Among those already signed up for the camp are Roan Beard, Dick Jones, Tom Haygood, Ralph DeLoach, B. Adams, Gay Thrash, Harry Mount, Sam Meyer, Dick Turner, Tom Allen, Billy Ogle, W. M. Massengale, Jim Brandes, Jack Crabbe, Loy Cole, Phillips Richards, Ben Erlich, George Gerakitis, George Chotas and J. Carlyle Smith, son of the former major league and Atlanta baseball player. Others are expected to go to the camp early next week.

DOYAL IN CHARGE.

Coach Doyal will be among the first arrivals at the camp and will be in full charge of the boys during the two-week training period.

Football will not be the only activity at the camp, for Coach Doyal has outlined a program that will include tennis, swimming, hiking, rowing and baseball in addition to football.

There will be no heavy football drills until after the team returns to the city early in September, the mountain training being limited to conditioning and a thorough study and application of the fundamentals of the game.

This year marks the third training period on the shores of Lake Burton and each year Boys' High football teams have shown better results than ever before.

PURPLES VICTORIOUS.

Last year Boys' High won the city and state championships and then defeated the Houston All-Stars in a charity game at Houston, Texas, late in December. The opposition teams scored a total of 21 points against the Purples during the entire season, proving conclusively that the early conditioning at Lake Burton was of inestimable value.

Coach Doyal faces the task of almost completely rebuilding a team for the 1933 season and is desirous of taking every available youngster to the camp. The new candidates are particularly urged to take advantage of the two weeks preliminary training.

Smithies To Start Drills Monday Week.

Tech High's football practice will start at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon, August 21, at Henry Grady field, Coach Gabe Tolbert announced Saturday. The Smithies face one of their hardest schedules in recent years and Coach Tolbert is anxious to get started as soon as possible.

A large number of the veterans graduated last June, leaving only a few ramnants of the varsity and reserve ranks from which to build the 1933 team.

Daily practices will be held at the same hour and all workouts will be on the Henry Grady field unless it develops into such a condition that a transfer will be necessary to Piedmont park, where the Smithies have worked for many years in the past.

Tech High is the first football team in the state to start active drills, although Boys' High will be in a training camp at Lake Burton Saturday morning. The Purples' work will be light until they return here September 4.

Along with the announcement of the first practice session officials of Tech High stated that Hub Dowis, former Riverside Military Academy coach, has been named as an assistant to Coach Tolbert at Tech High.

THEY ALL LOOK ALIKE TO HUTCH

knowing who was in the box for the other side."

Doc Prothro scoffed at some of the facetious stories that are being turned out by metropolitan writers poking fun at Hutcheson's fielding. "He'll field good enough to stay up there, don't worry," said Doc. "He fielded good enough for me, in fact he improved a great deal in handling fly balls and ground balls this year and he's not dumb on throwing."

Tom Watkins, since he took over the Memphis club in 1914, has a record of which any minor league executive might be proud. In all those years his club hasn't been out of the first division. He has sold more good ball players to the majors for good prices than any other Southern league club owner over a period of years. He has had five managers, starting with Spencer Abbott, who won a pennant in 1921, and all were successful ones. The others were Johnny Dobbs, Clyde Milan and Doc Prothro. He considers Prothro the best of them all. He has a job with Watkins as long as he wants to stay.

GOT YOUNGSTERS.

Watkins attributes his success to going out and getting young players every year and keeping at least four old players on the roster from previous winning clubs. His advice to the Atlanta club is to go out and get young players. In one season alone Tom Watkins sold $72,000 worth of ball players to the majors.

He demanded (and got) $30,000 from Connie Mack for Eric McNair, a 21-year-old shortstop, who never even played for the Chicks. Mack took him on Watkins' word off the Knoxville club in the Sally league, which was a Memphis "farm" at the time. John McGraw paid him $22,500 for Sam Leslie, first baseman, and the Brooklyn club paid him $52,000 for two players, one of which was Johnny Frederick.

Other players he sold were:

Joe Heving, pitcher, to New York Giants; Andy Reese, infielder, to Giants; Gilly Campbell, catcher, to Cubs; Muddy Ruel, catcher, to Yankees; Johnny Frederick, outfielder, to Brooklyn; Benny Tate, catcher, to Washington; Monroe Mitchell, pitcher, to Cleveland; Horace Lisenbee, pitcher, to Washington; Sam Leslie, first baseman, to Giants; Walter Beck, pitcher, to Brooklyn; Joe Hutcheson, outfielder, to Brooklyn; Slim McGrew, pitcher, to Washington; Ray Moss, pitcher, to Brooklyn; Lloyd Brown, pitcher, to Washington; Andy High, infielder, to Brooklyn; Earl Webb, outfielder, to Giants; Roy Carlyle, outfielder, to Washington; Dickey Kerr, pitcher, to White Sox; Doc Prothro, third baseman, to Washington; Harry Kelly, pitcher, to Giants; Clarence Griffin, pitcher, to Washington; Paul Zahniser, pitcher, to Washington; Frank Waddey, outfielder, to St. Louis Browns.

SNIPES TO HEAD CAIN FIGHT CARD

"Honey Boy" Snipes, former protege of Pa Stribling and long recognized as one of the leading fighters of the south, returns to Atlanta next Wednesday night at the Cain Street arena, meeting Sailor Born, in the 10-round main bout of Jack Gilbert's weekly card.

Snipes has fought here many times in the past several years. His last fight here was with Pete Cole, the Rome, Ga., fighter, who, up until the time he met Snipes, was the undisputed southern lightweight champion. "Honey Boy" won a decisive victory that night and has gone on to beat some of the best boys in the country. His victories include: Joe Barbarian, Chino Alvarez, Tony Leto, Armanda Videl, Jackie Mason, Joe Leon, Joe Ciro, Ray Snider, Pete Cole and many others.

In Sailor Born, Snipes is meeting one of the hardest-punching lightweights in the entire south, and a boy who has won 40 of his 45 fights. The Sailor created quite a sensation here sometime ago when he ran up a total of 21 consecutive knockouts. In recent months Born has done most of his battling in Florida, where he won the hearts of the fans of that state in stirring battles with Midget Genaro and Jimmie Wade.

Frank Adams, who is fast amassing a lengthy string of kayoes, will meet "Bull" Johnson in the eight-round semi-windup. Adams has scored three quick knockouts in his first three professional battles.

Young Ketchell will meet "Hambone" Kelly in the six-round preliminary and Ben Brown, former amateur scrapper, meets Young Dempsey in the other prelim. Five darkies, with their heads encased in tow sacks, will put on a battel royal to open the show.

Pete Twitty Sees Demand for Dogs

One of the first signs of the approach of the hunting season in Georgia—the demand for good hunting dogs—has been reported by Peter S. Twitty, state game and fish commissioner.

"We are looking for an unusually fine hunting season, as game of every kind seems to be plentiful, and we are already having many inquiries from hunters who desire to locate good dogs," Twitty said.

The commissioner added that the game and fish department's hunting dog bureau would operate again this year, and that dog owners who had dogs for sale could list them with the bureau at the state capitol, Atlanta.

Georgia To Be Strong With Tech as Unknown Quantity.

There are several clues here a there which lead one to believe th we are about to over-emphasize fo ball again.

It seems to me that the old delica ly attuned ears can catch the mea of the football coaches here and the and that there is an aroma of p skin on the air.

The first clue was discovered ov at Athens. Workmen were busy pairing the home of Mr. Harry Meh the head coach of the Bulldogs. "Th guy Mehre," said one of the workme "was so nervous on the nights befo his games that he shook the hou all loose. We're tightening it up."

"Do you mean," asked my oper tive, "that it is to be another ye like that?"

"Oh, no," said the workman, "b then we are tightening up the hou Things look some better this ye But you never can tell."

OFFICE IN SHAPE.

Out at Georgia Tech the office Mr. W. A. Alexander was found be in good shape. It is set in co crete. Nevertheless, there were so workmen examining the concrete.

"These football coaches are ha on offices," said the workmen. "So of this concrete looks a little shak but it will last another year."

To Stay With Phils

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Reports that Chuck Klein, slugging outfielder of the Phillies of the National league, would be sold to the Chicago Cubs for $100,000 were termed "absolutely ridiculous" today by Gerry Nugent, Phils' president.

He admitted, however, that the Cubs management had offered that amount of money for Klein "and they also offered to throw in Babe Herman and Pat Malone."

"That's a standing offer, and will hold during the winter months, but we have no intention of letting Klein go," Nugent said.

New Davis Cup Talent Is Sought by France

Captain Rene Lacoste Has Begun To Lay Plans Early; Old Stars Lost.

By Melvin Whiteleather,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

PARIS, September 12.—(AP)—Rene Lacoste, the captain of the French Davis cup team, is on the hunt for a new generation of tennis musketeers.

He began to lay his plans to recapture the famous trophy almost before the British had lugged the big bowl across the channel, but the French think the United States is the nation most likely to capture the trophy next year. They praised the intelligence of the Britons but still feel that Ellsworth Vines, Wilmer Allison, George Lott and John Van Ryn formed the strongest team of 1933.

Didier Poulain, tennis expert of L'Auto, classed this year's teams as follows: American, British, French, Australian and Japanese.

STARS "PENSIONED."

Lacoste's task meanwhile presents hard problems, for Henri Cochet, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, who with Lacoste brought the cup to France and kept it for six years, have been "pensioned." None excepting, perhaps, "Grandfather" Brugnon, is expected to take up his racquet again in Davis cup play.

Brugnon, the first of the famous musketeers, began Davis cup play in 1920 and there seems to be no end to his hard forehand drive.

Cochet said after his match with H. W. Austin in the challenge round that it was his last. Henri is going into business in a serious way. Professional tennis apparently has no lure for him.

Lacoste's search for recruits will take him to the 200,000 who play tennis in the third republic. Cups have been offered in verious regions for the best racquet wielders. A permanent council of advisors is to function in a desperate effort to uncover another Cochet, another Borotra, another Lacoste.

ANDRE MERLIN.

The 1934 cup team likely will be built around young Andre Merlin, who gave Fred Perry a scare in the deciding match of this year's challenge round. Merlin, thrown into the breach opened by Borotra's refusal to play singles, came out a hero and single-handed kept the French from weeping when the British won the cup. His plucky fight gave them hope for the future.

Merlin, who is 22, lost to Austin, but he took a set from Perry and had two set points for a second set. Had he won two he would have put Perry in a tight corner from which it would have been difficult to win.

Lacoste has to find at least two more to team with Merlin. It is widely believed that if France regains the famous trophy, it will be done by players still unknown.

Stribling, Odell Meet August 22

ROME, Ga., Aug. 12.—(Special.)—Benny Odell will fight W. L. "Young" Stribling in the Lindale ball park, August 22.

Odell has been fighting professionally three years. He has met and defeated some of the good boys. In this list is Babe Hunt, who is well known through this section.

Benny has had 105 fights, winning all but 12.

GRIMES RETURNS.

Burleigh Grimes cost the Cubs $45,000 and Hack Wilson when he was sent to Chicago by the Cards. However, the Cards got him back for nothing when the Cubs gave Grimes his unconditional release.

Cuban Paper Requests Diamond Scores First

HAVANA, Aug. 12.—(AP)—When the Associated Press news wire to Havana, in the frenzy of a revolutionary celebration, opened this afternoon the first message was a request from the newspaper El Mundo for "all the baseball scores of the past week."

Havana newspapers had been closed, as a result of the political disturbances, since last Saturday.

Simmons, Hartman Meet in Net Final

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(UP)—Arnold Simmons, of Louisville, the defending champion, and Leonard Hartman, of New York, former Columbia University basketball and tennis star, reached the final singles round of the national public parks tennis tournament today.

Simmons reached the final bracket by scoring a 6-2, 6-2, 2-6, 6-4 victory over Maurice Bayon, New Orleans, while Hartman advanced at the expense of George O'Connell, Chicago, 4-6, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3.

Simmons' victory was his third over Bayon in a rivalry that began nine years ago. He won by outplaying Bayon. They matched drives from the baseline but the winner was superior on passing shots.

Hartman won with ease, beating his opponent on service and covering plenty of ground.

SIMMONS HOLDS SHAKY MARGIN IN JUNIOR LOOP

Foxx, Persistent Rival, Only One Point Back of Chisox Star.

Dropping six points in a week with a season mark of .356, Al Simmons still has a slim lead of one point over his most persistent rival, Jimmy Foxx, who now is batting .355, and during the week just passed has driven in eight runs while the "Milwaukee Duke" was forced to be content with two. Foxx has batted in a total of 104 runs in 101 games and Simmons 100 in 105 games.

Manush with .338 is third and Joe Cronin with .336 fourth, and Hodapp completing the big five with a mark of .334.

Gehrig has scored the most runs, 90, Foxx being credited with 89, Simmons leads in hits, 157; Foxx in total bases, 271; Irving Burns in doubles, 35. Reynolds and Combs are tied in three baggers with 12 each; Foxx has the most home runs, 32; Cramer sacrifices 20, and Gerald Walker in stolen bases 19.

Presently there will be an argument concerning the number of consecutive games Lou Gehrig has played. According to the official red book Gehrig had appeared in 1,041 games at the close of the 1931 season but this did not include the first game of a double header played on June 1, 1925, in which Lou appeared as a pinch hitter. If that game were included his consecutive game record at the close of 1931 would total 1,042. In 1932 New York played 155 games not including a game with Detroit which was thrown out and ordered replayed by President Harridge, who at the same time, ordered players of both teams be given credit for playing the canceled game. With that canceled game included, Gehrig appeared in 1932 in 156 games which brought his total to 1,198 at the close of last year. As he has been in 104 games this season his consecutive record now has reached 1,302 games.

Queen Helen Faces Battle To Keep Title

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—The acknowledged queen of the tennis courts, Helen Wills Moody, recovered from a back ailment that kept her out of the Wightman cup matches last week, will equal the record of Molla Bjurstedt Mallory if she wins the women's national singles championship for the eighth time at Forest Hills next week. However, she faces the keenest competition at home in years.

Then a 17-year-old sensation from California, Miss Wills first won the national title in 1923 from Mrs. Mallory. She has not been defeated since in singles in the national tournament. Her winning streak was interrupted by an operation for appendicitis in 1926, when Mrs. Mallory returned to capture her eighth championship. Twice since then, in 1930 and 1932, Mrs. Moody has chosen to remain out of competition.

Mrs. Moody plays Dr. Esther Bartosh, another Californian, in the second match on the West Side courts Monday, following the opening grandstand contest between Betty Nuthall, English star, and Jane Sharp, of Los Angeles, at 1 p. m. (E. S. T.) Miss Nuthall won the American title in 1930.

The rivals of Miss Helen Jacobs, defending champion, and Mrs. Moody not only include the entire British Wightman cup team, featuring Dorothy Round and Peggy Scriven, but also a fine young group of homebred stars, among them Sarah Palfrey, Alice Marble and Josephine Cruickshank.

The entry list for the doubles competition closes Monday and play begins Tuesday.

CRACKERS SPLIT WITH MEMPHIS

hit off Phillips' shins, Hamel scoring. Brazill's double brought in Chiozza and Chapman and Carlos Moore replaced him to get the side out.

The Crackers might have had an even bigger inning in the first but for a sparkling one-hand stab of Red Barron's liner to turn it into a double play after Chatham had doubled and Rollings and McKee had singled in succession to produce the first run and McKee had scored on Bonowitz's infield out to short. Chatham and Rollings again featured in the third. Buster leading off with a single and Rollings driving a triple over Hamel's head to score him. "Red" counted on McKee's long fly to right.

McKEE TRIPLES.

McKee's triple to right and Asa Wall's single got the Crackers' last run in the eighth. Wall went into the game when Bonowitz, trying hard for Lieber's home run drive in the eighth, crashed into the negro bleachers, spraining his right arm. He may be out of the game a day or so.

The proposed Sunday game having been killed by an injunction, the Chicks will lie over here today for Monday's game, when the Crackers make their debut under Uncle Wilbert Robinson, who took over the management of the club when Charley Moore stepped out.

Dick Daviscourt Meets Sauer Here Tuesday

Dick Daviscourt and his flying elbow are returning to town. It was eight years ago that Dick Daviscourt came to Atlanta and won fame as "Rough Richard."

He comes back again Tuesday night at the baseball park to meet Pete Sauer, "The Crown Prince" of wrestling, in a finish match.

It is one of the best matches that has been scheduled for Atlanta in some months. It has been almost a year since Dick Daviscourt appeared here. Fans have asked for him time after time. Matchmaker Henry Weber accomplished a great bit of match-making when he signed Daviscourt to meet Pete Sauer.

Atlanta fans have learned this about Sauer. He is a dare-devil grappler who is willing to meet anyone who is selected for him. He never requests a postponement. That is one reason, perhaps, why he is not champion. He meets anyone. Without argument.

The match is a two-hour limit affair with the winner obliged to win two out of three falls. Daviscourt has always had a large following here. Sauer, as a prospective champion, is also popular.

In the semi-windup there is a card which the raw-meat boys will like. Chief Chewchki, pronounced Chewchki, will meet Chief Tom Marvin, the chin lock boy. Chief Marvin is an Osage, but he uses a Cherokee chin lock hold. Chief Chewchki is frankly a bit daffy. He has eaten straw hats, assaulted spectators and been a guest in some of our best jails.

Tickets are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters and at the Miner & Carter drug store.

A Few of the Principals in the Fox Hound Trials Next Month

Fox hounds from Georgia will be cast next month, September 4-8, inclusive, near Clarksville, in the annual running of the North Georgia fox hound trials. At the left is Henry Pittman, of Lake Burton, with some of his hounds. In the center is Old Bess. Doesn't she look grand? What big ears you have, Grandma! Old Bess was in last year's running and did well. At the right is Henry Moseley, of Toccoa, with a couple of his entries. It's a grand sport and a great crowd is expected when the first cast is made at Wykle's fishing camp on September 5.

WISE DAUGHTER IS RACE WINNER

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Wise Daughter, Fred Burton's $800 investment as yearling and recent winner of the Saratoga Sales Stakes, today again challenged for the 2-year-old championship as she won the 31st running of the Saratoga Special, a winner take-all event run over six furlongs before a crowd of 12,000.

The little daughter of Wise Counsellor, which began made her debut at Miami last winter, stepped the three-quarters of a mile in 1:12 3-5 under 119 pounds to account for her ninth victory in 15 starts. The sweepstakes' pot amounted to $8,500 and increased the filly's earnings to $21,540, while backers of the Burton silks, and there were many, received 11 to 5 for their confidence.

With Johnny Gelbert handling the reins, Wise Daughter took command after the first few strides and stepping along at a brisk pace quickly opened up daylight advantage. At the finish she was three lengths in front of Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, which finished third in the Arlington Park Futurity, another length to the rear trailed Hadagal from Warren Wright's Calumet farm, while Mrs. Payne Whitney's Black Buddy, winner of the National Stallion and Juvenile Stakes earlier in the season, again failed his stable, finishing far back.

ELZEA MEETS HARBIN MONDAY

Matchmaker Bill Corley will present an all-star wrestling card at Lakewood park Monday night, featuring two 90-minute limit bouts.

Eddie Elzea, the Danish star, meets George (Sully) Harbin, Atlanta's meanest man, and Frankie Light takes on Pup Jeffords, the Village Blacksmith, of Omaha, Neb.

The Masked Marvel, who has made a big hit at Lakewood this season, returns to meet Freddy Lassiter, of Winston-Salem, N. C.

The card is regarded as the best of the season at Lakewood and the fans believe that at last Sully Harbin is to meet his master.

Georgia Fox Hunters Planning Annual Trials

Walkers, Triggs and Julys To Compete Near Clarkesville Week of September 4.

By Ralph McGill.

Fox hunters of Georgia will assemble at the Wykle fishing camp near Clarkesville for the annual north Georgia fox hunting trials beginning September 4 and continuing through that week.

The meet was a great success last season, Walkers, Triggs and Julys competing in a great derby and all-age field.

The fishing camp, which is owned by fox hunters, is large enough to accommodate all comers. A rate of 90 cents a day, which is almost unbelievable considering the food and accommodations, has been made for the trials.

LAKE BURTON.

The camp is located at Lake Burton and the lake bars the foxes from going but one way when they want to run "big."

Some notable judges have been selected for the trials this year. Chief among them is Hugh Moore, who was master of hounds at the National Fox Hunters' Association trials last year. Moore is from Doyle, Tenn., and has acted as judge in most of the large meets of Tennessee and Kentucky as well as other national trials.

Frank Reese, of Taylorsville, N. C., and Ross Alexander, of Statesville, N. C., are the other judges. The master of hounds will be announced later.

The derby will be run on Tuesday and Wednesday mornings with the all-age scheduled for the last three days of the week.

WALKER HOUNDS.

Walker hounds will be largely represented by Henry Moseley Jr., Henry Pittman and Loy Friar, Clarkesville; N. G. Pharr, Dacula; B. C. McFarlin and E. B. Highsmith, Toccoa, and Walt Hill, Homer, Ga.

Trigg owners who are expected to attend are H. C. Long, Tate; C. E. McHawn, Nelsson, Ga.

Goodman hound owners are S. L. Welhorn, of Clarkesville, and others yet to enter from that section.

The July hounds will be run by The Wykle brothers, Hubert Burke, Clarkesville; Homer Little, Auburn.

150 LAST YEAR.

All these men entered three or more hounds last year and others are expected to join them this fall. More than 150 hounds competed in the 1932 trials.

Rarely does any fox hound trials attract such a wide variety of hounds as will be seen at the north Georgia trials. The national usually features Walker and July hounds with one or two Trigg and Goodman hounds entered.

A Goodman hound from Kentucky was the outstanding hound of last season.

Entries may be made by writing to H. T. Moseley Jr., at Toccoa, Ga., or to the Wykle fishing camp at Clarkesville, Ga.

Ring Cards

HOWELL MILL.

Another of the weekly Monday night wrestling cards will be presented at the Howell Mill Athletic Club starting at 8:15 o'clock.

Bill Ward, up-and-coming young grappler from Marietta, will share the spotlight in one of the two 90-minute, two-out-of-three falls feature attractions. He meets John Dameron, of Kirkwood, who has been throwing all opposition in his latest matches.

FAIR STREET.

The season's roughest match on the mat will be expected Monday night when George Romanoff, mat villian of California and a portrayer of ape-man roles in the movies, clashes with the Syrian champion from Detroit, Sammy Miller, in one of the two feature matches at the Fair Street open-air arena, opposite the James L. Key golf course.

"Gentleman" John Mauldin, of Center Hill, will have his hands full when he endeavors to pin the shoulders of "Ripper" Reeres, former football star of the University of Florida, in the other 90-minute, three-fall match.

CENTER HILL ARENA.

Sun Almand grapples with the huge bulk of George (Sully) Harbin in one of the feature attractions Tuesday night. In the other headliner Eddie Wagner will meet Young Gotch from Miami.

Gene Mason and Allen Dunn will meet in a 30-minute wrestling match. Several minor acts will raise the curtain.

WEST LAKE ARENA.

Two redheads will meet Friday night when Eddie Wagner and Red Powell engage in the main go of the evening's performance. Powell is a clean-cut wrestler, while Wagner is of the rugged type and out to win regardless, all of which goes to make the match interesting.

WEST VIEW ARENA.

Sun Almand, who has not lost a match in some time, may lose his standing Thursday night when he meets Gentleman John Mauldin in the big match on the evening's program.

AVONDALE.

Two professional women wrestlers will clash in a 40-minute, two out of three falls match, at Avondale Friday night. Miss Francis Gomez, 147 pounds, New York, who is returning to the ring after some months' absence due to broken ribs, will meet Miss Bobbie DeWitt, 145 pounds, of Kansas City, Missouri.

MOORE WISHES 'ROBBY' SUCCESS

seemed to happen to keep us from winning; but I know the majority of the players have been loyal and conscientious and I have no criticism to make of them.

"Naturally I feel badly, very badly, over having to go; this is the first loser I have had, and the first release I have ever received as a manager; I consider it a release, for I've never yet quit on a job; it may be that the fans here or my employers didn't understand me; they hadn't had much chance to know me, but I'll say that I never saw better or more loyal fans. In going, I wish them the best of luck, which can only be a winner."

Moore took the matter very calmly. He came by to shake hands with Wilbert Robinson, Colonel Huston and newspapermen after the game. He smiled as he wished Uncle Robby luck. He said he had no immediate plans for the future, but would remain in Atlanta a day or so. He talked with Nap Rucker, an old friend, who gave him his first job as manager in 1929 and Rucker is working on something for him.

"It's just the breaks of the games; I couldn't win and I'm getting out, which is the only thing to expect," Moore concluded. He added that he had no hard feelings toward the owners of the Atlanta club and that they had been fair in all their dealings.

Wallace Wade Seeks Quarterback, Blocker

DURHAM, N. C., Aug. 12.—Wallace Wade, commandant of Duke University's football forces, finds two heavy problems weighing down his capable shoulders as he makes plans for his 1933 Blue Devil grid machine. He needs a field general and a blocking back.

Graduation weeded the ranks of these two all-important positions. Artie Ershler, the blocker and defensive fullback, who, in Coach Wade's opinion, was the best man at his job in the south, is gone. Also missing this fall will be 1932 Captain Lowell Mason, the dynamic field general, and Ken Abbott, halfback, who did the directing when Mason was out of the contest.

EARLY TESTS.

Unless candidates "come through" in these positions who are "naturals," this backfield situation will be dangerously serious. It would take until mid-season to develop experienced performers and before that time the Blue Devils face probably their two toughest foes—Tennessee and Auburn, the Southern conference co-champions of 1932.

The only letter man returning in either of the positions is Tarzan Belue, who was relief man in the blocking back position last season. In winter practice "Horse" Hendrickson, letter man reserve halfback of 1932, and Snooky Tarrall, non-letterman end last season, were shifted to that post by Coach Wade. Ed West, non-letterman reserve of 1932, will be a candidate for the post, as will Swede Nordstrom, sophomore. West was shifted from end.

The easiest solution of the Duke mentor's problems would be for either Hendrickson or Belue to take over both jobs and both will be given trials in early fall practices. Belue, handicapped by size, but a real scrapper, has experience as a blocker but has never called signals. On the other hand, Hendrickson called signals as a freshman but is untried as a blocker. Both are seniors, Belue serving as substitute the past two years, while Hendrickson was out most of the time with injuries.

OTHER RESERVES.

Othe possible field generals are Nick Laney, star triple-threat halfback of the past two years; Bob Cox, reserve fullback last year, and Jack Alexander, sophomore. Laney and Cox were used at rare intervals last season and Alexander barked signals for the 1932 freshman eleven.

The Blue Devils will start drills Labor Day morning, September 4. Coach Wade will invite 50 candidates to report at that time.

TATE TOURNEY ATTRACTS STARS

TATE, Ga., Aug. 12.—Extensive plans have been completed for the annual mid-summer Lake Sequoyah invitation golf tournament scheduled Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Invitations have been sent to every golf club in the state and entries already have exceeded those of last year.

Charlie Yates, Berrien Moore Jr., John Westmoreland, Dave and Charlie Black Jr. head a delegation from Atlanta.

Charles Dannals Jr., from the Capital City Country Club, Atlanta, won the title last year but is not expected to defend his crown.

Billy McWilliams, the Georgia champion from Rome, will head a delegation of north Georgia golfers which also includes the eight Jones' from Canton and others from Marietta, Tate, Blue Ridge and Nelson.

Several entries are expected from Savannah.

A permanent trophy in addition to the Sam Tate trophy will be given the winner of the title. The Tate cup will be held for one year and will become the permanent possession of the golfer winning it three times.

Trophies and prizes will be given the winner and runner up in each flight and the consolations and there will be as many flights as necessary to take care of every entry.

FONDREN WINS OVER REDMOND

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 12.—(UP)—The Asheville-Biltmore Forest Golf championship today went to W. O. Fondren, local champion, when he defeated Ralph Redmond, St. Petersburg, Fla., southern amateur champion, 1 up in the 36-hole final round.

Both players stuck to conservative golf through most of the match, but slipped into erratic playing at times.

Redmond stroked his way into the finals yesterday by trouncing Alfred Dowtin, 3 and 1.

The husky Floridan had likewise battled his way to the finals with a victory over Garfield Miller Jr., a summer resident here.

BORGMANN IS STAR.

Benny Borgmann, remembered by basketball fans as one of the better known stars of the old pro league, is playing baseball for the Columbus American Association team. He's a .300 hitter, too.

Ford V-8 To Start 10,000-Mile Economy Drive Here on Monday

Strictly Stock Model Car To Run Over Route Covering Any Road Condition

Drive To Be Completed in Eleven Days; Speed To Be With Low at All Times.

For the purpose of proving the advance made in automobile engineering and what it means to the motorist, a 10,000-mile conomy run will start in Atlanta at 7. a. m. Monday, August 14, to establish the flexibility and econmy of the new Ford V-8 cars.

A few years ago 250 or 300 miles a day were considered very unusual and even that mileage was obtained at the sacrifice of economy and was only attempted by cars of the highest price group. The route of this run will measure over 480 miles and it is required to make contact in each town at fixed published hours twice daily.

The car will be known as the Silver Ford V-8 Economy car. It is strictly a stock model in every respect. The same type that would go to any purchaser, with the exception of the color. It has been finished in silver with yellow hood top and panels, and can be easily distinguished coming down the road. A siren will herald its arrival in each city.

While the Ford V-8 is capable of traveling over 80 miles per hour, the average speed on this run will be between 40 and 50 miles per hour in order to comply with local and state laws. It would be an easy matter, of course, to run at lower speed and thus get higher gasoline and fuel mileage, but the miles to be covered each day are of such distance as to require a speed that insures a severe yet fair test from every angle. The route to be covered measures 480 miles and represents a distance of 960 miles in all daily. The following towns will be visited: Atlanta, Lawrenceville, Buford, Gainesville, Jefferson, Athens, Winder, Monroe, Covington, Lithonia, Conyers, Roswell, Marietta, Cartersville, Rome, Cedartown, Rockmart, Dallas, Douglasville, Villa Rica, Carrollton, Newnan, Senoia, Griffin, Jackson, McDonough, and back to Atlanta.

Along the route the car will be refueled at official stations designated by the Wofford Oil Company, Georgia distributors for Woco-Pep and Purol products, which company will have complete supervision over this important phase of the run. The gasoline tank and the hood will be locked with special locks and a complete check given as to the amount of gasoline and oil put into the car, and at the conclusion of the run, the company will furnish affidavits substantiating their findings.

Capable drivers have been secured to handle the car during this drive. They will take the Ford V-8 over and over the route until the 10,000 miles have been covered. They understand the severity of this test both to car and drivers, for the route selected covers practically every type road found in these United States. There will be hard surface roads, chert roads, top-soiled roads, washboard roads, winding roads and rolling roads, and in inclement weather will be a very difficult drive, to say the least.

Much interest already has been aroused in various cities and towns that the car will visit. Ford dealers and Woco-Pep service stations have made arrangements to receive the car in grand style upon each visit. Special displays and demonstrations having been arranged as an added feature.

SMITH WILL ASSIST IN DRAFT OF CODE

The Atlanta Automobile Association, made up of practically all automobile dealers in the Atlanta territory, and a number of allied trade lines, announced that John E. Smith will leave for St. Louis the first part of the week, where he will represent this district on the national committee of the National Automobile Dealers' Association, which will draft the final code of fair business practices for automobile retailing, following which it will be filed with the administration in Washington.

Mr. Smith is a director of the national association, and was elected recently at a district meeting of dealers as district chairman, to assist in drafting the national code. Pending the adoption of the permanent code for automobile retailing, practically all of the dealers in this territory are operating under the president's re-employment agreement.

Wednesday evening at a 6:30 o'clock dinner at the Atlanta Athletic Club, a meeting of automobile service managers will be held to exchange views on the manner in which they have adjusted working conditions in their service departments to bring them under the president's re-employment agreement.

Fire "Toots."

When M. R. Fosberg's barn caught fire at Hood River, Ore., early one morning it set off its own alarm. The blaze reached a truck in the structure and burned a wire on the vehicle's horn, causing a short circuit and the instrument to toot lustily.

Governor Pollard Considers Plea For Pardon for Dog Ruled Killer

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 12.—(AP)—Virginia's Governor Pollard and his executive bride, on their honeymoon here, have before them a petition for pardon in the case of:

"The commonwealth of Virginia vs. one black and white setter dog, the property of Mrs. Marian J. Belk."

Don, a keen setter with black ticks and black ears, was charged with killing sheep, and after a justice court hearing, was converted in the Albemarle county circuit court.

Don was condemned to expatriation under the pain of death if found within the limits of the commonwealth in violation of a court order.

Mrs. Belk, who was given the dog when he was a puppy, denies the charge that her dog killed a neighbor's sheep, and asserted that the order was entered in the absence of the dog.

"Should your excellency see fit to grant the petitioner's poor prayer, meaning so little to the indifferent and unthinking many, but so much to your petitioner, she will gladly enter into any bond or assurance that your excellency may prescribe to keep said dog safely and guarantee that he will never attack or molest live stock of any kind," Mrs. Belk said in her petition.

Mrs. Pollard, the governor's executive secretary, who handles all pardon routine, read this petition, and turned it over to the chief, who immediately sought consultation with the court, and the commonwealth's attorney of the county, and if possible, the justice who heard Don's case.

GOLD EXPORTS BAN IS PARTIALLY LIFTED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Gold export prohibitions have been amended by the treasury department to permit the shipment of the metal in the form of unretorted amalgam, cyanide precipitates, concentrates and unsmelted ore.

MATTRESS FEATURED AT CHICAGO'S FAIR

The Spring-Air mattress, a product of the Master Bedding Makers of America, which is handled by the Bedding store, 136 Whitehall street, S. W., is the only featured mattress at the Century of Progress Fair in Chicago.

The makers of this mattress claim that it makes a person sleep utterly relaxed and brings complete rest.

It is also claimed that the mattress does not lose any of its buoyant quality with use and age. It continues to give buoyancy and relaxation to its user indefinitely.

Its Karr spring construction has the elasticity of live rubber. There are no cloth pockets to wear out. There are no knots and nothing rigid and harsh to break or become noisy with use.

The mattress responds to the slightest touch, yet supports the heaviest weight perfectly. Every inch and ounce, according to the makers, is sheer flexibility.

More than 1,000 of the country's leading institutions of various types have discovered the Spring-Air mattress.

Its durability and continued buoyancy are guaranteed by the makers of Spring-Air mattresses.

AC SPARK PLUG GAINS 125 PER CENT IN JULY

July sales increased 125 per cent in dollar volume over July year ago and pay roll increased 115 per cent, AC Spark Plug Company report states. July sales, however, were 10.9 per cent under those of June this year, but ahead of last May.

Some 700 workers were added in July and more than 1,600 since April 1.

Present unfilled orders are far in excess of a year ago and indications point to continuance of high operating levels this month, Harlow H. Curtice, president, stated.

PONTIAC REGISTERS SALE GAIN IN JULY

The 1933 Pontiac, largest-selling straight eight in the world, registered during July an increase of 7,651 retail sales over deliveries in the same month of 1932, according to Sales Manager R. K. White. Pontiac, he stated, now is selling approximately four out of each 10 straight eights delivered by the entire automotive industry.

"Pontiac sales for the first seven months of 1933 exceed the same period of 1932 by 21,828 units," said Mr. White.

"Heavy retail demand during July of this year brought a progressive sales increase in each of the 10-day periods of the month. The second period exceeded the first 10 days by 623 units and the third period exceeded the first by 1,561 cars. Production continues to hold up well and dealers' stocks of new cars still are comparatively low."

The Silver Ford V-8 Economy Car

Plans have all been completed for the Ford V-8 economy run that will start in Atlanta Monday morning, August 14. This car, to be known as the "Silver Ford V-8," is strictly a stock car in every respect. The run planned for it will cover a distance of ten thousand miles, which it will attempt to cover in eleven days.

The route it will traverse measures 480 miles and it is required to make each town on published scheduled time twice daily. It will visit the establishments of Atlanta Ford dealers for a short stop each trip, where a check can be made as to miles covered and the average miles per gallon of gasoline.

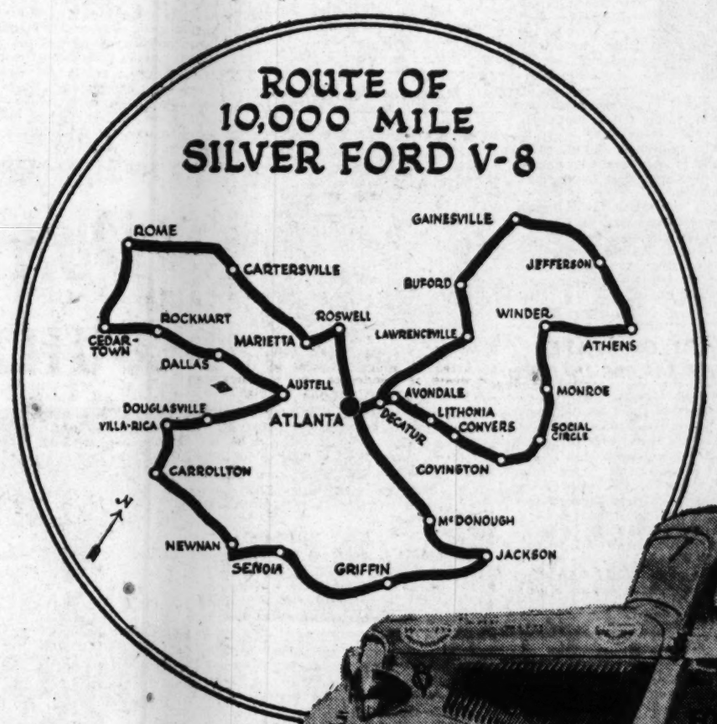

Georgia Ford Party Are Guests of Company

Georgians who bought Ford cars to be delivered to them at Dearborn are shown above at a banquet in Dearborn, where they were guests of the Ford Motor Company. Each purchaser was given, without additional cost, a trip to Dearborn and to the Century of Progress Fair at Chicago, and received expense money as well.

The Silver Ford V-8 10,000 Mile Economy Run

Starts Tomorrow

WATCH THE SILVER FORD . . . .

Tomorrow morning promptly at 7 A. M. "The Silver Ford V-8" Economy car will start a grind of 10,000 miles, to prove its durability and economy of operation.

OF COURSE we already know the economy of the new Ford V-8. But to give you indisputable evidence, tomorrow the Ford dealers in co-operation with the Wofford Oil Company, distributors for Woco Pep Motor Fuel and Tiolene oil, will start a drive over a route we believe to cover every road condition in America. Traveling over these roads the car will encounter hard surface roads, dirt roads, top-soiled roads, clay roads, rolling country and city traffic.

A Ford V-8 Delux 2-Door Sedan has been selected for this drive. It is a standard model car in every respect.

The gasoline tank and hood will be locked and only keys left at especially designated Woco Pep Stations will be able to open them for refueling.

The route picked for the drive measures 480 miles, and the car is required to make two complete trips daily—arriving in each town on a published scheduled time. Or as near to it as possible.

Be on hand at your nearest Ford dealer's place of business when the car arrives. Check with the driver and observer, the miles it has covered and the gasoline mileage it has obtained daily.

On the Air Today

Ravel's famous "Bolero," one of the most consistently popular of recent symphonic works, will be featured by Hans Kindler, conducting his farewell broadcast with the Philadelphia Summer Concerts orchestra, from 6:30 to 8:30 o'clock tonight over WGST and a coast-to-coast Columbia network.

John Corigliano, concert violinist, will be heard as soloist in the Violin Concerto in E minor, by Jules Conus, when he appears with Howard Barlow and the Columbia Symphony orchestra from 1 to 2 o'clock this afternoon over the WGST-Columbia network.

Alexander Schreiner, European-trained organist, will be the soloist on the program of religious and secular music to be broadcast over WGST and the Columbia network from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock this morning direct from the Mormon tabernacle in Salt Lake City. Anthony C. Lund will direct the choir of more than 300 mixed voices.

Mark Warnow's orchestra and the Do Re Mi trio will weave a musical pattern of Manhattan Moods during the program to be heard over the WABC-Columbia chain and WGST from 12:30 to 1 o'clock this afternoon. The trio will try their special blend of harmony on the current song hit, "Lazybones," and also "I Would Do Anything for You;" and take the vocal choruses of "You're My Lucky Charm," "Rhythm Everywhere," "Beloved," "Hold Your Man" and "I'm Lonesome."

The sacred composition, "Christ Went Up Into the Hills," by Hageman, will open the recital by John Kelvin, Irish tenor, from 12 to 1 o'clock this afternoon over WABC and the Columbia network. Kelvin will be accompanied by Emery Deutsch's orchestra.

Secular melodies to be sung by Kelvin will be the Meyer-Helmund concert number, "Flirtation" and O'Brien's "Fairy Tree." Deutsch's orchestral contributions will be "Love's Old Sweet Song" and the old Celtic march, "Cead Mille Failte" (A Hundred Thousand Welcomes.)

Works of Gounod will be featured on the Cathedral Hour presentation under the direction of Channon Collinge from 2 to 3 o'clock this afternoon over WGST and a nation-wide Columbia network. Soloists include Mildred Rose, soprano; Barbara Maurel, contralto, and Crane Calder, bass.

Freddie Rich, dance music maestro, will present a half-hour revue featuring Mildred Bailey, the Do Re Mi trio, Comedian Jack White, and the Eton Boys quartet at 8:30 o'clock tonight over WGST and the Columbia chain.

Vera Van, contralto, will feature the "Song of Love" from the immortal musical show, "Blossom Time," during her recital from 3:15 to 3:30 o'clock this afternoon over the WABC-Columbia chain and WGST. The currently popular tunes she will submit are "Under a Blanket of Blue," "You Keep Me in Hot Water All the Time" and "Marching Along Together." The accompanying orchestra will be heard in the musical exclamation, "It's Great To Be Alive."

GIRL, 16, GAINS FAME AS "TORCH SINGER"

A 16-year-old Atlanta girl has within a few weeks of singing "torch" songs leaped to the forefront of radio station artists and if expectations of her sponsors materialize, she soon will be heard on network broadcasts. Her name is Manfrey Duke, and her voice is of that low, husky vital type that is appealing through a microphone.

MANFREY DUKE.

Miss Duke is credited having a perfect "natural" in her voice. Unknown to her, her vocal tones have been developing since childhood and at present she is one of the most popular of Atlanta radio stars. She never took vocal instruction.

At an early age Miss Duke began to improvise songs, singing in the backyards of neighbor houses to entertain playmates. At an early date she expects to sing one of her own compositions on her regular program, which is billed on WGST as "Miss Seiberling."

SECRETARY OF STATE SPENT $87,896 IN 1932

The total cost of operating the office of secretary of state in 1932 was $87,986.99, State Auditor Tom Wisdom reported to Governor Talmadge Saturday after an examination of the accounts of Secretary of State John B. Wilson. Most of the cost of operating the office is paid through fees charged by its various divisions.

The cost of operating Mr. Wilson's main office proper was $21,615.43, while $15,064.45 went for the securities division and $6,726.77 was spent in operating the department of archives and history.

A total of $4,490.24 was expended by the various state examining boards operated under the department.

Mr. Wisdom highly praised Mr. Wilson's bookkeeping methods and thanked members of the secretary's office staff for the assistance given the auditors.

BOWEN'S BOND RAISED BY BOYKIN TO $20,000

Solicitor-General Says He Has New Evidence Against Ottley Kidnaper.

As Solicitor-General John A. Boykin Saturday raised the bond of Pryor Bowen, 17, admitted accomplice of William R. Delenski in the kidnaping of John K. Ottley to $20,000, Len B. Gillebeau, Bowen's attorney, announced he is ready for trial.

Gillebeau had been attempting to obtain a reduction of the $10,000 bond under which Bowen was held, but Boykin Saturday said he had newly discovered evidence to show that Bowen's contention that he was enmeshed into the abduction plot against his will was without foundation.

The solicitor declined to make public what the new evidence was. A hearing had been set on the bond reduction effort in Bowen's behalf, but because of the illness of Ottley, it had been postponed. Boykin's action Saturday makes Bowen's bond the same as Delenski's.

There was the probability that a joint trial will be held for the defendants early in September, although no definite date had been set. Both remained in the Fulton tower.

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR LUPTON TODAY

A tribute to J. T. Lupton, late friend and benefactor of Oglethorpe University and philanthropist of Chattanooga, Tenn., will be symbolized in the form of a memorial service to be conducted this afternoon by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University. The service will begin at 5 o'clock and will be broadcast in its entirety over station WJTL, the radio division of the university, the call letters of which include the initials of its donator, Lupton.

The program for the service will be as follows:

Hymn—"For God So Loved the World."
Reading—"A Common Thought," by Henry Timrod.
Hymn—"One Sweetly Solemn Thought."
Reading—From the "Eternal Goodness," by John Greenleaf Whittier.
Hymn—"There is no Death."
Reading—From Tennyson, "In Memoriam." "O, That 'Twere Possible."
Memorial address by Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe University.
Hymn—"The Strife is O'er, the Battle Done."
Committal prayer.

A similar memorial program dedicated to Lupton will be broadcast each year over WJTL on the anniversary of his death. The memory of Lupton has been permanently enshrined in Lupton hall, located on the Oglethorpe campus and one of the most complete college buildings in the south. Lupton hall houses the WJTL studios, a large library, printing office, gymnasium, chapel, classrooms and dormitory quarters for students.

The CONSTITUTION'S STAMP CORNER

—By N. S. Noble

NIRA, IOWA, NRA OFFICE.

The most important news for stamp collectors right now appears to be about the new United States issues which will be emitted this month. First is the NRA Emergency Postage stamp, due to be placed on first-day sale in Washington, D. C., August 15 (next Tuesday), and on second-day sale at Nira, Iowa, August 17 (next Thursday). Then follows on August 25 the Century of Progress special Philatelic Exhibition sheets of 25 each of the 1-cent and 3-cent values. The exhibition sheets will be flatplate printings, imperforated and ungummed.

Reports on the plate proofs of the exhibition sheets state that these two imperforated stamps will be much more beautiful than the original issue, due to flatplate printing, which always brings out colors and details far better than the quicker rotary press method.

The postoffice department, in preparing for the NRA emergency stamp on short notice, has broken all records of the department in speed of designing, making the plates and starting the presses.

As to the C. of P. imperforates, the postoffice definitely will not handle first-day covers for collectors. These may be obtained, and as the date of issue is August 25, there still is plenty of time, through friends or dealers.

Frankly, this department feels that too much emphasis is being placed on covers and cachets. They may be designated an adjunct to stamp collecting, but they are hard to handle, often are not attractive, cannot be hinged on album pages and their value is theoretical. Really, collecting covers is not stamp collecting. However, many thousands derive pleasure from this hobby—and after all a hobby is a hobby because it is a pleasure and a recreation.

PRINCE ON STAMPS.

On the occasion of the seventieth anniversary of the founding of the Sokol organization in Ljubljana, the Yugoslav postal authorities have issued two commemorative stamps.

The stamps are valued at one and two dinars, one-fourth of the face value to be donated to the Sokol organization. The one dinar is grayish green, the two dinar light red.

Both stamps show the Yugoslav crown prince in Sokol uniform.

COLLECTORS' NOTES.

While the Atlanta postoffice will not have the Century of Progress imperforate sheets of 25 stamps on sale (they will not be distributed to postmasters), Atlanta will have all the NRA emergency postage stamps needed for mailing purposes as well as for the collectors. The NRA first printing order is for 400,000,000 stamps. They will go on sale as soon after next Thursday as it is possible to supply the offices here from Washington.

Nira, Iowa, which happens to be a town with a name whose letters are the abbreviation for National Industrial Recovery Act, and because of this will be the first place to have the NRA stamps on sale other than Washington, has a fourth-class postoffice.

The Kosciusko memorial stamp, which will be issued in October, will be a 5-cent value and blue in color. Designs are being studied for the stamp, which will be printed by the flatplate process. It is expected that about 50,000,000 will be printed. Those who urged the stamp to honor the Polish general and patriot asked that it be a 5-cent value so that it could be used on mail to Poland.

Not many years ago, we issued the Pulaski commemorative stamp for the Polish revolutionary hero who was killed in battle at Savannah. Then recently, Poland issued the Washington stamp, with two Polish heroes sharing the honor that nation did our first president. Now we come back with another Pole who threw his slot in with us in the Revolutionary War. Maybe Poland can find a way to honor another American, as it appears we are one up on them now.

Numerous requests have been received at the postoffice department for a stamp to further honor Washington. This stamp would be to commemorate his resignation from the army at Annapolis. Such strong support is being given the request that it is possible it may be granted. If not, Philip H. Ward, in Mekeel's, says that possibly the occasion of British troops leaving American soil will be the last Revolutionary event to be depicted on our stamps for the time being.

NAVAL COVERS.

All ship cover collectors will get a break if they will send covers to:

Sergeant Razzette writes that he will be glad to accommodate any collector desiring cancellations from air or battleships, cruisers, etc., from time to time without charge. He asks that covers not exceed ten for any one sending. They are to be held and mailed as cancellations and cachets come up. When the fleet arrives in the fall he will be glad to accept more than ten covers. He is a collector and a good scout and all sendings should have commems on the outside wrapper. Please watch this, as he is helping all of us.

Collectors who desire may remit 5 cents for each cover to cover actual expenses, envelopes, stamps, trouble, etc., and can remit in 1, 2 and 3-cent stamps. He can also furnish U. S. Naval Station cancellations for those who want them. All mail will come back under United States stamps and not Cuban. So use 3-cent postage for covers which you stamp and send ready to go.

Orders for this stamp in mint condition may now be sent to the philatelic section, financial branch, postoffice department, Ottawa, Canada, and will receive the earliest possible attention. Remittances should be made payable to the receiver general of Canada, and if from points outside Canada must include postage and registration fees in addition to face value of stamps.

RACKETS' DEFEAT SEEN BY COPELAND

Senator Predicts Victory for Government Over Pernicious Evil.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Confidence was expressed by Senator Royal S. Copeland today that industrial racketeering is about to be forced out of the nation.

"I am confident," asserted Copeland, chairman of the United States senate subcommittee investigating rackets, "that the grip which racketeers have fastened upon industry in this nation is to be torn off.

"To do that effectively strong federal legislation and perhaps an amendment to the constitution will be required. Whatever is needed will come as a result of popular demand just as soon as the public realizes the extent and strength of this peculiar phase of criminality."

Copeland said that President Roosevelt's "deep interest" in the committee's drive against rackets doubly assured its eventual success.

Members of the judiciary, police officials and lawyers will gather here Monday and Tuesday for the first public hearings by the committee. Sessions will be held later in Chicago and Detroit.

The committee hearings, receipt of confidential communications and secret testimony of unsworn witnesses, Copeland said, will precede "a more severe course of investigation."

Copeland asserted that even though a constitutional amendment is required he is confident that out of the inquiry will grow a federal police force, modeled after Scotland Yard, designed to combat racketeering.

"Racketeering is not new with us but it has developed during the last 15 years even more rapidly than anyone realized," asserted Senator Copeland.

QUALITY OIL SALES SHOW AN INCREASE

OIL CITY, Pa., Aug. 12.—Sales of quality motor oils and lubricants for the second quarter of 1933 show a decided increase over the same period last year, according to Samuel Messer, president of the Quaker State Oil Refining Company. Reports from all sections of the country have convinced Mr. Messer that the summer months may show gains greater than any comparable period since 1930. Distribution through approximately 80,000 independent dealers makes possible an accurate check on the buying pulse of the nation's motorists.

"We are particularly pleased by the apparent return to 'quality buying,' after three years of 'price buying.' Owners of thousands of old cars in use long past their normal span have now had time to learn the painful lesson that cheap oils are conducive to repair bills.

"Another factor increasing sales at retail outlets is the promotional value of quality oils and lubricants to local dealers. Quaker State oils were originally placed on the market as a result of demands from car manufacturers for a high quality oil which would successfully lubricate high speed motors. This super-refined oil was soon favored by thousands of car owners leading, in time, to a nation-wide distribution.

"Latest engineering developments by car makers have further aided the cause of the quality refiner and his dealer. Great advances in the development of high pressure gears have increased mechanical efficiency, improved quietness of operation and made possible the smart new models with lowered chassis through reduction in size of the gears.

"These new extreme pressure gears must have specialized extreme pressure lubricants to insure successful operation, as they develop a rubbing speed and pressure per unit of tooth area far greater than encountered in the old type gears. As sales of new cars increase, refiners of quality lubricants will benefit by this new market."

BIBLE LANDS FILM FEATURE PROVIDED FOR B. Y. P. U. GROUP

Students and teachers in Sunday school work will find much of interest in the classes and features of the thirty-eighth annual B. Y. P. U. training school of the Atlanta association to be held August 21-25 at the First Baptist church. Moving pictures of Bible lands, classes in story-telling methods and materials, group singing and a class in the first division of the Sunday school manual are being offered during this week of study. Outstanding teachers from six southern states compose the faculty.

In the belief that it would be possible to make Bible lands more real to many interested in this subject by reproducing scenes in moving pictures, the Rev. William Russell Hamilton, of Louisville, Ky., spent four months of study and travel throughout the majority of the lands mentioned in the Bible, taking moving pictures of interesting places and people. Much more than it would be possible to bring to life, these scenes through still pictures Mr. Hamilton has got the modern activities of these lands and places of historic and Biblical interest in a way that holds the interest of young and old alike. These moving pictures will be shown several mornings and several evenings during the week of training.

DANCING MASTERS PLACE ATLANTAN ON 1933 FACULTY

Mrs. Charles E. La Fontaine, Atlanta dancing instructor, will be on the faculty of the Chicago Association of Dancing Masters in convention in Chicago at the Congress hotel from August 20 to 28 and will present a number of children's dances, for which she has been famous for many years. The convention will assemble hundreds of dancing teachers from all over the nation to study and discuss the latest developments in technique and arrangement.

During the convention Mrs. La Fontaine will present a number of her own creations, for which she has written the music. From 10 to 11 o'clock August 27 Mrs. La Fontaine will exhibit children's novelty dances, and on August 26 she will give a demonstration of the dances she teaches Atlanta children.

The program prospectus as arranged by the dancing association features Mrs. La Fontaine as one of the leaders in American dancing circles. She is described as "an artist who has completed her twelfth year of dancing and is noted for her originality." The Atlanta dancer is particularly noted for her famous specialty number, "Me and My Sister." Picture in today's pictorial gravure section.

UNDERPASS PLANNED ON NORTH SIDE DRIVE

As W. E. Mitchell, chairman of the citizens' commission passing on the improvement program of Atlanta and Fulton county, Saturday called a meeting of the special committee to consider erection of a joint city and county jail, the commissioners laid plans to construct an underpass at North Side drive and the Southern railway. The meeting will be held Monday morning in Mitchell's office.

Mitchell heads a special committee charged with working out details of a program calling for construction of a joint jail in the interest of efficiency and economy and also for the purpose of housing all courts and jails of the two governments.

Building of the underpass has been agitated for the past several years. The crossing has been one of the most dangerous in the Atlanta area for many years. It would cost approximately $150,000.

PLAN VAGABOND TOUR FOR CHICAGO FAIR

The "Vagabond Tour," arranged to carry Georgians to the World's Fair for Georgia Day, will leave Atlanta on the Southern railway August 20, with pleasure seekers from every part of the state.

This tour is being operated by Thompson Tours, 913 Healey building. The sale of these tickets at the Southern railway city ticket office, 57 Luckie street, as well as the Healey building office, has been arranged.

Frank M. Thompson, operating this tour, says that the party will receive many surprises, especially on the train on both going and return trips, and promises that all aboard will be happy. The tour is planned to appeal to all classes of people, especially the younger set.

Bookings are coming along very rapidly, even this far in advance, for the choices of the hotel rooms he has reserved for the Vagabonds at the Hotel Sherman, one of the better hotels in Chicago.

By THE BIBLE GAME EDITOR.

The number of letters addressed to this department displaying unrestrained enthusiasm toward the Bible Game is constantly increasing. It is obvious that the feature is providing an inspiring pastime for all who love the Scriptures.

Readers who are searching for the most appropriate verse-answers for the series of pictures have been greatly encouraged by the vivid manner in which the various scenes are depicted by the noted artist, and the faithfulness of his characterizations.

Bouquets

I think this contest your paper is conducting is the sweetest one I have ever known, being a blessing as well as profitable. It will long be remembered by all Bible readers, and will acquaint all with the fact that the Bible is very interesting. I am sure it will be a blessing for all concerned. —Mrs. W. W. P., Atlanta.

I think this is the best game that has ever been published.—Mrs. J. M. M., Clarkesville, Ga.

After I started saving the pictures for myself, my children, about grown, got interested, and they are reading the Bible more trying to solve them. So, you see, this is something you are conducting worth more than gold and silver to the young people.—J. M. A., Douglasville, Ga.

I think the Bible Game is wonderful. I am learning much of God's Word.—Mrs. J. P. D., Woodstock, Ga.

The writer is a close student of your Bible Game, and is finding it a most interesting and fascinating occupation. The picture is always the first thing I look for in the morning. It is not only interesting, but instructive. I was brought up to reverence the Bible, from my mother's knee; but the study of this game has given me a better knowledge of the Scriptures than I ever had before.—L. V. C. F., Atlanta.

I think the Bible Game is wonderful, and I know it will be a great help to all who enter into it.—Mrs. M. S., Millen, Ga.

CCC MEN ARE CAMPED ON ROSECRANS ROAD

CLOUDLAND FOREST CAMP, CLOUDLAND, Ga., Aug. 12.—Veterans of the World War and the Spanish-American War soon will be encamped along the road General Rosecrans cut across the wilderness to Lookout mountain in an attempted surprise attack during the Battle of Chickamauga.

A work camp is being established 18 miles north of the Hotel Lahusage, headquarters of Veterans Company No. 2417, civilian conservation corps, which is at Manning, Ga. The company street of this encampment traverses a knoll over which General Rosecrans moved his division from Huntsville to Chickamauga in 1863. The old road cut through the wilderness by northern soldiers is still used in certain sections and is now known as "Yankee road."

AUTOMOBILE RADIOS GAIN IN POPULARITY

Evidence of the increasing popularity of automobile radios was presented in a report recently received by A. R. Mauriocourt, local manager of the Western Auto Supply Company, showing that Western Auto stores are now selling and installing more than four times as many auto radios as they did in 1932.

"Automobile radios are an automobile accessory," says A. R. Mauriocourt. "Western Auto leads the field in automobile accessory sales, so it is only natural that they should take the lead in automobile radio sales. Our stores are equipped to correctly install car radios. This is of utmost importance and it is not overlooked by car owners when selecting such equipment.

"The acceptance of automobile radios by the public is largely due to the improvements which have been made in automobile receiving sets in the past two years. Elimination of batteries through the change over to the all-electric type has added to their popularity as has the new compact one unit construction with set, speaker and eliminator all in one small case. There is no doubt but that the tone qualities and selectivity of the new Truetone all-electric model compare favorably with any high priced home set. The ability to get distant stations is remarkable.

"Prices too have been reduced, which helps account for this sales increase. Today, an all-electric 6-tube Superheterodyne Truetone may be purchased for less than half of the price asked two years ago for a 5-tube battery set.

"The steering column control installation has eliminated any defacing of the car. When the owner trades or sells his car, the radio can be removed and transferred to a different car without leaving any defacing marks.

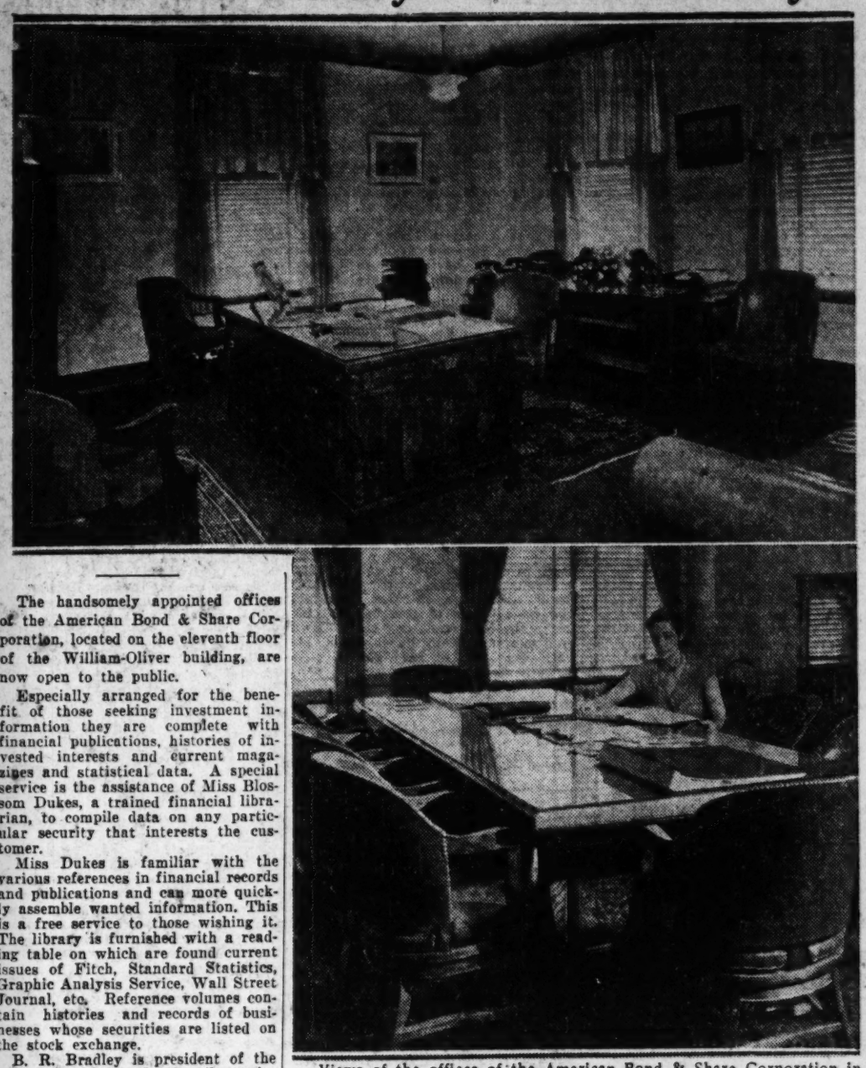

"The Western Auto convenient payment plan also makes it possible to buy a Truetone and pay for it in small monthly installments."

The library is furnished with a reading table on which are found current issues of Fitch, Standard Statistics, Graphic Analysis Service, Wall Street Journal, etc. Reference volumes contain histories and records of businesses whose securities are listed on the stock exchange.

B. R. Bradley is president of the corporation; W. H. Vermilya, vice president; J. B. Hearn, secretary; O. H. Starnes Jr., director of sales; C. R. Dawson, chairman of the board of directors.

In an interview Mr. Bradley indorsed the new securities act which does not permit a broker to give advice or make suggestions in regard to buying and selling securities.

"In order to make it possible for individuals to know just what they are buying as investments," said Mr. Bradley, "we are putting at their disposal, without obligation, our entire collection of financial statistics and offer the services of a capable financial librarian for any research that may be desired."

The entire floor is fitted for the comfort and convenience of customers and every arrangement is made to provide them with up-to-the-minute authentic information through ticker service and direct wire connections.

The American Bond & Share Corporation offers three distinct services —private trading, brokerage and a department featuring the Independence Fund of North America. Mr. Bradley emphasizes the fact that they do not sell any but listed securities with a daily market for every stock they buy or sell.

TRADE BODIES HOLD SESSIONS THIS WEEK

Several of the trade lines affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association will meet during the week to consider business matters of interest to them. The board of the Atlanta Electrical Association will meet at the Athletic Club Monday at a luncheon to discuss plans for the summer outing of the association, to consider a nation-wide selling campaign which has been developed by the Radio Manufacturers' Association for this fall, in which the national body is asking all local bodies to participate and to discuss a number of business problems.

On Monday evening a special committee of the Atlanta Jewelers' Guild will meet at the store of Myron E. Freeman & Bro. to develop a code of fair competition among local jewelers, in line with the code which has been prepared by the National Retail Jewelers' Association. The plan developed by this committee will be presented to a later meeting of all Atlanta jewelers.

On Tuesday at a 12:30 luncheon at the Athletic Club, the radio jobbers' division of the Atlanta Electrical Association will meet to consider the code worked out by the National Radio Wholesalers' Association and recently presented to the administration at Washington.

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association has been exceedingly active during the summer months, particularly in rendering service to its members in connection with codes for retailers. It maintains a complete file of information for the benefit of its members, including codes for retailers developed by national retail associations, and official rulings and interpretations of the NRA.

ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.
Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, 10 points down at 9.05. Receipts 27; shipments 1,043; stocks 196,937.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—An early advance in cotton on covering and active near-month buying was followed by renewed weakness today, with prices making new low ground for the movement under further liquidation and scattered selling. December contracts after selling up to 9.80 on the early demand broke to 9.51 and closed at that figure, with the general market closing easy at net declines of 9 to 17 points.

Initial prices were 8 points up to 6 points lower. The heavy buying of near months continued after the call and the general list steadied up during the first few minutes, with active months showing net advances of about 13 to 19 points. Later the market turned easier, following the weakness in grain. Closing prices showed reactions of about 24 to 30 points from the early high levels and December at 9.51 showed a reaction of 73 points from the high price touched on the rally of last Wednesday.

The active early buying of near months puzzled local traders, and the opinion was expressed in some quarters that it might have come from one or another of the agricultural readjustment agencies and be connected with operations in seed loan cotton or cotton option contracts.

The amount of cotton reported on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 83,161 bales against 64,400 last year.

Liverpool cables reported a quiet, steady market there but said that continental liquidation had been absorbed by trade calling at the decline. Houses with Liverpool connections were credited with selling a little cotton here during the early trading but the feature of the day was the first-hour buying of near months, which seemed to come through three or four local houses, and the bulk of which was said to be at prices just under the 9 1-2-cent level for October contracts.

The weather news came in for very little comment, but there was continued talk of hedging against a gradually increasing new crop movement.

PRICES TURN EASY ON NEW ORLEANS MART

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 12.—(AP)—There was quite active trading in cotton today for a short session and although a fair advance occurred in the first hour, prices turned easier later on hedge selling and in sympathy with a drop in wheat. The close was near the bottom, barely steady, and showing net declines of 10 to 11 points.

The opening was irregular, although Liverpool cables were lower than due.

Varied Factors Influence Stock Activities in Week

By VICTOR EUBANK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Financial markets generally worked at cross purposes during the week and most of them, influenced by a variety of factors, closed with inconclusive trends.

Stocks, despite the erratic gyrations of grain and cotton prices, did very well, on the whole, although the speculative ardor for securities was considerably restrained as the recent higher margin requirements and other trading regulations tended to make the majority of operators ultra-cautious in the matter of "in and out" deals.

Except for a minor "boom" on Wednesday, based partly on a renewal of inflationary psychology and optimistic business and trade news, share transactions were comparatively small and the ticker tape idled indifferently. From the standpoint of activity, the five-day period was one of the dullest of the year.

Stock sales for the week totaled only 8,764,219, a turnover not much greater than was recorded in some of the recent daily sessions. The Associated Press-Standard Statistics average for 90 selected issues finished with a net advance of 3.6 points at 84.1.

In the face of a government crop report showing the smallest wheat production in the past 35 years, this staple slumped the full day's limit of 5 cents a bushel both Friday and Saturday and corn, oats, rye and barley sagged sympathetically. Market analysis attributed the weakness principally to some final necessitous liquidation and to government estimates that this year's wheat carryover would be the largest in the country. The Canadian carryover, it was estimated, would be much greater than previously figured.

Cotton was nervous throughout and at one time was around $4 a bale under the prices of the previous week. Notwithstanding acreage reduction, it was estimated that cotton production this year would not be far from 1932. Most other commodities followed a rather dull and narrow range.

Bonds finished a little better than even, with most prime issues maintaining a steady to firm position. Holders of senior securties were especially interested in the conference of the administration's monetary experts with President Roosevelt during the week. They were disposed to interpret the conference as having to do chiefly with the government's future refunding plans.

While the United States Steel Corporation's July backlog showed a larger than expected decrease, business and industry were reported doing well. Trade reviews believed that the recent pauses in certain lines were constructive because they enabled increased employment to narrow the spread between production and consumption. The market were close observers of the government's code-making work and were inclined to be optimistic regarding the outcome of the recovery plans. Freight car loadings slipped seasonally, but were still far ahead of last year.

The American dollar followed a steady routine in foreign exchange dealings and gave rise to rumors that it may have been subjected to "stabilizing" influences. Bankers, however, saw no evidence of governmental interference and attributed the dollar's even movements to lessening of inflationary hopes, or fears, and to trade and other normal factors.

By JOHN P. BOUGHAN.

CHICAGO, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Brought to a standstill by measures adopted to meet recent emergency conditions, all grains stopped today at the lowest prices possible until August 16.

On that date an absolute fixed minimum level of quotations will be no longer in effect, and trade predictions were numerous today that the markets would then quickly right themselves. Talk was general that any further declines in grain values appeared likely to result in an excellent class of buying, as many traders of late had remained apart from grain operations, while prices have been subject not merely to a daily 5-cent limit up or down, but banned altogether from going below the closing level of July 31.

In something of a general selling rush at the start today simultaneous with almost a complete absence of buyers, every kind of grain quickly reached the July 31 minimum, and the markets remained in a deadlock the rest of the day, closing flat, wheat 2 2-2 to 3 3-8 cents under yesterday's finish, corn 2 3-8 to 3 3-8 down, oats 1-8 to 1 3-4 off, and provisions showing 7 to 27 cents decline.

Contributing a new incentive to sellers of wheat today and tending to curtail speculative demand was overnight action of board of trade directors abolishing July 31 closing prices as an absolute minimum limit on market fluctuations.

Throughout most of the day, all the Chicago grain pits were idle, brokers impatiently awaiting a chance to fill orders, and the gallery crowded with spellbound visitors.

Corn, oats, rye and barley duplicated the action of wheat, and were governed mainly by the course of that cereal.

Provisions shared in the weakness of the grain and of hog values.

Fenner, Beane & Ungerleider To Open New Home Monday

Prominent Firm Members To Come to Atlanta To Attend Formal Inauguration of Offices.

Georgia and the south can justly be proud of the new Atlanta offices of Fenner, Beane & Ungerleider, internationally known brokerage firm, which will be opened Monday in the 22 Marietta Street building.

For the past three months the corner of Broad and Marietta streets has been the scene of intense activity. The former banking quarters of the Citizens & Southern National bank—now in its own building across the street—have been completely remodeled and changed into brokerage quarters, the arrangement and beauty of which can hardly be surpassed anywhere in the country.

Not so many years ago, this firm, essentially southern in origin, started with a membership in the New Orleans cotton exchange. Today its security and commodity memberships include all the important exchanges throughout the country. Its wire system covers practically the entire eastern half of the United States—from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico—connected by cable facilities with its foreign offices in London, Paris and Havana.

The firm, acting as brokers and dealers, now serves more than 50 American cities with its system of private wires.

R. A. McCord, resident partner, announces that several partners of the firm are making special trips to Atlanta to attend the formal opening of the new quarters Monday. Numbered among these are Charles E. Fenner, of New Orleans; Alpheus C. Beane, of New York; Earl H. Hulsey, of Dallas; Curtis B. Dall, of New York, and Lewis W. Laudick, of Washington.

The paramount interest of this firm since its inception has been continually directed toward perfecting that intangible commodity known as "brokerage service." This was the principal idea that motivated the move from the old quarters at 65 North Forsyth street to the new and commodious home.

In the new quarters, everything possible has been done to perfect the efficient and rapid execution of orders in the security and commodity markets. The wire room, located next to the cashier and order department, has been so arranged as to obviate all unnecessary delays in the transmission and execution of orders.

For convenience and to be easily visible from all parts of the customers' room, the quotation board has been elevated about three feet from the floor. The board is excellently lighted with the most modern equipment available and the stock symbols are easily distinguishable.

R. A. McCord, resident partner, for many years prior to his becoming a member of the firm of Fenner, Beane & Ungerleider, was counted among the most successful southern bankers, being president of the Continental Bank & Trust Company, of Macon.

F. D. Willis, manager of the Atlanta office, also is a native Georgian, his former home being in Augusta, where, for many years, he was successfully engaged in the brokerage business before coming to Atlanta. His many years' experience in this business has caused him to be recognized and quoted throughout the south as one of the best authorities on the cotton and commodity markets.

The investment department, specializing in southern municipals, is managed by Robert F. Maddox Jr., of Atlanta, who has had long experience in the security business.

Speare, in Week's Review Of Financial Activities, Finds Steady Improvement

General Advance Is Noted in Security, Commodity Prices, Employment, Wages as Business Reports Improve.

By CHARLES F. SPEARE.
(Copyright, 1933, by the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

The phase of anticipation of the effects of inflation and of a natural recovery in industry and in banking conditions has been completed. The net result is expressed in higher prices for securities and commodities, in a sharp advance in the business index, accompanied by more employment, higher wages, better corporation reports and some increase in dividends.

We are now in the second, or intermediate period, when speculative commitments and commercial engagements are in a suspended state relative to those of July and the clue to future operations must be the extent to which the efforts at recovery are successful and the hopes of the administration in this direction are realized.

WAVE OF SPECULATION.

During the first phase, which extended from the first of May to the second week of July, there was much speculative buying of securities and commodities, also of manufactured goods. This carried prices to a point corresponding more nearly than since 1930 to their real values. It supplied consumers with foodstuffs, clothing, furniture, automobiles and other articles now considered essential but which previously they had been unwilling to buy, although able to do so. The means to buy came from the reserves which they had carried over the depression. To the extent that they had anticipated the rise in prices and had been in a position to discount it, they had reduced their purchasing power for the immediate future.

However, the larger body of consumers is now, by reason of renewed employment and increased income, preparing to give momentum to industry. It is from this class that the subsequent gains in business are chiefly to come. Obviously, they will be slower to respond than the original group of buyers, as they had obligations to meet that are long overdue.

EFFECT OF PRICE RISE

The rise in prices is already cutting down the margin of savings available to those in the lower income branches. They cannot at once respond to the hysterical appeals to spend and not save, or take advantage of the injunction to "turn your money into things," or heed the warning that "almost before you can draw breath, the things you want will be worth more than the money you can save by not buying." This has much the same tenor as the lingo of the stock salesman in 1929.

There is not so much doubt over the success of the recovery program as about the date when it may be accepted as a success. The signs of panic in Washington lately appear to be due to the time element.

There is no good reason why a "dead line" should be set for early September, for if a program involving such tremendous upheavals in business, so much accommodation by labor and capital and such a vast amount of physical effort to effect functions even imperfectly in November more will have been accomplished than could have been expected.

The good will of the public toward an experiment in government administration of industry has never been stronger than now. Cutting out the exaggerated statements of improvement that come from many centers, there is enough verified fact in official and unofficial figures to credit the recovery plan with a substantial and healthy growth.

FEWER INFLATION SIGNS

Although the stock market persists in speculating on the effects of inflation, there is apparently less inclination on the part of the administration to promote an aggressive inflation policy. The July smash in stocks and in commodities taught it the wisdom of not supplying the gamblers with so many price-raising implications. It also exposed the degree to which certain prices were out of line with the general average and the necessity of checking an advance that would counteract the benefits of re-employment and wage increases.

Altogether, in this intermediate period, there has been not only a welcome stabilization of prices, but a desirable mental calm where previously there had been more intellectualism than sound business sense.

In another direction, the signs point less prominently toward a major inflation effort. This week many of the prime corporation and municipal bonds have sold at prices comparable only to those in the extended cheap money period at the beginning of this century.

For illustration: Chesapeake & Ohio Equipment Trust certificates are quoted on a 3.50 per cent basis. This is the best rate on such paper in 30 years. The state of Maryland on Wednesday sold an issue of bonds that were marketed at a higher price for the long maturities than the recent offering of United States Treasury 3 1-4 per cents. The latter, however, are now quoted at a premium of more than 1-2 point, so if additional long-term loans are marketed in the autumn they should succeed at a lower coupon than the last.

WIDER DEMAND FOR BONDS.

There is an unsatisfied demand for bonds from institutions that have not been buyers in months. Recently the New England insurance companies have begun to accumulate securities for their portfolios. The change in their attitude toward investments results from the lessened pressure on them for policy loans, in itself proof that the handicaps of the depression are rapidly passing.

Again it may be remarked that the reconstruction in industry and the change in the public's mental state, plus the superabundance of money available for investment, have overbalanced the investor's fear of inflation or his first despair when contracts of the government or their subdivisions ceased to be paid in gold.

It is easier to separate the movement in second and third grade bonds from any inflation effect than in those which, by orthodox rules, should fall rather than rise when the commodity price level is scheduled to advance. The former fluctuate with earnings. These are now on the mend. Specifically, railroad junior mortgages and debentures benefit by each week's evidence that the carriers are closing the gap between deficit and surplus.

I. C. C. DEFENDS RAIL RATES.

To this has been added this week one of the most remarkable decisions the interstate commerce commission has ever rendered. It might have been written by the chief counsel for the railroads, for it defends them against complaints of high rates in language that has become familiar to those who study the briefs of their attorneys in rate hearings.

The gist of the commission's opinion was that reduced rates would not accomplish what its advocates had claimed, namely an increase in traffic, for it was shown that the country's volume of business did not rise but fell to low record totals when the average of commodity prices was at the bottom recently. On the other hand, the commission stated that a 10 per cent reduction in rates below the 1931 basis would result in failure by the carriers this year to earn their fixed charges.

With present rates maintained there is promise of surplus revenues by numerous systems that were in the red in 1932. The commission is frank to say that the gain in gross receipts, while substantial, will be offset by the need for larger maintenance outlays and the high proportion of gross now absorbed by wages and taxes, the two items representing 67 per cent of all operating income. The commission has also taken a new and more accurate view of the influence of motor and water competition on rail traffic than it advanced two years ago.

POSITION OF STOCK MARKET.

The steadiness in different types of bonds contrasts with the nervousness shown by stocks, though occasionally this week there have been demonstrations in them suggesting a return of the July trading fever.

The current position of stocks may be summed up as follows: They are high on the average with respect to present earnings and income return; they are too high temporarily as a class, if inflation proceeds no further; they should exceed their average prices of July if the extreme measures of inflation are adopted, but these are not now being considered; they must eventually be affected as to their equity in proportion as the recovery act is successful. For, if the recovery act works, it means that corporation profits will decrease and that its benefits will accrue to the worker at the expense of the stockholder. The experiment of stimulated industrial recovery has social aspects that are no less important than those of an economic nature.

Our men have been making good earnings every month this year—In spite of conditions—last month was our best month to date. With the improved conditions due to the NRA—better cotton prices, etc.—they will make considerably more the balance of this year—you can too—if you—

Let us show you the way to immediate earnings
You are not down and out until you have lost all your courage. Let us show you what men with courage do every day—and how they are making money at a time when some say "It can't be done."

There are important reasons for our success.
It is true we sell an essential in the electric appliance field.

It is true that we have thousands of customers in the south.

You can see for yourself why our men make good even in these trying days. Our representatives secure exclusive territory. We do the financing and compensation is by commission and bonus. Let us show you the way to immediate earnings.

If you will work as instructed, 10 hours each day, your earnings should be better than $40 per week your first month. We have men with us less than 60 days who are doing this and better.

CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

Conducted in the Interest of the Development of Atlanta and the South

Latest Version of Metal Home

The photograph shows the latest version of the metal home which has has just been completed and is being shown at the Century of Progress Fair. It is a porcelain enameled, frameless steel house, built without rafters, studs or joints. It contains seven large rooms, two baths, closet space, garage, laundry and heater room and a solarium and sun deck on the roof. It illustrates what the home buyer today may expect in the $5,000 class. The building is fireproof and heavily insulated.

Renting Agents Warn Tenants Not to Defer Signing Leases

Renting agents of Atlanta sounded a warning to tenants, especially of apartments, not to wait until September 1 to renew their leases, or to hold back on new leases expecting concessions.

There will be no concessions as in the past. Several of the leading agencies, backed by their landlords, have agreed not to offer any more free-rent concessions.

There has been some talk about increasing rents. While this has not been done, it at least shows that there will be no reduction in rents.

The cost of servicing apartments, notably the repairs and renovations, have gone up sharply due to increased cost of materials going into the renovations, such as paint and paper. Advance in wages has helped the increase.

It costs a landlord more now than it did last year to maintain an apartment or house for his tenant, and this cost will increase still more, landlards fear, with the general improvement in business.

It is safe to predict, the agents say, there will be no further reduction of rent and no concessions of any kind. The tenant, they say, will gain nothing by holding off in the hope of saving.

It was also pointed out that there has been virtually no new apartment house construction in the past four years, and loan agents, who make the average apartment-house project possible, are wary of such loans and will be for some time.

In the boom times tenants were in the habit of moving to the newest buildings. Now, as far as age is concerned, the existing apartments are virtually on the same footing. There is no immediate danger of over-supplying the demand for space.

Real Estate Code Will Be Outlined

Means through which real estate as a business may join under the blue eagle of the national recovery administration will be outlined by a special committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards now being appointed by W. C. Miller, Washington, D. C., president.

The committee, which will be as widely representative as possible, will begin work immediately on the task of drafting, if possible, a code of competitive practices, including hours and wages of employes, through which realtors may co-operate in the NRA program.

It is planned that the code may be drafted to cover real estate brokerage, property management, the brokerage of real estate loans and real estate appraisals.

The personnel of the committee will be announced within the next few days. Report will be made to member boards concerning the committee's work.

Two thousand men have applied for the 300 vacancies in Spain's secret service. The applicants will undergo severe examinations, wherein attention will be concentrated upon their training and physical condition.

Realty Board Moves To 233 Healey Bldg.

The real estate board office from now on will be located at 233 Healey building, just down the hall from the old location. This change has been made at the request of the Healey Realty & Improvement Company to enable them to accommodate a new tenant for the entire wing, including the board's old office.

This marks the first change in location of the board office since 1928 when the old office at 16 Poplar street was given up to move into 203 Healey building during the presidency of Frank Owens.

Although the new office is not quite as spacious as the old one, there is ample room to accommodate all functions and furnish plenty of room for board meetings.

Contractors Invited To Lighting School

Atlanta architects, contractors, presidents of women's organizations and merchandise display managers have been invited to attend an electric lighting school Monday evening from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock to be conducted by three nationally-known illuminating specialists under the sponsorship of the Georgia Power Company. The meeting will be held on the sixth floor of the Electric building at Marietta and Fairlie streets.

Lecture-demonstrations will be given by A. L. Powell, supervising lighting engineer of the General Electric Company, New York, assisted by Miss Lillian Eddy, residential lighting specialist of the General Electric Company, also of New York, and Alfred Paulus, lighting engineer of the Westinghouse L

MACHADO GIVES UP!

Gerardo Machado, president of strife-torn Cuba, has by his ruthless disregard for peace and good will alienated any consideration which might have been due him.

As expected, he has formally resigned, thus relinquishing the strangle hold he has had on the government of Cuba for several years.

Now, under a temporary regime, the new government, with the approval of the people, will proceed to straighten out the troubled political affairs of the island.

Machado, until the people of the island revolted, had crushed all opposition with a well-trained and modernly equipped army, an army that has never felt the economic pinch or the salary depreciation which has come to all other Cubans outside the official family.

When Ambassador Sumner Welles, of the United States, began his mediation with all the warring factions, it was accepted by all parties. The inevitable solution was that Machado must go in the interest of peace and the restoration of trade and commerce.

When this developed, Machado immediately attempted to undermine Welles at Washington. Failing in that, he again ordered martial law, whose bloody rule Welles had succeeded in having lifted for a few days, and again wiped out all constitutional guarantees. A strike of protest against him paralyzed the island.

With his army crushing all open demonstrations, even though unarmed, Machado then attempted to bring the Latin nations and his own people into discord with the United States by claiming that the officials of this country were "meddling" and interfering with the sovereignty of small nations.

Machado had accepted mediation. Two of Cuba's parties, whose representatives had joined with the third to put Machado in power for the second term and who later aided in making him a dictator, indorsed the results of mediation which called for Machado to quit the presidency. He refused and continued a campaign of misrepresentation against this government.

The Latin countries have in the present Washington administration the first one in many years which is co-operating with them to the fullest extent of Pan-American agreements. It is a sincere and friendly administration.

The president of Cuba has done his own people and those of other Latin nations irreparable harm by his reckless disregard of truth in an effort to maintain his own bloody dictatorship.

The people of Cuba will not forget that this country spent its money and its men to give Cuba freedom and it has assumed a friendly interest in advancing Cuban interests since that time.

The Platt amendment, a vital part of the Cuban constitution, makes it mandatory for the United States to intervene if the protection of law and order and life and property demands it.

But the Washington administration does not want intervention, hoping to restore peace and order without troops.

The end of Machado's rule was inevitable. It has come no sooner than expected. No man can defy the opposition of an overwhelming majority of his people.

REGISTER NOW!

Despite the fact that the registration books for September's municipal primary close on Saturday of this week, far less than one-half of the city's voting population have qualified to participate in this vitally important election.

If the people of the city are so indifferent to the welfare of the community in which they live, they will have only themselves to blame if the right kind of men are not elected to direct the affairs of the city government.

Inefficient city officials are bad enough in normal times, but under existing conditions councilmanic incompetence means a threat to the city's credit.

It takes but a few moments to register at the conveniently located registration booths provided in every part of the city.

Considerably less than 15,000 names are now on the registration lists.

There should be not less than 25,000.

A full vote is the best assurance that able and unselfish men will be named to public office.

AN EXCELLENT SELECTION.

The designation of J. Houstoun Johnston, of Atlanta, former engineer of the Georgia public utilities commission, as engineer for the federal public works board of Georgia, places the responsibilities of this position in the hands of a man ideally equipped for the task.

Starting his career in the engineering department of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, Mr. Johnston spent many years in the direction of engineering projects of practically every type, including the construction of an entire city for the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company.

He represented the state of Georgia in the valuation of the W. and A. railroad when the present lease was being negotiated, and since the World War has been continuously connected with the state government, first as assistant chief engineer and secretary and treasurer of the highway department and later as chief engineer for the public service commission.

With the guidance and advice of an engineer of such wide experience and acknowledged ability, the public works board will be able to proceed about its duties with the assurance that every dollar it authorizes to be expended will be wisely and economically spent.

The appointment of Mr. Johnston should make possible an immediate start on the public works program in this state—a start already too long delayed.

Kansas has already secured $50,000,000 for the Kiro dam, the Columbia river basin has been awarded $63,000,000, San Francisco has been awarded many millions for bridge construction. Other states and cities have been equally prompt to seek their share of the federal public works fund.

It is high time that some of this money be put to work in Georgia; the state be given, without further delay, the $10,000,000 of highway funds already allotted.

The personnel of the board, the high character of Henry T. McIntosh, the district advisor, and the ability of Mr. Johnston guarantee that nothing will be left undone to start this work in Georgia with as little delay as possible.

The important thing now is that the formalities incident to the preparation of formal requests to Washington should be pushed in order that these federal dollars may be put to work to improve conditions in Georgia.

MRS. PALMOUR'S DEGREE.

Listed in the group of 87 students receiving degrees last week at the graduation exercises of the 31st session of the summer school of the state university was the name of Mary Crenshaw Palmour. She is Mrs. Oscar Palmour, of College Park, wife and mother, a leader in civic, social, religious and club affairs, and one of the best known women in Georgia. For four successive years Mrs. Palmour enrolled at the summer school with the idea of achieving the coveted master of arts degree conferred upon her last Friday.

From Monday to Friday of every week she answered to class roll call, returning to College Park to spend the week-ends with her family. During no period of the time she was enrolled at the university did her family suffer from her absence from home. Her husband and children gave enthusiastic support, and were co-operative with her desire to attain her master of arts degree. Her domestic help, two in number, who have been with her for 12 and 17 years, respectively, took care of the home during her absence.

Her decision to go to college again after rearing a family and after reaching middle age was prompted by Mrs. Palmour's innate love of study, coupled with the fact that her three children were students at the summer school at some period during the taking of her post-graduate course.

The story will intrigue other women, and will inspire them to pursue their study of cultural subjects that will add full measure to a well-rounded life, and it is quite an unusual thing for an unprofessional woman to have done.

So enthusiastic were Mrs. Palmour's husband and children over Mrs. Palmour's educational attainment and the conferring of the master of arts degree upon her last Friday that they journeyed to Athens to attend the graduation exercises, took front seats in the chapel and lavished applause upon the brilliant woman who is president of the fifth district of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

MAKING GOOD COTTON BETTER.

Cotton is the financial lifeblood of the south. Food we must have, but cotton will buy food, and the world must have cotton; so the fortune of the south rises and falls with the fluctuations in price of the fleecy staple.

Over a long period of years cotton has been America's leading item in export trade, and in competing with the product of other countries it has been necessary to continually improve the grade and staple and maintain the same at a high standard in order to retain supremacy in the world's markets.

In the production and maintenance of types of cotton which possess superior qualities the long scientific research and experimental work in plant culture of David R. Coker, of Hartsville, South Carolina, stands out as achievements in cottonseed breeding as does the marvelous accomplishments of Burbank with flowers.

The story of what this pioneer cottonseed breeder and his assistants have done and are now doing is told in an article in another page, and splendidly illustrated with pictures in the rotogravure section of this issue of The Constitution.

The exacting thoroughness of detail observed by the Coker Pedigreed Seed Company's experts to still further improve types of cotton that already possess superior qualifications, is pointed out in this article and should serve as an inspiration to growers and enlist their best efforts in producing a greater volume of the best cotton possible and a marked reduction of the types that depress the price and assist in creating a burdensome surplus.

The trade-mark of the Coker company is a red heart and the words: "Blood Will Tell." The average farmer knows full well that blood will tell in the purebred quality of his stock, and the same is true in respect to the seed he plants to produce his crops, be they cotton, food or feed.

Cotton will always be the mainstay of the south; its quality must go forward, never backward, and while breeders of high quality seed will do their part the real work of maintaining the high standard of American cotton rests with the growers.

THE ELM THREATENED.

Warned by the ravages of the chestnut blight, which has doomed the chestnut trees of the country, the authorities of New Jersey, aided by federal experts, are preparing to wage energetic war against the Dutch elm disease, which has recently put in its appearance in that state.

The chestnut was one of the finest and most valuable of the trees to be found in the Atlantic coastal states up to a comparatively few years ago. Then came the blight, and now huge areas in the northern and central Atlantic sections have been cleaned out of the chestnut. It has already taken heavy toll in the south and federal experts fear that in time this fine species of American tree will cease to exist.

The Dutch elm disease has a similarly fatal effect on the elm. When a tree is attacked its leaves wilt and within a year or so the tree itself dies.

It is not known how the disease reached the United States. It is a comparatively new tree enemy, having first been discovered only 13 years ago in Holland. Now it is decimating the elm forests of the Netherlands, Germany and France and has jumped the channel into England.

It first made its appearance in this country in Cleveland and Cincinnati three years ago. A dozen infected trees were promptly destroyed and this action appears to have been effective in checking the threat, as no other trees have since been affected in that section.

Recently, however, 141 sick trees have been discovered in New Jersey and the state and federal governments are moving in force in the effort to as successfully eradicate the disease as was the case in Ohio.

The elm disease is an even more serious threat than was the chestnut blight, for while the chestnut was confined to the states bordering the Atlantic, the elm is to be found in abundance in practically every state in the Union. If they should suffer the same fate as is in store for the chestnut, the country would suffer a heavy loss.

FARMER PRESIDENT.

George Washington, Virginia farmer, stopped raising tobacco as a cash crop, because it depleted the soil of his plantation, and took up diversified projects. After a thorough trial Franklin D. Roosevelt, Georgia farmer, gave up cotton as a cash crop, and put in a comprehensive diversified farming program, which has proven highly successful.

News of the president's extensive farming operations in Georgia was given to the world some weeks ago by The Constitution and caused a mild sensation throughout the country. Every large newspaper carried editorials on the matter and many county weeklies spread the news to their farmer readers that the president was a real farmer, and therefore had a first-hand knowledge of the trials and tribulations that beset the tillers of soil.

President Roosevelt is not only a farmer, he is a beef cattle raiser, having 1,000 acres in pasture on which 150 head are grazed, and plans are under way to increase his cattle business by introducing a second fine strain of pure-breds with which to breed up his grade cattle. A man of vision and sound business judgment he realizes that Georgia possesses all the natural advantages, and few natural disadvantages, in the production of as good beef cattle as can be raised in any other section of the country.

Learning of the proposed organization of a beef cattlemen's association in Georgia, the preliminaries of which are being sponsored by The Constitution in conjunction with The Southern Cultivator, President Roosevelt wrote Mr. Howell, heartily commending the project, as he could see that in co-operative effort the cattlemen of the state could more readily conquer all the disadvantages that now retard the growth of the cattle industry in Georgia.

The president's letter, with pictures of some of his cattle, and an article describing the progress being made toward formation of the association will be found in the opposite page, and will be of interest to those who desire to join the association, also to all those who have at heart progressive steps for the betterment of farming conditions in the state.

A great problem down on the farm is whether or not to buy a new model or pay something on the mortgage.

Manna Still Rains From Heaven

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN,
European Correspondent of The Constitution.

PARIS, Aug. 12.—Manna is still "raining" from heaven. The miraculous nutriment which saved the Israelites from starvation during their 40 years sojourn in the wilderness is to this day the staple food of many thousands of Arabic desert dwellers.

The Bible is once again scientifically substantiated. The mysterious food existed. It still exists. A scientific expedition sent out by the Hebrew University in Jerusalem has found manna, a fresh supply of it every morning, in the exact spot indicated in the first book of the Bible. The scientists carried some of it back with them to Jerusalem, but it had to be done in airless containers for as in the days of Moses the manna spoiled overnight.

The description of manna given in Genesis tallies exactly with that given by the modern Hebrew scientists. The Bible says: And when the dew that lay was gone up, behold, upon the face of the wilderness there lay a small round thing, as small as the hoar-frost on the ground. . . . And they gathered it every morning, every man according to his eating; and when the sun waxed hot, it melted. . . . And the house of Israel called the name thereof manna; and it was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey. . . . And the children of Israel did eat manna 40 years."

Attempts to discover the nature of manna are centuries old. For a considerable time it was believed that the Biblical manna was a certain lichen frequently found in the desert of the near east. But it remained for an eighteenth century French scientist, Rene de Reaumur, the inventor of the thermometer, to guess, or rather to suggest an explanation which is now established as correct by the Hebrew University's expedition.

The manna of the Bible is tamarisk manna, that is to say it is found under tamarisk trees. It is produced quite naturally by an unassuming little hexapod, green in color and Coccus mantiparus by name. This tiny insect has an inordinately sweet tooth—figuratively speaking—which causes it to feed so extensively on saccharine substances that its little body absorbs more sugar than it can hold. With the quite understandable result that its body expels the excess sugar, in the form of a sticky drop of sweetness which solidifies during the night when it is cool and the dew falls, but melts again when the sun waxes hot.

This grain of sweetness provides a nutritive medium for the growth of tiny fungus spores that quickly develop into an unpleasant mould—as was discovered by those followers of Moses who attempted against the leader's orders to keep manna overnight. The expedition from the Hebrew University observed the formation of manna for a period of six weeks in an oasis which lies half-way between Elim and Sinai in the Sinaian peninsula. It was there exactly, according to the Bible, that the Jews having escaped from the Egyptian house of bondage a month and a half earlier, began to "murmur" against Moses and Aaron about the scarcity of food. They had been promised a land flowing with milk and honey and they found themselves in the arid wilderness of Shin.

The expedition incidentally established the cause of the disappearance of numerous nomadic tribes. The Bedouins they met declared that, while their fathers had always plenty of manna, they themselves rarely had the good luck to find any. With their usual fatalism they attributed the lack of manna to an act of Allah, which they accepted with resignation. In reality the decline in manna is explained by the fact that the Arabs have for ages been cutting down all trees in Sinai as well as in Palestine. Now the insects which secret the sweet grain are only found in regions where gum-trees and tamarisks are plentiful. Even as the centuries of indiscriminate deforestation has dried up the wells of the Holy Land, so it has destroyed a considerable food supply of the desert dwellers.

At present, with the extensive reforestation going on in Palestine, one of the most worthwhile undertakings of the Zionist pioneers, manna may become more plentiful once more. Yes, some day when a way has been found to preserve manna it may even be exported and you may have it with breakfast. You pull a wry face. Really there is nothing indelicate in that. Is not honey also a product of another busy little hexapod, the bee?

Historic Controversy Over Sugar in Cornbread

Editor Constitution: While the world is agitated with NRA, A. A. A. and other letters of the alphabet, it is gratifying to know that The Constitution is not forgetting the stomach, which is the real center of man's affections and activities.

Your cooking school is probably more important than a code of fair competition.

There has just come to me a discussion of cornbread by Henry Watterson. Its date is not given, but it is said to have been published in the Courier-Journal when Watterson was 80 years old. Your cooking school has just adjourned, so this question of cornbread discussed by Colonel Watterson is relevant.

EDGAR WATKINS.

SUGAR AND CORNBREAD.

Recently a theoretical cook, who makes a living by writing rather than by cooking, published a formula for a new kind of cornbread. Commenting upon the recipe, Colonel George Bailey, leading man of the editorial page of the Houston Post, said with some heat: "About that cornbread recipe which includes three-quarters of a cup of sugar. Tell them not to do it. Sugar in cornbread is an abomination. It ought to be made a crime. It violates every tradition of the south. It insults the palate; it mocks the culinary art. When the Lord made corn He put in all the sugar He intended it to have."

Colonel Henry Watterson, in retirement near Louisville, saw this attack by Bailey upon the newest vice, and, though more than 80 years of age, the intrepid colonel rushes to the side of the Texas colonel to strengthen his arm in the attack.

In a letter to the Courier-Journal the Kentucky colonel, after quoting the Texas colonel, says:

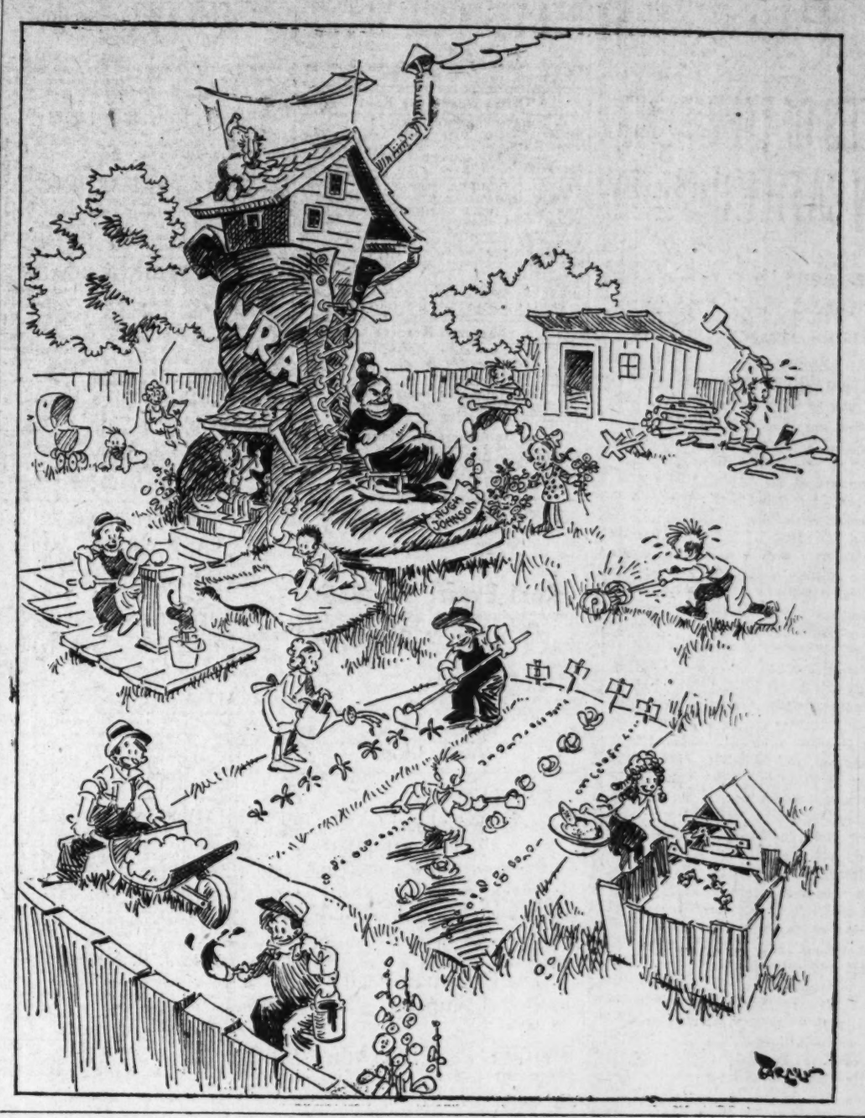

"Cornbread with sugar in it was an invention born of the devil, planted in New England and sent south by our enemies. It is threatening the life of real cornbread right in the land of its birth. It is doing worse. It makes men trifling and women frivolous. It is responsible for most of the murders, suicides and all the divorces. It weakens the brain, infuriates the liver, grows people pot-bellied and brings corns and baldness. It is the mother of bolshevism and the daddy of anarchy. But for sugar in cornbread, there would be no war, no flies, nor mosquitoes, no ants nor roaches, no I. W. W. and no republican party.

"Let the twentieth amendment to the constitution forever prohibit sugar in cornbread and 'let's have the vote right away.'"

This would seem all embracing and is sufficiently conclusive. New England may know how to bake beans. They say the cider in Maine is a good substitute for whisky. It must be admitted that Boston "pumpkin pie" is no slouch. But cornbread. La! That requires all that George Bailey has said, and a pair of old black hands to boot—and a red bandana handkerchief—and an old mammy's voice, rich, mellow and devotional:

"How firm a foundation,
Ye saints of the Lord."

The Old Woman Who Knows What To Do

Everyday Questions

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

Is there anything you can conceive which is more important than scaling down armaments.

Yes, the scaling down of the hates, jealousies and fears which create armaments. We find it hard to do this because these evil emotions are the hangover of previous wars. Imagine, of you can, an economic conference which would end our injurious commercial competitions and stop the making of millionaires overnight out of industrialists who grow rich by supplying armaments and munitions. Conceive for yourself a world intent on mutual trade concessions, the removal of tariff barriers and the abolition of racial prejudices. Obviously such a goal is still distant, but we must reach it or perish.

As a matter of fact, armaments are ugly excrescences upon our civilization due to its deep-seated denial of God's Fatherhood and man's brotherhood. The tragedy of Cain and Abel is still repeated on an international scale. The original murderer would never have struck down his brother had he not first killed him in his corrupted heart.

While the multitudes demand life's necessities they cannot get them past the barriers built by the boasted wisdom of the world's statemen and financiers. We have the technique to produce everything essential for mankind's support. But we lack the technique to adequately use the fruits of man's mastery over nature's forces. The result is that the present methods of distribution are a standing reproach.

So the real struggle is not at Geneva. It is in your soul and mine and the souls of our fellow men. When we are prepared to surrender ourselves to unselfish service and labor for the interrelated world we now occupy, it will be as kind and generous to us as are all other gifts of God—and not till then.

Charleston, W. Va.

Just what is sin?

Briefly, it is the choice of a lower standard of life when the higher is known to the one making the choice. It is not simply a matter of cold ethical error. On the contrary, it can only be fully understood by a devoutly religious heart. Hence the apparent anomaly that the purest souls are most sensitive to sin, and that its gravest confessions have proceeded from the saints. St. Paul exclaimed, "Sinners, of whom I am the chief"—and he meant it.

Sin's essential element is the deliberate and willful rejection of God's will by those who are aware of His eternal righteousness and love. Its expressions vary according to the moral and cultural level at which a person lives. The sin of a civilized man may be the daily practice of the South Sea islander. Its transgression abides in the fact that what is done is recognized by the doer as wrong, whether he is a bishop or a barbarian.

God has so arranged the chronomity of our spirits that there shall be thousands of silent and reflective moments between their striking hours. Whenever in those moments we are summoned to obey a law calling for a higher course of conduct than we actually practice, we cannot refuse obedience to it without sin. Wherever we succumb to temptation we identify ourselves with the worst that is possible to us at that particular crisis. True repentance is always accompanied by the admission that there was no excuse for our behavior.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES.

Taxation and Character

Nowhere is the attitude of men toward taxation so well expressed as in that cynical proverb: "Nothing is certain in life except death and taxes." This feeling is a long inheritance from the past history of taxation. All governments have necessarily claimed the right to impress the property and the service of their subjects for governmental support. Under every form of tyranny, this levy is made by force, without the consent of the subject. Since he has had no say as to the wisdom, or the justice of the levy, it is only natural that he should come to hate taxation as an expression of tyranny.

Our own democracy was born out of the right, "no taxation without representation." It is in that exception, "without representation," that we find the essence of democracy. A positive statement of the principle of democracy would be that taxation is necessary for the support of a government, therefore the people claim the right to tax themselves, a voluntary tax. Jesus, who lived under a tyrannical system of taxation, stated the democratic principle with characteristic clearness. He said in substance: When you are forced by the government to give up your cloak, or to go an errand one mile, you are compelled to yield. But having done that, then as a voluntary act of service, give your coat also, or go another mile.

The Second Mile.

This seems to me to be the ideal attitude and spirit of a democratic citizenry. It stands ready to make a voluntary contribution of substance or service to the public welfare. And that is just what taxation under a democratic government should mean. It is self taxation. And here is a test of a good citizen. Is he willing to go that second mile? Is he willing to tax himself in order to bear his share of the burden of society? If not he should not have the right to vote. Taxation without representation is bad, but not so bad in its effect upon the character of the citizen as representation without taxation.

From this standpoint every form of tax evasion is distinctly anti-social, and the tax dodger is an enemy of social democracy. It should mean something more than a whole-hearted support of your government in time of war. That same spirit of self-sacrificing support is needed even more in a time of peace. If public opinion ostracizes the "shirker" and military law punishes the "deserter" in time of war, a citizen who refuses to support his government in time of peace should be branded as a "shirker" and a "deserter."

Of course, most of our tax evasions have been justified on the ground that the taxes were unjustly distributed, and some people are forced to bear more than their share of the public burden. Certainly nothing in the whole realm of political economy has proven to be more difficult than the framing and administration of equitable tax laws. It is also true that the corrupt politician has found this authority of the government a potent means, either through the levying or collecting of taxes, to enrich himself. But the deadly significance of his corrupt practices lies in the fact that there are always citizens who are ready to trade with him, and profit by this corruption. It is not only legitimate, but of the very spirit of democracy, that citizens should criticize, and if need be protest against, certain taxes. But it is significantly dangerous to the success of self-government, to find an almost universal opposition to paying any taxes, and a low standard of public honesty toward evasions of this primary responsibility of citizenship.

The Standard of Value.

But people rebel against taxes not simply because of the method of assessment, but perhaps even more because of the purposes for which they are levied. Nowhere will the character of a people, and the quality of their civilization, be more clearly revealed, than in that for which they are willing to tax themselves. It is most graphically manifested in the tax-supported institutions of the state. We instantly think of the schools, the institutions for the care of the sick, the insane, the blind and the delinquents, the public libraries, and the art galleries. In framing tax laws, often the vital question, by which the character of a state is to be judged, is "which is of greater value, a man or a sheep?" It is a test of their sense of values.

Let it be understood that we can not separate our characters from our citizenship. One can't be a good man, and at the same time a bad citizen. One's attitude toward his government, in a democracy, is his attitude toward other people. To rob one's government is to rob one's neighbor. To shirk one's public responsibility, is like a coward on the battle field, who deserts his comrades. To evade carrying your part of the burden of public enterprises, is too much like the spirit of the strong bully who imposes on the weaker man. Self-government necessarily involves self-taxation. A people who are not willing and able to tax themselves adequately and wisely, are unable to govern themselves.

New York Skylines

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT JR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Maurice Gottlieb made a full column in the New York newspapers when he left us. There were headlines that would have caused his eyes to blink away the tears he would have considered would betoken a lowering of magisterial dignity before the masses whom he loves and from whom he came.

"Your honor," he said one day, pleading desperately for a client in Essex Market Court as attorney before the bar of the "Grand Old Temple of Justice," as the newspapermen called it, "I hope that I have done well. I trust that I may do better things—even assume your robe."

The lawyer of supreme court demeanor, called too late, "magistrate of poor," "jurist became famous for human rulings," "won way from poverty," wanted that black robe.

He confided the fact when he asked a reporter to have luncheon that noon. He had won his case. He was happy. He led the way to some place down on Eldridge street, where a hearty meal could be had for 35 cents. He apologized briefly. He did not belong to the Manhattan Club, where judges went, nor had he, frankly, the price of two meals at Luchow's on 14th street, where more of them spent the interim between morning and afternoon court sessions.

"I was brought up around here," he confided, "and I don't think that you will mind. It is not the place to take a reporter for a great newspaper, but I have only a dollar. Some day—?"

Gottlieb had done something to distress Mayor John F. Hylan, and the robes of city magistrate, thrown all over the place during Judge Hylan's incumbency, were denied him. He worked on in his improving law practice and Mayor Walker put him on the bench, seven years ago.

From that time on, Magistrate Gottlieb, the East Side newsboy of one time, the smartest lawyer in "the Grand Old Temple of Justice," enjoyed his life's happiness. Adamant in his legal precision, he never threw a case out of court. But when his prisoners were unfortunate through no fault of their own he dug down in his pocket, underneath the cherished robes, and sent people home to Boston, Philadelphia or Denver. And he gave them the price, sometimes, of the lunch that at one time was all he could afford himself—35 cents.

THEY WATCH YOUR STEP.

The annual panic is here with the 50th convention of the dancing masters of America who will tell everyone how to step out during the next season. Some tricky steps are being introduced, but no one who is allowed to get behind the scenes is permitted to divulge the exact modes of procedure. In an aloof and non-clinical way we believe that the normal huddle will continue with the younger and semi-middle-aged set.

President Roosevelt Commends Constitution's Plan for Bettering Quality of Georgia Cattle

SEES BETTERMENT IN CATTLE QUALITY

President Says Greater Interest in Purebreds Means Better Cattle.

BY HIRAM R. ROMANS,
Editor Southern Cultivator.

President Roosevelt, who owns and operates a large farm near Warm Springs, Ga., where he maintains a large herd of beef cattle, has indorsed the project of The Constitution in conjunction with The Southern Cultivator, of organizing a beef cattle association in Georgia, and in a recent letter to Mr. Clark Howell, editor and general manager of The Constitution, commends the movement as one that will work to the bettering of the quality of Georgia cattle.

Publication by The Constitution recently of Ralph McGill's description of the president's farm and the diversified activities he is carrying on at his Georgia plantation was news to the nation, and received editorial comment by practically every newspaper and many magazines of the country. It was disclosed to those who did not know that President Roosevelt had practical farm knowledge which equipped him to deal understandingly with the great farm problem, which was only one of the many with which he was confronted.

It should be a matter of keen interest and satisfaction to the cattlemen of Georgia to know that the president is interested in improving the quality of Georgia cattle, that he gives the matter his personal attention, and is ready to join with them in co-operative effort to improve every condition that is confronted in the production, raising and marketing of beef cattle.

Project Being Studied.

Urged by several leading cattlemen to take plenty of time in preliminaries before calling a meeting of those interested in forming the association, that course has been followed, giving those who have been approached an opportunity to study the project in its many details so that when they are brought together in an organization meeting the best thought regarding the many details of the association may be presented.

During this time the names and addresses of a large number of cattlemen have been collected and this week a letter will go to them requesting a specific answer as to whether they will take an active part in forming the association. While an affirmative answer will not bind anyone it is necessary to have an idea of approximately how many cattlemen may be anticipated at an organization meeting.

The plan has already been indorsed by Governor Talmadge, Commissioner of Agriculture G. C. Adams, numerous leading cattlemen and farmers who have a few head of cattle and would increase the size of their herds if an association is formed that will take the lead in improving general conditions and particularly in the point of marketing facilities and higher prices. A few letters along this line are appended.

Gets 4 Cents for Dressed Beef.

"In regard to forming a cattlemen's association in Georgia I will say first that I fully indorse same, and will be glad to co-operate with you or any one to get same in action immediately. I generally have 60 to 75 head of cattle and we farmers down here sell to local markets, and are now getting only 4 cents a pound for dressed beef. Our local market men go out and do their own dressing or skinning. The market men always take along with them a nice-sized box and trim and rim, and then instead of leaving the rimmings for our hogs, etc., they take the trimmings and hide for their trouble. Back a few years ago this hide would bring $6 to $10. Yes, we are badly in need of a little relief from this old system. An ordinary-sized cow now brings from $8 to $10. It is worse than 5 cents for cotton. Yours for co-operation any way possible.

G. M. THORNHILL,
Barwick, Ga."

Sees Need of an Association.

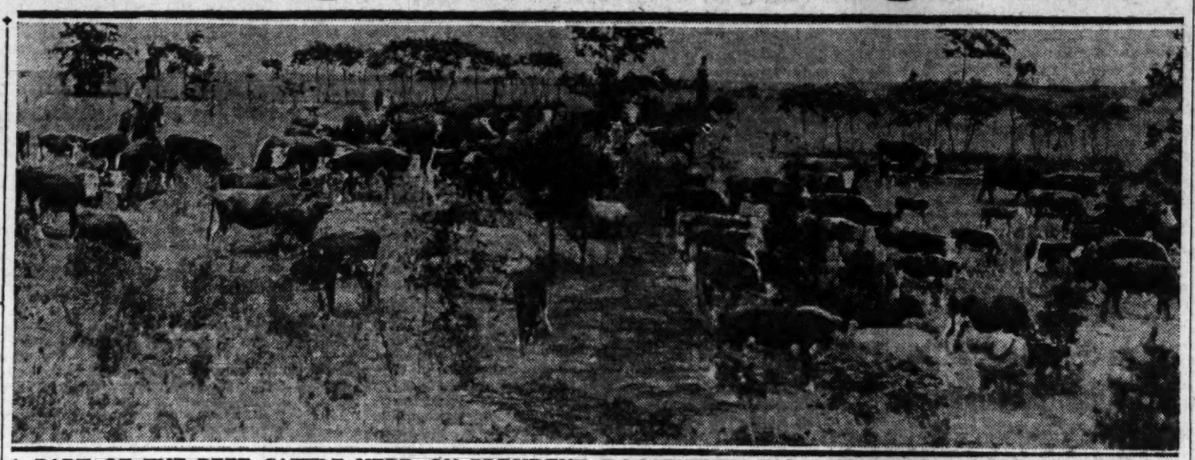

J. H. Johnson, a Midville, Ga., farmer, writes: "I have been interested in a registered bull calf for a good while, and after reading about the proposed Georgia cattlemen's association I became more interested. There is not a registered bull in my community, and I had trouble getting my cows bred this last fall. I have grade cows but like to breed to a purebred male. I want a registered bull calf; the Red Polled is my choice—am I right or wrong? Please advise which is the best for this wire grass county? Of course I aim not to depend on wire grass for my pasture. I am not able to pay such a big price but know that the animal I want will cost me more than a grade calf. Let me have the addresses of some of the breeders of the Red Polled or the Angus stock."

Association Would Help Him.

Henry Counts, of Haralson, Ga., writes: "I am 22 years of age and am running my own business. I have decided to farm for a living and the cattlemen's association appeals to me. The farmers who raise cotton and corn all their lives are poor and most of them are in debt. Another reason for raising cattle is that you can use the manure on cultivated fields. I have a fine bottom land pasture, with a good branch, which will feed 15 or 20 head of cattle. I do not see the need of having a good pasture and not using it for profit. Keep me informed about this association. I aim to be a cattleman and I want to join the organization so I may learn from experienced cattlemen and profit by the co-operative effort of all."

Constructive aims of the association would be to improve pasture conditions, procure laws and regulations pertaining to the betterment of the live stock and cattle industry, direct public opinion regarding the consumption of Georgia live stock and meat products, co-operate with all agencies working toward the control of contagious and infectious diseases and all other conditions detrimental to the live stock industry, work for the establishment of local slaughter houses for the processing of meat of Georgia-produced live stock, thereby insuring to producers a fair price for their cattle.

Georgia can raise as good beef cattle as any state in the union, and co-operation of the state's cattlemen will hasten the time when hotel and restaurants will be proud to advertise that they serve Georgia beef.

A PART OF THE BEEF CATTLE HERD ON PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S FARM NEAR WARM SPRINGS, GEORGIA.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

July 21, 1933.

My dear Mr. Howell:

You and the Atlanta Constitution are to be commended for your efforts in bettering the quality of cattle in Georgia. Greater interest in purebred cattle will mean better cattle, more profitable cattle, and consequently an improved agriculture for your State. I know that your efforts will be fruitful of good.

Very sincerely yours,

Franklin D. Roosevelt

Honorable Clark Howell,
Editor, The Atlanta Constitution,
Atlanta,
Georgia.

President Roosevelt, who maintains a large herd of beef cattle on his farm at Warm Springs, Ga., was quick to see the advantages of an association for Georgia cattlemen when informed of the proposed organization. His letter to Mr. Howell indicates that the association will receive his personal support.

This registered Polled Hereford bull, one of several purchased by President Roosevelt, is shown with a typical Georgia "piney woods" cow. From this stock fine specimens of heavy beef cattle are being bred on the president's farm.

Describes Scenic Beauty Of New Highway From Chatsworth to Ellijay

Editor Constitution: I believe I have seen most of the beauty spots of Georgia, but I wish to call to the attention of your readers a trip made last Sunday over a highway not yet described by the Pathfinder traveler of your paper.

The trip was over the new state highway from Chatsworth to Ellijay. It is only 200 miles around this circle from the time you leave Five Points until the return and can easily be made in an afternoon. The road is not yet completed on the Gilmer county side, but hundreds of cars are already using it and anybody making the trip will find it well worth the time. The distance from Chatsworth to Ellijay is 23 miles.

"The glory that was Greece and the Grandeur that was Rome" has nothing on the Cohutta mountains as seen on this highway. Leaving the last residence at Chatsworth it is 15 miles to the next residence in Gilmer county. Leaving the foothills at Chatsworth it is a constant ascent for the next ten miles. On the left is nothing but hills of earth, while on the right are valleys and mountains. After reaching the top of the mountains the scene changes and hills are on the right, with the hills and valleys on the left. It would not be an exaggeration to say there are 100 mountains and at each 50 feet the scene changes and you get 100 different pictures of each mountain. Among the highest peaks are Cow Pen, Fort and Ball. If you are subject to fainting spells better not make the trip. It is 23 miles between filling stations.

It is said this highway will be completed within 60 days, but it is usable now. I don't know who the engineers were who designed this masterpiece, but a monument in marble on the Cohuttas' highest peak should be erected to their fortitude and courage and to the men who brought this road into being. Telt your readers by all means to see this wonderful Cohutta range, for there is nothing like it in the state of Georgia.

Yours very truly,
M. L. CHAMBERS.

Monster Celebration To Aid NRA Program

Editor Constitution: In order to help in the national recovery act of our president, F. D. Roosevelt, and in order to give more expression of our national Labor Day celebration, on the first Monday in September, there should be a mammoth and joint celebration on that day.

A call should be made from the heads of all labor and civic unions throughout the city of Atlanta for a joint monster parade, and that all business in the city be represented in this parade.

This will help to boost the NRA more than anything else.

Effect of Parole Abuses And Law's Leniency On Crime in Georgia

Editor Constitution: Please allow me to express my deep appreciation of your editorial, "Parole and Pardon Abuses" in Tuesday's Constitution. Many Georgians have been wondering how long it would be before an Atlanta paper presented an expression on this subject. You may rest assured that your timely article is gratefully received.

May I present some of Georgia's record, alongside that of Tennessee? On September 26, 1932, one of Georgia's leading businessmen, and one of her best citizens, W. B. Baker, was atrociously murdered on his farm at Woolsey—shot down without a moment's warning by a father and son whom he did not even know by sight. The father, Andrew McCullough, who did the actual shooting, was under a 20-year sentence for slaying a negro, and after serving 15 years of this sentence, was paroled just one week prior to Mr. Baker's murder.

The son, Alvin McCullough, who urged his father to fire the shot which killed him, was under sentence of 13 months in the chain gang for shooting into the home of a white couple who lived near Woolsey. For some reason he had never served any of this sentence—the presiding judge had allowed him to go under a so-called "suspended sentence." So both these criminals should have been in confinement, serving the penalty for their crimes, when this murder—one of the blackest in Georgia's dark annals, was committed.

Andrew McCullough, under death sentence since December, 1932, is still alive, and still seeking to evade punishment.

It is just such circumstances as this, with the law's delay, helped oftimes by high officials, which make others, with those of us who mourn this untimely taking-off, to wish that "There were an Anthony . . . to put a tongue in every wound . . . and move the very stones of Rome to rise and mutiny."

Blooms of Beauty

BY ERNEST NEAL,
Poet Laureate of Georgia.

After sunshine comes the rain;
Clouds disperse, blue skies again!
Softening, bright'ning summer hours,
Rain and sunshine make the flowers.

Thus from out our smiles and tears
Blooms the beauty of the years.

"Above Us All"

The blue and gray of the sky above,
The green of the fields below
Bring happiness a great deal nearer,
And a finer love to grow.

The joyous song of each little bird,
Their delicate rhapsodies sweet,
Seem but to draw each one of us
In understanding complete.

The fresh sweetness of the rising sun,
With its beneficent rays,
Makes one forget that there have been
Aught but glorious days.

And in each gorgeous sunset,
One cannot help but see
The Master's hand above us all,
In pure serenity.

CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

A Dangerous Overcall

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

I have repeatedly stated that vulnerable overcalls are the most dangerous of all bids. Although a certain amount of defensive bidding is necessary in order to prevent the opponents from reaching their best contract unhindered, this bidding must at all times be controlled by the rule of two and three. In other words, when vulnerable a player should never make any bid at which he runs the risk of going down more than two tricks. Even at the range of one this principle must be observed.

At an expert game the other day I saw one of the leading players in the country make a simple overcall of one spade which cost him some 1,400 points. Actually, the bid cost him the full amount of the set as it was impossible for the opponents to make a game and, in fact, they would probably have reached the unmakable contract if they had been allowed to proceed without the overcall.

North, dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ 5 ♡ A K Q ◇ A 8 7 5 ♣ K J 7 6 2
♠ 6 ♡ J 6 5 4 2 ◇ K Q J 2 ♣ Q 10 9	N W E S	♠ K Q 8 4 2 ♡ 9 8 3 ◇ 10 3 ♣ A 5 4
	♠ A J 10 9 7 3 ♡ 10 7 ◇ 9 6 4 ♣ 8 3

The bidding was very rapid. North opened with a club. East overcalled with a spade and South doubled. West considered rescuing with one no-trump, two diamonds or two hearts but finally decided to pass as it was impossible for him to choose between these three bids and also because his partner still had a chance to rescue himself. East did not rescue himself, and found that in the play he was unable to take more than three tricks.

The opening lead was a club and North's knave forced the ace. A diamond was led next in order to save as many tricks out of the wreckage as possible. North won this with the ace and then laid down the king and another club, which was ruffed by South. Now a heart was returned and three tricks in this suit cashed, South discarding a diamond on the third round. North now led a spade and declarer ducked, South winning with the seven. He now exited from his hand with the diamond and was down to the A, J, 10, 9 of trumps. This combination was sure to produce three tricks. Actually, a diamond was led, declarer ruffing with the eight and south overruffing with the nine. The lead of the ten placed East in the lead and he was forced to concede the last two tricks to South's tenance.

As will readily be seen, East's overcall was very bad, as he had no guarantee whatsoever that he could take five tricks or even four. As it happened, however, East and West could have escaped from their dilemma by bidding one no-trump. This contract would have gone down only one trick against perfect defense, and in fact stood a fair chance of making. If played by West, North's best opening would be a spade, whereupon South, obtaining the lead with the ace, must shift to clubs immediately. The declarer must then make two club tricks, three diamond tricks and one spade trick. In spite of this fact, it was extremely difficult for either East or West to rescue, and East's overcall must still come in for considerable censure.

All freak hands are laws unto themselves. No matter how strong a defending hand may be it is quite conceivable that it will be completely ineffective against the strange distributions which occasionally come up at the card table. The following hand is a good example of this:

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠ — ♡ Q 8 6 ◇ K Q 10 8 7 3 ♣ A K 8 7
♠ A 10 9 5 ♡ 7 4 ◇ A J 9 2 ♣ Q 10 9	N W E S	♠ Q 4 2 ♡ 10 5 3 ◇ 5 4 ♣ J 6 5 4 2
	♠ K J 8 7 6 3 ♡ A K J 9 2 ◇ 6 ♣ 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1◇	Pass	1♠	Pass
2◇(1)	Pass	2♡(2)	Pass
2NT(3)	Pass	4♡(4)	Pass
5♡(5)	Pass	6♡(6)	Dbl.(7)
Pass	Pass	Pass

1—Another possible bid at this point would be two clubs but the rebid in the diamond suit is probably better on account of the six-card length and the void in spades.

2—A force is not recommended because a fit in the hand has not yet been discovered.

3—This seemingly irregular bid is not as bad as it appears. No good purpose could be served by showing the clubs after South has bid two suits. A raise in hearts also seems inadvisable because of the fact that South might easily hold a four-card suit. The two no-trump bid is inferentially forcing and demands a rebid in hearts or spades if either suit is rebiddable. If South should sign off with three diamonds North is still prepared to contract for three no-trump.

4—At this point South must make some fairly strong bid. North's two no-trump bid has shown that at least a partial fit is held for either spades or hearts. While it is almost impossible for a three-heart bid to be passed, the game bid is better because it gives partner a chance to carry the bidding further if such a course looks desirable.

5—Now that South has shown a rebiddable suit North is perfectly safe in raising. His hand warrants one slam try.

6—South has really no idea as to the exact content of his partner's hand but it seems foolish ot stop at five hearts when the hand can very easily contain a fine play for six.

7—This double really looks quite safe. Even if the two aces do not take tricks it would seem that some other trick must be available outside. However, as pointed out above, freak hands can often come out very strangely.

West chose as his opening lead the ace of spades—probably with some idea of giving his partner a ruff on the second lead. This, of course, was the best possible lead from declarer's standpoint. He ruffed in dummy and then immediately led out the ace-king of clubs, getting rid of his lone diamond. His troubles were far from over, however, as an unfavorable break in trumps would put him down two or more tricks. But he decided to play the hand boldly and so followed with a diamond lead, which he ruffed in his own hand. A low spade was ruffed in dummy and the queen of hearts led and overtaken. Three rounds of hearts took all the adverse trumps and then the king of spades was laid down. Very fortunately this caught the queen, and so the contract was made with an overtrick.

An opening trump lead would almost certainly have defeated the contract as declarer would not have had time to establish either diamonds or spades—in fact, he would have been extremely fortunate to hold the set to one trick. This, however, is not a criticism of West's opening lead, as it seemed almost impossible for North to be void of spades on the bidding.

Scientific Plant Breeding Has Important Place In the Rehabilitation of Southern Agriculture

Work of David R. Coker in Developing and Maintaining Superior Types of Cotton Has Marked Influence in Improving Grade and Staple of South's leading Crop.

By HIRAM R. ROMANS,
Editor Southern Cultivator.

The pioneer work in cotton breeding of David R. Coker, of Hartsville, S. C., and his achievements during a period of 35 years, have played an important part in improving the grade and staple of American cotton and keeping it at the high standard that assures its supremacy in the world's markets.

For cotton is no longer just cotton; to satisfy world trade demand it must possess superior qualities, and that there are types of cotton today that have those superior qualities is due to the long scientific research and experimental work in plant culture conducted by the Coker Pedigreed Seed Company, under direction of Mr. Coker.

In 1898, two years before the rediscovery of Mendel's law of heredity, David R. Coker began experiments in improving the grade and staple of cotton, and his subsequent work and achievements not only have been one of the greatest contributions of economic value to the south made by any one man, but has attracted the attention, study and emulation of scientists in the cotton-growing sections of several foreign countries.

It has long been known that breeders of cattle, horses, sheep, hogs, dogs and other animals make a scientific study of breeding in order to build up a particular strain and to guard against recession in quality.

David R. Coker applied this same principle of heredity in improving the quality of cotton, and having given to the south a large number of superior types, which he is seeking to still further improve, began experimental work that has since given to this section numerous other superior articles of farm products, which will greatly assist in the production of food and feed crops and hasten the time when the south will be self-sustaining.

This article is designed as an attempt to explain in simple terms what scientists, in co-operation with practical businessmen, are doing to perpetuate and improve products of the farm so that they will meet the ever-changing and increased demands for the very best by commerce and industry.

Search for the Best.

Continued search for the best is just as active in plant life as it is in regard to improving breeds in animals, though this work is not so well known to the general public, because those who are most interested are necessarily high-class scientists, and their experiments, while fascinating to those interested in the subject, would be considered very prosaic by the average individual. And yet, but for them, class in plant life would soon deteriorate into scrubby offerings of nature that would not be tolerated by the public of today.

Sex exists in plants, the same as in animals, and the continued natural reproduction of a species in plant life is largely the result of what is termed pollinization, in which process the wind, visits of birds, bees and insects from flower to flower, carry the male element of propagation from one flower to another. Thus, natural reproduction is a hit-and-miss matter, as to whether the resultant seed may produce an offspring plant that will be an advance or retrogression in that particular species. Contamination is a common occurrence, and it is a well-known fact that the planting of squash or pumpkins near melons will ruin the flavor of the latter, and the same thing happens to sweet corn when planted near "field" corn.

In the south cotton has been the one great crop since the perfecting of the cotton gin, and for a long period the trade was satisfied with the grade and staple length provided by natural process of reproduction; but this condition could not last in this ever-changing world; in time the consumer demanded better goods, and that demand was passed on back to the grower of cotton; then those interested in producing the best in cotton began experiments to improve the grade and staple by exercising control in cotton plant breeding.

There are many high-class breeders of cotton seed, but for the purposes of this article the Coker Pedigreed Company, of Hartsville, S. C., was chosen, because its present head, David R. Coker, was the pioneer scientist to begin cotton improvement work; the company has a sound historical background, a long period of success that has won recognition throughout the south and in the cotton-growing sections of foreign countries; and while cotton is the main endeavor of this company, it is also carrying on experiments that are advancing the quality of oats, rye, corn, wheat, soy beans, sweet potatoes, cantaloupes, asparagus, okra, sorghum and tobacco; it is also specializing in Guernsey cattle, the head of the company being interested in keeping up the standard of that excellent animal and in increasing their number among the farmers in that section of South Carolina.

Start of the Coker Business.

Coker history in Hartsville really began back in 1865, when Major James Lide Coker, 28 years of age, a Citadel College graduate and Harvard student of chemistry and botany, then a wounded Confederate major, was invalided back home from a northern war prison. He arrived at what then was a cross roads village to find what was once a thriving plantation, consisted of some land grown up in bushes and briars, a sick horse, a milk cow and a bale of cotton.

With the money received from the sale of the cotton and credit based on his good reputation and business ability, he opened a small general store in Hartsville, and slowly commenced to reclaim his cotton plantation and increase his business activities.

The trade-mark of the Coker Pedigreed Seed Company is a red heart and the simple words: "Blood Will Tell." That the expression is a trueism is borne out by past history and the present status of the Cokers in that section of South Carolina. Energy, progressiveness, honesty, philanthropy, faith in humanity and fair-dealing were qualities in the Coker blood that have continued to the present generation. The Coker family led in building Hartsville and the community round about, and the stability and fair-dealing of that leadership gave back a generous return.

The little general store has grown to be the largest general store on one floor between Richmond and Atlanta; the plantation has grown to over 3,000 acres of the best farm land in the south; the Bank of Hartsville was made safe during the recent bank difficulties because the Cokers were behind it; the Hartsville paper mill, cotton mill and the great Sonoco Company are their property. In 1895 Major Coker founded an educational institution that has since grown into the magnificent Coker College for girls, renowned throughout the country as one of the best institutions of its kind.

Small wonder then that the Coker family provided a pioneer in real accomplishments in improving the staple and quality of cotton, and that the work of the company's experts should be continued on such a high plane as to attract experts and students from all parts of the cotton-growing world to study the methods employed.

First Cotton Experiments.

The present head of this great business, David R. Coker, after graduating from the University of South Carolina, entered his father's store. His health failing some time afterward he began farming, planting but 20 acres to cotton. His first year's practical experience convinced him of the great need of definite information as to best varieties and proper fertilization. The following year, 1898, he conducted his first variety and fertilizer tests, the results being published by Clemson Agricultural College.

The principle of plant breeding is said to have been known in the middle ages, but its authentic discovery is accredited to Johann Gregor Mendel, who issued a paper on it in 1865. However, it was not until 1900 that three other scientists rediscovered what is known as Mendel's law, which directed attention to it in a practical manner.

In the fall of 1901 Dr. Shoemaker, then in the employ of the Coker Company, and Dr. W. C. Coker made many striking selections from a field of big boll cotton. These were planted in a row test, and that fall Dr. Shoemaker and David R. Coker made a number of selections from the best of these rows, which were planted again in plant-to-rows in 1903. Dr. W. C. Coker had accepted a position with North Carolina State College and Dr. Shoemaker went to a federal position, but David R. Coker continued his work. The quest for the best in cotton was definitely on; it has been continued and will be continued.

Every year Mr. Coker selected the best plants from the best progenies, picking these each in a separate bag, combining and stapling, determining lint per cent, size of boll and yield, and planting the best of these in plant-to-rows, this process being continuous. In 1906 Mr. Coker developed a cotton that had large bolls, was very fruitful and open-growing, with a strong, wiry one and three-sixteenths inch staple. That fall the best of this was saved, volume increased in separate plots and in 1907 samples of each were planted in a variety test; two other progenies were saved and further increased in 1909, from which a few seed were offered to local growers that fall as Hartsville No. 5. Thus, after nine years of experimenting and breeding to obtain the best, Mr. Coker felt that he had a cotton of real worth to offer to growers—and began in a small way the commercial business of breeding certified seed that has since grown to such large proportions.

Over 100 Strains of Cotton.

In the years since 1909 the Coker Company has bred over 100 strains of 11 different varieties of cotton, 59 of which were considered good enough to offer to growers as up to the standard required of Coker's pedigreed seeds; the others, falling below that standard, were dropped.

In breeding to improve a strain of cotton many points enter into consideration, such as a vigorous plant with open foliage, so that the sun's rays may reach the bolls; early maturing; resistance to storms; picking quality—that is, ease with which cotton may be taken from the shuck without too much shuck clinging to the lint; per cent of lint to the boll; size of the boll; length of the staple and its tensile strength; oil content of seed; adaptability to certain growing conditions. In addition to all this there is an increasing demand for a cotton plant that will have the best of all those qualifications and still produce satisfactorily on land that is cursed with wilt conditions. The quest for the best never ends, for in the near future the Coker experts anticipate a demand for a cotton the individual lint strands of which will be thinner, yet stronger, than that at present accepted as standard.

In order to carry on the work of obtaining results, such as above outlined, the Coker Company maintains a miniature gin outfit, laboratory where seeds are tested, classification and stapling room—all operated by the most competent experts and scientists that can be secured.

The best strain of any type of cotton, possessing a high standard of excellence in all of the qualifications which have been enumerated, would retrograde or "run out" in an incredibly short time if it were allowed to grow and propagate by the strictly natural procedure—and that is what happens with the average grower. To keep up the high standard of the type, seed to be used in planting the next season's crop must be bred under control, and only seed from the very best plants saved for this purpose.

The process used in plant breeding is to have four rows for each strain of every type under experiment. The first row is called the test row, which has been planted with seed carefully selected from the best plants of the previous year.

Tests Are Run Four Years.

These tests are run for a period of four years, and the seed from many hundreds of plants are tested out each year in the separate rows, the seed of the highest yielding rows are again tested out against each other the following year, and several of those producing high quality and great yield during the two preceding years are again tested out the third year. The fourth year the one with the best record during the preceding three years is selected for increase and distribution.

When the plants have attained their growth and the white flower appears, the tedious but interesting work of controlling the mating of the best plants begins. Two particularly fine-looking specimens are selected and the cone-like protection of the generative organs of the boll is removed, exposing the anthers, or male element of production, which in cotton are extremely small, white, round objects, each of which is attached to a stem (stamen) through which tubes, infinitesimal in size, run down to the ovum or female part in reproduction.

The boll is emasculated by removing every portion of those little round white anthers; then the other plant is opened in similar manner, the anthers removed and contact made with the emasculated stamen of the other plant. Thus two excellent plants of the types and strain desired are mated to produce high-grade seed for a forthcoming crop or test of the standard desired. To protect this union from undesired contamination the petals of the flower are drawn are together and enveloped in small sack in order to prevent a visit from birds, bees, insects or the almost certain result of the wind blowing pollen from an undesirable plant.

The same process is observed when it is desired to cross strains of different types for the purpose of giving plants of a selected type individual characteristics desired from another type. For instance, here is a strain of a type that has every desirable characteristic except that its staple is a trifle short; and here is another that has many excellent qualities, including a very long lint, by crossing the two the longer lint is secured for the first and its standard thus improved.

Wilt-Resistant Cotton.

The Coker Company is carrying on extensive experiments to produce a high-class, long-staple cotton that will make a good crop on land that is known to be affected with wilt conditions. They have already produced a wilt-resistant cotton that is meeting with satisfactory results to many growers; but the Coker Company is still striving for something still better—the nearest point to perfection that it is possible to obtain.

Cotton mills throughout the country desire long staple cotton and they are so anxious to secure it that they pay a premium, based on each gradation in length. While all of the southeastern states are increasing the per cent of long staple cotton, South Carolina is far in the lead with 74.8 per cent of the state's 1932 crop being 15-16th of an inch or longer.

The improvement began in South Carolina in 1926 when the state agricultural college put on a five-year improvement contest. This was discontinued at the end of the period, but the upward trend was continued by farmers having learned that the longer staple would bring more money when sold on a competitive market. It is unfortunate that in many communities of the southeast the cupidity of local buyers defeats efforts made to encourage more growers to improve their staple. Hartsville has a competitive market, which is an inducement for farmers who grow long staple varieties to seek buyers where they know they will receive the proper premium. In some seasons that market will handle upward of 30,000 bales and mills compete for cotton of this section because they can get the grade and staple desired in satisfactory quantities.

Turning from the subject of cotton to some of the other enterprises of the Coker company, one of the most interesting and at present outstanding accomplishments is that dealing with oats. One of the difficulties experienced by farmers of the southeast in producing oats is the danger of smut. After experimenting for several years the Coker company produced a smut-free type of oats, and it is being offered to growers in quantity. Then they tackled the problem of a type of oats that would be cold-resistant; they secured what they sought, and then began experiments to produce a combined smut-proof, cold-resistant type. They have accomplished this difficult task, but this product is not yet ready for quantity distribution.

Yellow Corn Experiments.

While the Coker company has been working for some time in the production of high grade corn seed, they are now engaged in experiments to develop a strain of yellow corn that will give good results in the south. Feed experts have long recommended the use of more yellow corn for animals and poultry, and most of the yellow corn for that use has been imported from the north. Seed of northern yellow corn does not grow well in the south, but eventually the Coker company will have one that will satisfy all demands.

As stated earlier in this article the Coker company is constantly experimenting in improving varieties of wheat, rye, soy beans, tobacco, sweet potatoes, asparagus, okra and just recently they have begun on cantaloupes, importing seed from California to cross with the native product, and in wheat they are working to produce a rust-proof type.

George J. Wilds Jr., graduate from the University of South Carolina, and who holds a master's degree from Cornell University, is director of the plant breeding operations, with capable assistants to help him carry on the expert work in all the minute details entailed in keeping the Coker seed at that high standard required by David R. Coker, the president and general manager, before he will allow them to be offered to growers.

J. F. Clyburn, assistant general manager in charge of production, has around 3,000 acres under his direction, one-half of which is in increase cotton crops and the remainder in the other crops that have been mentioned. He takes especial pride in the splendid herd of over 100 Guernsey cattle, which not only supply the milk for Hartsville's dairy, but are the base of a cattle-improvement campaign that Mr. Coker is carrying on in that section.

Robert R. Coker, son of David R. Coker, is sales manager of the company, and his task in the great business is that of putting pedigreed seed of the highest quality into the possession of southern farmers, which should not be such a great task, considering what he has to offer them; but it is, just the same, for there are still too many farmers who fail to realize that "blood will tell" in the seed they use in producing crops, just as it will tell in their favorite strain of bird dogs.

Foreign Experts Study Methods.

That the Coker company has something besides seed to offer the world is evidenced by the experts in plant breeding who come from foreign countries to study the methods employed at Hartsville. Among the latest was C. F. Feng, M. S. A., Ph. D., a Cornell graduate, who after completing his investigations in this country will return to China and engage in the task of improving the cotton of his native land.

Investigation and observation disclose that the farmer who plants high-class seed, maintains the fertility of his soil by natural methods, supplemented by the judicious use of commercial fertilizer, is the farmer who has not been worrying about "farm relief" during the past three years.

Hugh McRae, one of the outstanding citizens and leading agriculturists of North Carolina, said of the Coker Pedigreed Seed Company: "It is revealed to me more clearly each year how great is the economic importance to the southern states of the scientific plant breeding which you have been doing for more than a quarter of century. It is an outstanding advantage to the south to have a firm of your qualifications continually occupied with improving the qualities and keeping up the standards of seed."

PUBLIC TO SOLVE RAILS' PROBLEMS

Eastman Requests 100,000 Shippers To Submit Ideas on Betterment.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—(AP)—A nation-wide effort to recover some of the business railroads have lost to other agencies was initiated today by Joseph B. Eastman, federal transportation co-ordinator.

One hundred thousand questionnaires seeking information on why the railroads are losing freight traffic were sent to shippers and receivers of less-than-carload-merchandise.

The information received is to be used in forwarding plans to make the services of the carriers more attractive to shippers.

Meanwhile, reports to the interstate commerce commission disclosed that railroads are abandoning trackage faster than ever before. This was attributed primarily to an increase of hard-surface highways near railway rights-of-way.

For the nine months ending August 1, the reports showed, railroads suspended service over 1,807 miles of track—almost double the 945 miles abandoned in the entire year ending last November 1.

Eastman described his action as the "first step in a nation-wide market survey of transportation to be followed shortly by other questionnaires which will be sent to the various classes of carriers."

He said the object was to "help the carriers improve their methods of handling and charging for freight service, with a view to greater economy and more efficient and attractive service better adapted to present day conditions."

"It is hoped," he added, "to centralize and co-ordinate efforts in this direction which the carriers are making individually. The co-ordinator recognizes that before any constructive plan can be devised it is essential to obtain the suggestions of shippers and full information as to their service requirements."

The questionnaire asked reasons not only for the use of trucks in preference to railroads, but why trucks are not used more extensively.

This apparently was for the purpose of determining whether there is need for federal regulation of trucks and buses moving in interstate commerce.

U. S. INDICTS FOUR HAMM KIDNAPERS

Touhy Mobsters of Chicago Held Under Bail of $100,000 for Trial.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 12.—(AP)—The United States government invaded gangland today with indictments under the so-called Lindbergh kidnap law against four members of the Touhy mob of Chicago.

Roger Touhy and three of his henchmen, held in Milwaukee, were formally charged with abducting William Hamm Jr., millionaire St. Paul brewer.

Two indictments were voted by a special grand jury convened solely to consider evidence in the $100,000 kidnaping of the Theodore Hamm Brewing Company president last June 15.

They named besides Roger Touhy, alias Robert Morgan and Harry Cobb; Eddie "Father" McFadden, alias Charles J. McFadden; Edward Burns, Charles Farland, Willie Sharkey, alias William O'Boyle and William Boyle, and Gustave Schachel, alias Gus Schafer, Peter Stevens, Gus J. Schafer.

All were indicted on accusations of conspiracy to kidnap a person for ransom and transportation in interstate commerce of a person held for ransom. Hamm was held almost four days at or near Janesville or Beloit, Wis., the indictment said.

Hamm was chief witness among 15 to testify before the jury. Immediately after voting the indictments, following the presentation of evidence that consumed a day and a half, the jury heard Federal Judge Robert C. Bell increase the $50,000 bail on which each of the suspects is held, to $100,000.

The higher bond was asked by L. L. Drill, United States district attorney, in charge of the government's case here.

Five overt acts were set forth in the conspiracy indictment. All deal with movements of the kidnapers up to the moment Hamm was accosted near his brewery and forced in an automobile. McFadden and Sharkey were named as the two men who accompanied by "others," awaited Hamm's appearance at noon on June 15.

McFadden was charged with having accosted the brewer before he was placed in the car where goggles, lined with cotton, were placed over his eyes.

Certified copies of the indictments will be sent to Milwaukee immediately and the return here of the four suspects facilitated. Warrants for their arrest also will be sent. A removal hearing for the four has been set for Monday.

The four were picked up at Elkhorn, Wis., July 19, after their automobile hit a telephone pole. Search of the car revealed guns and ammunition and their detention subsequently led to charges against them in connection with the Hamm abduction.

A fifth man in the group fled at the police station and has not been apprehended. He also is suspected of having been among the five or six men Hamm told authorities were in the kidnap band.

Ritchie Will Take Week Rest Cruise

BALTIMORE, Aug. 12.—(AP)—Acting under his physician's orders, Governor Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland, will leave tomorrow for a week's rest aboard the steamer Du Pont, flagship of the state conservation department's navy.

The governor said his physician said he should take a month's rest but because of the federal emergency program and the Maryland repeal election next month, he will be gone only a week.

"My doctor," Governor Ritchie said, "tells me that there is nothing at all the matter, except the constant strain, particularly during recent months."

Aunt Lottie's Plan to Boost the Price o'Cotton

By Wood Burns

A few weeks ago, when discussing the cotton situation, Aunt Lottie said, "If we'd bring back the old-fashioned quilting bee, an' teach our gals how to make quilts, 'stead o' them galavantin' all over creation, killin' time, we'd soon use up all the cotton we got on hand and be callin' fer more—which'd boost the price aplenty."

Now, the way it looks to me, Aunt Lottie's partly right and partly wrong . . . with machinery to make our quilts an' blankets, our gals have more time for tennis, swimming an' sun-bathing—which'll build stronger bodies and more alert minds than settin' around a quilting circle gossipin' about the neighbors.

Another item to be considered in making your own quilts is the cost—You can now buy your comforts and blankets ready-made lots cheaper than you can make them yourself.

To prove this—call on your favorite Furniture Store or Home Furnishings establishment and ask to see blankets and comforts—you will buy them even cheaper now during the warm summer weather.

Miss Askew Weds Lyman Johnson On September 28

The interest of a host of friends centers in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Askew of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Gertrude Proctor Askew, to Lyman Sherwood Johnson, of Atlanta and Syracuse, N. Y. The lovely bride-elect is the elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Askew and a sister of Miss Mary Askew, Walter Scott Askew Jr. and Wilburn Alexander Askew.

Miss Askew is a member on both sides of distinguished southern families. Her father, Walter Scott Askew, is widely known in the business and social circles of this city; a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Sanford Askew, of Cusseta, Ala.

Mrs. Askew, mother of the bride-elect, was before her marriage Miss Gertrude Proctor, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Jesse Proctor, of Forsyth, Ga. She is a descendant of the Simmons, Terrell and Kendrick families on her maternal side and of the Proctors, a distinguished old Virginia family, on her paternal side.

Miss Askew graduated from Washington Seminary and completed her education at Oglethorpe University. She is a member of Chi chapter of Beta Phi Alpha sorority. Possessed of rare charm and poise, combined with a delicate blond beauty and an unaffected sweetness of manner, she has endeared herself to a wide circle of friends and is very popular in the young social contingent here.

She is a member of the 1932-1933 Debutante Club, having made her debut at a brilliant reception last November at the home of her parents on Peachtree road. During the spring of 1933 she was selected by Governor Eugene Talmadge to represent Atlanta in the bicentennial pageant held at Savannah, Ga.

Mr. Johnson is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elmore Johnson, of Syracuse, N. Y., his father being associated with the Mutual Life Insurance Company of that city, and his mother was Miss Anna Darling, a former belle of Commerce, Mich.

Mr. Johnson is district supervisor of the Electrical Research Products, Inc., with headquarters in Atlanta. He is a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of

Miss Turner To Be Wed To West Virginian

LAGRANGE, Ga., Aug. 12.—The announcement of the engagement of Miss Hazel Vorus Turner to Cyrus Scott Kump, of Elkins, W. Va., is of cordial interest to a host of friends in the south and east.

Miss Turner is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Turner, of LaGrange. Her sisters are Miss Meredith Turner and Miss Martha Turner. The bride-elect's father is vice president of Calloway Mills and is prominently identified with affairs of the city and county.

Miss Turner received her early education in New York city where her family resided for several years. She graduated from LaGrange High school and attended Agnes Scott College where she was a popular member of the class of '34.

International Interest Centers in Marriage.

The marriage on August 24 of Miss Frances Stephens and Louis Hasselmans evokes international interest because Mr. Hasselmans has won fame on two continents as one of the greatest conductors of the twentieth century. He has chosen a charming southern girl for his bride-to-be, who has been interested in matters musical all of her life. Miss. Stephens' Atlanta friends regret that her marriage in less than two weeks will mean her departure for part-time residence in New York and Europe, but the realization that such a glamorous life awaits her takes away the sting of leave-taking.

One of the most delightful phases of her life after she becomes Mrs. Hasselmans will be the companionship of ten-year-old Geraldine Hasselmans, the little daughter of Mr. Hasselmans, whose mother was the late Minnie Egener. She is the namesake of Geraldine Farrar, who was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company when the little girl was born, and whose parents were such admirers of Miss Farrar that they named their daughter for the renowned singer and actress. Mr. Hasselmans has recently been decorated by the French government with the Order of the Legion of Honor for his distinguished service in music.

THE beautiful belles pictured above join today the ranks of brides-to-be whose marriages will be solemnized in the early fall. Miss Askew is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Askew, of this city, whose engagement is announced to Lyman Sherwood Johnson, the wedding to take place Thursday, September 28. Miss Lawrence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion McDonald Lawrence, of Marietta, will wed Lee Moultrie Sessions, also of Marietta, Wednesday, September 6, in St. James Episcopal church in Marietta. Miss Word is the daughter of Mrs. Martha Sue Word, of this city, and her marriage to William Palmer Drew Jr. will take place Wednesday, September 6, at the Peachtree Christian church. Miss Turner's engagement is announced today by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Turner, of LaGrange, to Cyrus Scott Kump, of Elkins, W. Va. Miss Phillips, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. T. Phillips, will become the bride of James Stephen Hughes at an October ceremony. She is the granddaughter of Colonel Robert deTreville Lawrence and the late Mrs. Lawrence, of Marietta, who were prominently identified with the early development of that section of Georgia. Mrs. John S. Laverty and the late Mr. Laverty, of Talladega, Ala., are the bride-elect's maternal grandparents. The bride-elect's mother was before her marriage Miss Mary Warren Laverty, of Talladega, representative of an influential and aristocratic southern family.

Miss Lawrence is a graduate of Sweet Briar College in Virginia and is a popular member of the Junior Welfare League in Marietta.

Mr. Sessions is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Moultrie McKinney Sessions, of Marietta, and the grandson of the late Judge and Mrs. William M. Mr. Sessions is a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology where he was a prominent member of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity. While enrolled at Tech he was also a member of the Anak, Koseme, Skull and Key and the Cotillion Clubs. Mr. Sessions is now connected with the McNeel Marble Company and he is located in the Atlanta office. Following their marriage Mr. Sessions and his bride will establish residence in Marietta.

Word-Drew Rites Planned For Sept. 6

Social interest centers in the announcement made today by Mrs. Martha Sue Word of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Susan Frances Word, to William Palmer Drew Jr., of this city, formerly of Asheville, N. C., the marriage to take place, Wednesday, September 6, at the Peachtree Christian church.

The bride-elect is the only daughter of Mrs. Word and the late Robert Milton Word, of this city. She is an unusually attractive young woman and is a representative of prominent Georgia families. Mr. Hughes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Hughes, of Atlanta. He attended Georgia Tech, where he was a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity. Mr. Hughes is now connected with the Southern Bell Telephone Company.

Technology at Boston, a member of the Yonkers (N. Y.) Order of Masons, Perry Lodge, and of the Atlanta Athletic Club. He is a brother of Mrs. R. W. Tieman, of Hastings-on-the-Hudson; Dr. Thomas H. Mrs. Healey Enjoys Wonders of West.

Friends hearing from Mrs. William T. Healey, who is spending the summer traveling with her friend, Miss May Hamilton, of Omaha, Neb., in the west, give glowing accounts of the travels of this prominent Atlantan. Following several weeks' tour in the Canadian Rockies, where fashionable Lake Louise, Banff Springs and Emerald Lake were visited, Mrs. Healey and Miss Hamilton journeyed to Vancouver, B. C. There they were lavishly entertained by friends before going to quaint, picturesque Victoria, where they spent some time at the beautiful Empress hotel, their rooms overlooking the clear blue waters from where the big white steamers sail to and from Alaska. While in this old-fashioned town of British Columbia, so English-like in appearance with its many houses of thatched roofs, Mrs. Healey and her friends made several trips to the famed Butcharts' sunken gardens. Those who have visited these magnificent gardens say that the very finest of blooms, foliage and fruit are found in this world renowned beauty spot.

After leaving Victoria the Atlantan and her traveling companion went by boat to Seattle from whence they motored to Mount Ranier, the wonder park of the far west owned by the United States government. A stay in Paradise Valley at rustic Paradise Inn proved delightfully interesting to the travelers who enjoyed climbing the icy covered glaciers, accompanied by expert guides, and the mountain trails lined with every variety of mountain flowers.

Mrs. Heale and Miss Hamilton are now experiencing much pleasure in their stay in a western lumber camp, where they are guests of Mr. and Mrs A. 3. Murphy, the former being president of the Pacific Lumbe Company. Before returning to Atlanta, Mrs. Healey and her friend will spend four weeks motoring through California, where friends in San Francisco and Los Angeles await their arrival with enthusiasm and where they will be honor guests in numerous parties typical of the Golden state.

Peachtree Road Apartment Furnished.

An attractive apartment in the Alhambra, on Peachtree road, is being furnished by Miss Gertrude Askew, a prospective bride, and her fiance, Lyman Sherwood Johnson, whose marriage takes place on September 28. A gracious living room is carpeted with an apple-green velvet and the davenport is upholstered with apple-green brocade to harmonize with the rug. Occasional chairs, upholstered with rust-colored damask add to the beauty of the furnishings, green draperies hang at the windows and the walls are hung in cream-colored paper.

In the dining room walnut chairs and table are placed upon a taupe rug and the wall paper matches the pattern in the living room. Modernistic walnut furniture has been selected for the boudoir and turquoise blue draperies hang at the windows and harmonize with a blue rug on the floor. Green and white checked gingham curtains the kitchen windows and matches the green and white-checked linoleum on the floor. Every modern convenience is installed in this important part of the apartment. Miss Askew and Mr. Johnson have had great pleasure in furnishing their future home, and everything is in readiness for their occupancy when they return from their wedding journey.

The wedding date, September 28, chosen by the fair bride-elect, is clothed in especial significance for it is the wedding anniversary of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott Askew, and of her paternal grandparents, the late Mrs. William Sanford Askew. The bride-elect's mother, as the former Miss Gertrude Proctor, took her marriage vows at a beautiful home ceremony solemnized September 28, 1909, at the family residence in Inman Park with the Rev. Frank Willis Barnett, of Birmingham, Ala., performing the impressive marriage service. Her sister, Mrs. Barnett, wife of the minister, was the matron of honor and she was attended by bridesmaids, including Miss Ida Thomas, now Mrs. William Akers; Miss May King, now Mrs. Hal Hart; Miss Frances Winn, now Mrs. Robert Smith, and Miss Rosa Middlebrook.

The best man was the late Julian Varner, of Opelika, Ala., and Augustus Gay and W. P. Bloodworth were groomsmen. Attired in her navy blue gown and carrying a huge bouquet of bride's roses, the bride was a lovely figure as she took her marriage vows. She carried an exquisite hand-made lace handkerchief and her daughter, Miss Gertrude Askew, will carry this same dainty handkerchief when she treads the orange-blossom trail.

The bride-elect's grandmother, Mrs. William Sanford Askew, as the former Miss Marie Antoinette Penn, of Cusseta, Ala., became a bride at a home wedding solemnized September 28, 1865, at the ancestral home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Penn. Wearing a billowing organdy frock of white, the lovely young bride plighted her troth to the man of her choice. Rev. Thomas Williams read the impressive marriage service in the presence of representatives of southern society.

Miss McKenzie Arrives By Plane.

Miss Frances McKenzie arrives in Atlanta by airplane next Wednesday, August 16, to visit her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Speer, on Peachtree road. Her arrival will mark Miss McKenzie's first visit here since she left Atlanta two years ago for Hollywood, Cal. She will be entertained at a series of informal affairs while here, and will be honor guest at a party to be given at the Piedmont Driving Club.

Miss McKenzie sought work in moving pictures upon her arrival in Hollywood, and she played a role in "College Humor," one of Paramount's most successful screen productions. She will appear in M-G-M's picture entitled "Show World," which is scheduled to be shown in Atlanta in a few weeks. Miss McKenzie possesses decided dramatic talent, which has won recognition on the silver screen, and she passed a successful screen test.

The plane upon which Miss McKenzie will take passage arrives at Candler field at 6:30 o'clock, and she will be met by Mr. and Mrs. Speer and her intimate friends, and will be transported by motor to her grandparents' home, one of the handsomest residences on Peachtree road.

Mrs. Richardson Returns This Week.

When the S. S. Manhattan weighed anchor in New York harbor at the early hour of 8:30 last Thursday morning, among the passengers disembarking was Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, prominent and beloved Atlantan who has spent the past three months traveling in Europe. A number of friends and relatives awaited on the pier to greet Mrs. Richardson as she descended the long gangplank, smiling and with arms outstretched toward her sister, Mrs. W. C. Jarnigan, who fc the past three years has made her home in New York.

Going directly with Mrs. Jarnigan to the home of her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Walton Forgy, the latter being the former Miss Erskine Jarnigan, of this city, Mrs. Richardson spent two days describing her many happy experiences in her foreign travels. This popular Atlantan left New York yesterday for Chicago, where she will meet her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Leaver Richardson, of St. Paul, Minn., and her two grandchildren, for a visit to the Century of Progress Exposition. The latter part of this week Mrs. Richardson will return to Atlanta, where a very royal welcome is planned for her by her countless number of friends.

Lovely Cuthbert Visitor

Lovely Miss Elizabeth Gay is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Gay, of Cuthbert, Ga., and the granddaughter of Dr and Mrs. Logan L. Thomas, Dawson, Ga. Miss Gay is a member of the younger social contingent and has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Erle E. Cocke and Mrs. Mimie Cocke.

Georgians Honored By Mrs. Van Lennep.

In honor of Miss Martha Berry, of the Berry schools in Rome, and her niece, Miss Virginia Campbell, who are visiting at Murray Bay, Quebec, Mrs. Freddie Van Lennep, a social registerite of New York city, gave a reception at the Manoir Richelieu.

Miss Berry, who is numbered among the ten most famous women of the United States, was introduced by Dr. Richmond, of Schenectady University, and spoke briefly on schools and school work. Miss Campbell, one of the loveliest members of Atlanta society, is one of the most popular young girls at this famous Canadian resort. She was a belle at the naval ball given Saturday evening in the Casino, in compliment to the commander and officers of the British battleship Scarboro.

Gillhams Are Residing At Summer Home.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tucker Gillham are residing at Kerrville, their delightful summer home near Memphis, Tenn., and are among the newlyweds making up a charming coterie of society in western Tennessee. Mrs. Gillham is the former Miss Frances Olivia Holsenbeck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Holsenbeck, of Atlanta, and was graduated in June from Georgia State College for Women.

Mr. Gillham is the hero of his father's book, "The Adventures of William Tucker," written by George Halsey Gillham, which is an interesting story and replete with unusual circumstances. Mr. Gillham, who is in business in Memphis with the Standard Oil Company, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Halsey Gillham and grandson of the late Judge George Gillham, who was at one time supreme court judge of Tennessee. He is a grandson of the late William Tucker, and is an honor graduate of the department of electrical engineering at Georgia Tech.

Miss Nonie Dale Is En Route Home.

Miss Nonie Dale, that winsome young artist who has been winning laurels as a dancer across the sea, has embarked aboard the President Roosevelt for America and plans to visit in Atlanta en route to her home in Washington, Ga. As Miss Hermonie Barksdale, daughter of Judge Richard Oliver Barksdale and Mrs. Barksdale, of Washington, Ga., she has a host of friends in Georgia who are interested in her stage success and her return to her native heath.

Visiting Atlanta as the guest of Miss Elizabeth Crankshaw, Miss Dale has been a popular favorite with the younger set. She attended Washington Seminary and later enrolled at Emory University. Studying dancing in Atlanta, she selected the stage as her career and her develop nent as a dancer has been marked. She has appeared in "Sweet Adeline," "Three's a Crowd," "Face the Music" and the "Third Little Show." In England she won the hearts of the British with her art and this demure American girl is an admired favorite at Drury Lane.

Richardson-Phillips Rites Take Place.

News from the Pacific coast tells of the wedding of Miss Lorraine Richardson and Will David Phillips, the ceremony having been solemnized Tuesday, August 8, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. L. T. Richardson, in Berkeley, Cal. The lovely brunet bride has a host of friends in military and civilian circles, for she has often visited her uncle and aunt, Brigadier General George H. Estes, United States Army, and Mrs. Estes at the garrison.

She is the daughter of Mrs. Richardson and the late Colonel L. T. Richardson, United States Army, and her sister is Miss Marie Richardson, of Berkeley, Cal. The wedding ceremony was performed in the long flower-filled living room of the Richardson home, and the guests assembled a group of close friends and relatives of the attractive young couple. The bridegroom is a representative of prominent California families and maintains a home in Alameda. Following a wedding trip, he and his bride will go to Seattle, where they will make their home.

Augusta Club Holds Sewing Meetings.

The Tuesday morning sewing meeting of the Augusta Women's Club resolved itself into a "quiz" when Mrs. Clarence Duvall, the president, told the women that she had decided to ask them the questions asked at the recent club institute at Athens.

In the course of questioning the group learned many interesting things that they had forgotten about their own organization. The begin with, they learned that, unlike so many national and state organizations who send a large part of their income to some central office, thereby depriving their own town of money that might be spent at home, the Woman's Club sends only 30 cents a year, per capita, to the headquarters. But, thanks to the courtesy of the Henry Grady hotel, which gives them excellent headquarters free of charge, this 30 cents goes a long way.

The women learned that the school maintained by the organization at Tallulah Falls cares for something like 300 children, some resident and some day pupils, and that it carries them through 11 grades. Many of the women had their club lore at their finger tips, but some were a bit rusty and it was decided that the "quiz" was a good thing.

The quilts are nearly through and the names are being inscribed as fast as they come in. The women want it understood that you do not have to have your name "written there." Anyone interested in the work that the school is doing in the Georgia mountains can make the small donation necessary and have his or her name inscribed on the quilt. The meeting was well attended, the big front room of the clubhouse being filled. Mrs. Guy Bowen and Mrs. Elroy Smith acted as hostesses, assisted by Miss Suzanne Bowen.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

Dressler, Beery, Now at Grand, Are at Best in 'Tugboat Annie'

There hasn't been a screen attraction in Atlanta in a long, long time which carries the universal appeal of "Tugboat Annie," now playing at Loew's Grand, with Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery in the principal roles. Made from the great stories which ran in The Saturday Evening Post, it is a picture ideally suited to the two great favorites, the best vehicle they have either had since "Min and Bill."

It is the story of a woman who captains a tugboat, whose chief handicap in life is a husband who cannot resist the temptation to drink too much. Time and again he brings sorrow into her life, yet he is always bitterly ashamed of himself and through it all she sticks to him, loves him and tries to help him.

Their boy, despite the handicap of his surroundings, rises in his profession and becomes master of a fine ship. He gets his father a job with the same line, which the old man loses when he becomes drunk. Still the wife sticks to "her man," refusing to leave him even when her son begs her to let him support her, on condition she cuts entirely adrift from her husband.

The two become the crew of a garbage scow, after the man, drunk, wrecks the tugboat. Then for a tremendously appealing climax, their son's boat gets into trouble and it is the old couple, with their rackety old garbage scow, that pulls the fine ship to safety.

A magnificent story, magnificently told and acted by the two greatest thespians in all Hollywood with a natural art that is more than magnificence. The kind of a picture that brings tears and laughter in rapid sucession and that you'll want to see, not once, but three or four times. The kind of picture that rejoices a theater manager's heart by keeping his house full all the time, with lines of patient patrons waiting to buy tickets at the box office.

In addition the Grand program includes a Flip the Frog cartoon, a Pitts-Todd comedy and the Metrotone News, latest release.

'The Wrecker,' With Jack Holt, Proves Big Success at Rialto

Jack Holt, in "The Wrecker," the current attraction at the Rialto theater, has already played to two days of large audiences and, according to comment from patrons leaving the house, it seems likely that the attraction will come near to setting a record for a four-day run before its engagement ends on Tuesday night.

This Columbia production is one of the most powerful dramatic stories ever filmed and it presents the popular Holt with a role ideally suited to him. Arthur Rogell, who wrote the story, conceived his idea in the midst of the recent earthquake in Southern California. The big climax in the picture comes in the midst of the 'quake and it carries a punch seldom if ever excelled for dramatic intensity.

Beginning next Wednesday, the Rialto will show, for three days, that most exquisite of all light musical films, "Adorable," with Janet Gaynor and Henry Garat in the principal roles. This is the picture with those two outstanding song hits, "My First Love to Last" and "Adorable." It is a dainty story of the love between the little princess of an imaginary kingdom and the gay young lieutenant of the royal guard. It is foolish and fantastic and frothy, but it is altogether delightful.

The story of "The Wrecker" centers around the life of a man who makes his fortune by demolishing outmoded buildings. In his rise to success he carries two friends, a builder and a junkman. The builder proves to be a crook and the junkman turns out to be a loyal friend. "The Wrecker" sees the wife he adores leave him for the crooked builder and take their boy, his chief interest in life, with her. Then he sees the two of them trapped when a shoddy building, made of inferior material by the grasping builder, collapses in the 'quake. The big punch comes when it devolves upon the wrecker to save the two, although by doing so he loses the right to his own boy.

In addition to Holt in the main role, the cast of the picture includes Genevieve Tobin, Sidney Blackmer, Irene White and George E. Stone. Stone, by the way, almost steals the picture in many places.

Carefully selected short subjects, chosen entirely with a view to entertainment, complete the two programs of the week.

Summerville and Pitts Team At Fox in 'Her First Mate'

Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts are back in town. This delightful comedy pair opened an engagement yesterday at the Fox theater in "Her First Mate," their latest Universal co-starring vehicle, in which they have outdone their previous efforts. The picture is a positive riot of merriment.

Summerville and Miss Pitts are presented as a married couple living in a "hick" town on the shore of Long Island sound, with the husband dreaming of a career as a captain of an ocean-going freighter—and working in a menial position on an Albany river night boat. The fun begins real earnest when his wife, in an attempt to satisfy his longing, secretly spends their entire savings to buy the little ferry boat which operates out of their town, notwithstanding that the ambitious Slim regards the ramshackle tub with lofty contempt.

Never before have Summerville and Miss Pitts been so aptly cast as in "Her First Mate," and never before have they appeared together in a picture so plentifully supplied with funny situations and dialogue.

On the same program the Fox offers a Universal novelty of exceptional merit titled "The World's Greatest Thrills." It deals with the adventures of cameramen and is quite replete with break-taking, hair-raising episodes.

Also worthy of special mention is a two-reel musical film starring Morton Downey, one of America's more popular radio entertainers, titled "The Hold Up." Downey, with the aid of several well-known personages, provides 20 minutes of unusually excellent entertainment.

Jimmy Beers, who has presided for the past 50 weeks at the console of the Fox theater's big pipe organ, is not appearing at the theater this week, having arranged to vacation for two weeks and in that time take additional organ study with the world-renowned organist, Jesse Crawford, in New York city.

Cameo To Show Young Fairbanks In 'Jimmy Dolan'

Romance, mixed with exciting adventure, is the keynote of Warner Brothers' picturg, "The Life of Jimmy Dolan," which plays Monday and Tuesday at the Cameo theater with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. in the starring role.

The story deals with a left-handed prizefighter who accidentally kills a man while drunk and is forced to change his name, abandon his profession, and becomes a homeless, friendless wanderer. He dares not enter the ring again for fear that his peculiar stance may give him away. In his frantic wanderings, he enters a farming family, consisting of a woman, a girl and four children. Here he finds romance and unexpected adventure which provides the story with a stirring climax.

A highly competent cast of screen favorites combines with Fairbanks in unfolding this unusually dramatic story. Playing opposite him is Loretta Young. Other important roles are played by Aline MacMahon, Lyle Talbot, Fifi Dorsay, Guy Kibbee, Harold Huber, Farina, Dawn O'Day, David Durand, Mickey Rooney, Shirley Grey, Arthur Hohl, Arthur DeKul and George Meeker.

Neighborhood Theaters

Two Great Features Billed at Buckhead

Two outstanding features are notable on a program which is unusually good throughout, at the Buckhead theater this week. It is probable that this popular suburban theater will again draw plenty of patronage from people all over the city who have formed the pleasant habit of enjoying the beautiful drive to Buckhead and return after seeing the program at this comfortable and beautiful house.

On Monday and Tuesday, Lionel Barrymore is to be seen in one of his finest characterizations, that of the great department store head in "Sweepings." This story of a man who finds his life's ambition frustrated through the failure of his children is one of the most moving documents ever told upon the screen.

On Wednesday, Joan Blondell will be the star in a picture which is remarkable because of its difference from the average class of screen entertainment. It is "Broadway Bad," the story of a showgirl whose reputation is made lurid for publicity purposes but who holds the sympathy of the audience throughout her career.

On Thursday and Friday the Buckhead announces a notable booking in "King of Jazz." This picture was originally released some years ago and is still remembered as an astonishingly fine piece of amusement. Re-released in revised form, it is even better. It stars Paul Whitman and his band as well as presenting a regular galaxy of stars and hundreds of beautiful girls.

On Saturday the feature will be "Handle With Care," with James Dunn and Boots Mallory. Short subjects are added attractions on each bill.

'Diplomaniacs' Plays West End Theater

A hilarious jumble of burlesqued facts supplies the fun in "Diplomaniacs," a musical comedy which will be presented at the West End theater Monday and Tuesday, starring Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey. Wheeler and Woolsey are commissioned by a tribe of American Indians to repre-

Monday night, at the Erlanger theater, Atlanta theatergoers will welcome Gerald Rowan, new leading man of the Peruchi Players, who appears in one of his best roles, as the hero of "Tiger Rose." Mr. Rowan is an exceedingly popular leading man in many southern cities, though this is his first appearance in Atlanta. He'll probably be the most popular male in town in a couple of weeks.

A happily remembered former Atlantan is the author of one of the best screen offerings of the week. Lamar Trotti, who used to chase news for one of the afternoon papers, but has more lately been something big in the Will Hays screen organization, is co-author of "The Man Who Dared," which is really the imaginative life of the late Anton Cermak, mayor of Chicago. The picture is now at the Georgia.

Bert Kalmar, who has written some of the most successful of screen farces, is an Atlanta visitor this week. He is the brother of Mrs. Harry Cohen, of 982 Virginia avenue. Kalmar is one of the writing duo, Kalmar and Ruby, who were responsible for the script of "The Kid From Spain," the Eddie Cantor opus, for "Horsefeathers," which carried the Four Marx Brothers to new heights, and for "Duck Soup," the new Marx Brothers production. He is also a song writer, including among his successes, "Three Little Words," "I Love You So Much" "Everyone Says I Love You," etc., etc.

* * * *

Manager Charlie Swint, at the Ponce de Leon, is trying something new at his house this week. He is going to keep one attraction for three days, which will be Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Inasmuch as the picture is "King Kong," he could probably make money with it as long as he cared to run it.

* * * *

The announcement this week cocerning "She Done Him Wrong," that most entertaining of all films, with Mae West as the star, concern the Fairfax theater in East Point. It will be there on Monday and Tuesday.

* * * *

Manager W. T. Murray, of the Rialto, has talked about nothing else for several weeks but his forthcoming showing of "Lady for a Day." What I hear of the picture warrants his enthusiasm. In any event, it does boast a story different from the usual type favored by Hollywood and I am really expecting big things when it is shown.

DIARY OF A PRE-VIEWER.

MONDAY—Saw "The Man Who Dared," at the Georgia. Particularly thrilled to note old friend Lamar Trotti's name on the screen as author of the story. It is said to be largely based upon the life of the late Mayor Anton Cermak, of Chicago, who was killed at Miami by an assassin's bullet intended for President Roosevelt. This incident is faithfully reproduced in the picture but I am not sufficiently familiar with the life story of Mayor Cermak to know whether the rest of the story is equally authentic. Anyway, it is an inspiring piece of work, well made and with plenty to keep your interest rapt throughout. And Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey will be seen at the Tenth Street theater Monday and Tuesday in "Diplomaniacs," their latest comedy-riot. They are seen at their best, introducing loads of laughs and several new song hits.

Wednesday, James Dunn and Boots Mallory star in "Handle With Care," the story of a romance that was almost wrecked by a couple of kids who couldn't understand why grown-ups kiss. El Brendel furnishes the comedy.

Thursday and Friday, James Cagney is featured in "Picture Snatcher," a fast-moving comedy-romance. Ralph Bellamy and Alice White have prominent roles.

Saturday brings "Out All Night," starring Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts in the hilarious story of a pampered mamma's boy who is pushed into a hectic marriage and rushed off on the most unusual honeymoon of all time.

Dietrich at the Paramount In Sudermann's 'Song of Songs'

Yesterday on the screen of the Paramount theater Herman Sudermann's great literary classic, "The Song of Songs," with Marlene Dietrich as the star, brought to local movie fans one of the most interesting films yet seen in this city.

Played superbly by every member of the notable cast, the story of the lovely young girl who meets tragedy solely because of her intense desire for love, is fine screen entertainment from the very beginning to the end.

Miss Dietrich is especially appealing. She looks more beautiful than ever, and it can easily be said that "The Song of Songs" gives her her finest role to date. The leading man, Brian Aherne, makes his screen debut with this picture. He is the young Englishman who created a sensation on the New York stage with his role opposite Katherine Cornell in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street."

The other members of the cast are outstanding. Lionel Atwill, Alison Skipworth, Hardie Albright and Helen Freeman comprise the leaders.

Special credit should go to the director, Rouben Mamoulian, who through his intricate cameraman angles and unusual settings and lightings, has turned out his best directorial effort.

Beautifully produced, dramatically human to the extreme and with interesting, understandable dialogue "The Song of Songs" is one of the outstanding pictures of the season.

Bob Hess is presenting an organlogue entitled "That Old Gang of Mine," featuring the pouular old number by that name. "Old-Timers" is a miniature musical comedy. Then there is a merry melody cartoon, "Shuffle Off to Buffalo," and Paramount News.

'The Man Who Dared' at Georgia Based on Life of Anton Cermak

"The Man Who Dared," based on some of the colorful and romantic incidents in the life of Chicago's late mayor, Anton Cermak, is now the feature picture offered at the Georgia, where it will be presented through Tuesday only. Yesterday's audiences declared it brimful with drama, action, dynamic excitement and a good supply of human comedy.

It takes the audience through the life of a youth who comes to this country, an immigrant from his native and beautiful Bohemia. It plants him in the raucous middle west of the nineties, and sets him off on a career that will always stand as one of the most remarkable in American life. Surrounded on all sides by political corruption and crime that acts at the drop of a hat, this strong young man carves a career of which the world is destined to take deep notice. His characteristics are primarily a fighting heart and a ready fists, but back of these are an outlook for righteousness that will not be downed.

Preston Foster has the leading role. While he has appeared in a number of motion pictures, it is this one that will thrust him forward as one of the foremost of the younger actors. Zita Johann has the leading role opposite him and makes a believable person of the woman that such a man would love.

James Dunn, Joan Bennett and Herbert Mundin have the starring roles in the hilarious comedy hit, "Arizona to Broadway," which comes to the Georgia theater for three days starting Wednesday. It is the story of a young confidence man who will give no man, or girl, a break, until he falls into a trap created by his own inadventure. Others in the cast are Sammy Cohen and Walter Catlett, both well known comedians. Catlett has been seen several times lately in two-reel comedies at the Georgia theater.

NEWS OF STAGE AND SCREEN

Tiger Rose' Play of Week ByPeruchians

One of the greatest successes ever given to the American stage by David Belasco, "Tiger Rose," is the offering this week at the Erlanger theater by the Peruchi Players. This romantic drama of the great Canadian Northwest ran for years in New York and on the road and it is counted as one of the greatest plays America has seen in the last two decades.

It will serve to introduce to Atlanta a new leading man for the Peruchi Players in the person of Gerald Rowan, who reached the city last week for rehearsals. Mr. Rowan is one of the most popular leading men in stock today. He has played with the Peruchi organization in other cities, but this will be his first Atlanta appearance. In Knoxville, Chattanooga, Tampa, Memphis and other southern cities he achieved a vogue little short of that of an idol, and the various members of the Peruchi group, who remember his previous successes, are elated that he has joined them here.

The hero of "Tiger Rose," a trooper of the Royal Mounted Police, is a role ideally suited to Mr. Rowan. Its virile characterization suits his type to perfection.

Mildred Peters, who already counts her local admirers by thousands, will add many more for her work in the title role this week and other members of the cast, including Mr. and Mrs. Peruchi, Klock Ryder, Robert Stewart, Gordon Peters, John G. Fae, Betty Crandall, etc., show in this somewhat melodramatic romance a side of their protean talents new to Erlanger audiences.

The story deals with the romance of the Canadian police trooper and an untamed daughter of the wilderness. It abounds in dramatic situations and adds thrills to suspense and laughter to romance.

The system, inaugurated last Monday, of reserving every seat in the house for Monday nights, thereby extending the rule of ladies free, when accompanied by escort, on Monday nights, will again be in force tomorrow. Reserved seats for any night performance may be secured daily at the box office, which opens at 10 o'clock. There will also be the bargain matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Walter Sheats' orchestra again occupies the pit, with some new vocal talent to provide a delightful surprise on Monday night.

a newcomer, Preston Foster, is splendid in the title role, with Rita Johann lovely and believable as the wife. Go see it and give a cheer for Lamar, an Atlanta boy who seems to have reached the point where we can all begin saying "I knew him when—"

WEDNESDAY—To the Fox, where I scanned "Her First Mate," with Slim Summerville and Zasu Pitts. The screen version of the Frank Craven play, "Salt Water," which was so beautifully produced by the Theater Guild some years ago. It is a clever story, with a brilliant piece of study in human nature. I expect that audiences at the Fox will fill the big place with their gales of laughter, though it is a little hard to judge a comedy in an empty house, as I saw this at the private preview. As for Summerville and Pitts—well, you all know just the kind of work they do. And the cast boasts other names which should draw, including Una Merkel and Warren Hymer—both unusually excellent—and Henry Armetta and George Marion, who were never poor in their lifetimes of acting.

sent them at the Geneva peace conference.

Wednesday, Kay Francis in "Man Wanted," in which Miss Francis plays the part of a wealthy society woman who turns to business as her prime interest, is offered. David Manners and Guy Kibbee are in the supporting cast.

Due to many requests for another showing, "State Fair" will be returned for one day, Thursday only. Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres and Sally Eilers are in the cast.

If you had ever stood in the center of a barred arena, completely surrounded by 43 snarling lions and tigers, you could form some idea of the thrills in "The Big Cage," which has its engagement Friday. Clyde Beatty, Anita Page, Andy Devine and Raymond Hatton have the leading roles.

Saturday brings one of Zane Grey's most popular novels to the screen, "Under the Tonto Rim," with Stuart Erwin, Fred Kohler, Verna Hillie and Raymond Hatton.

Empire Books Five Features for Week

Five outstanding talkies are billed as features at the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, this week.

Sweeping swiftly from gayety and glamor to strong emotional drama, "Broadway Bad," with Joan Blondell, Ginger Rogers and Ricardo Cortez will be shown on Monday and Tuesday. Here is an intriguing human interest story beautifully interpreted by its cast of finished performers. Incidentally 30 of Hollywood's shapeliest girls decorate "Broadway Bad."

Wednesday's feature will show the ever-popular star, Barbara Stanwyck, in "Ten Cents a Dance."

International diplomacy, with its intricacy of plot and counter-plot, and with a strong romantic interest for good measure, supplies the theme for "Six Hours to Live," with Warner Baxter, Miriam Jordan and John Boles, the screen treat for Thursday, while Friday's feature will be that scorching romance beneath a tropical sun, "The Man Called Back," in which Conrad Nagle is seen as a famous surgeon, then a tramp.

Dadedevil Tim McCoy, riding into thrills, laughing at danger and daring all for love in "Man of Action," will provide entertainment for both young and old on Saturday.

Dix at Ponce de Leon In "The Great Jasper"

Richard Dix, Wera Engels and Edna May Oliver will be presented Monday and Tuesday at the Ponce de Leon theater in "The Great Jasper," the private life of a free lance lover who was hated by men and adored by women. The only woman who turned him down was his wife—other people's wives showered him with affection and attention.

A romantic episode in the life of a prehistoric ape is pictured in "King Kong," the offering Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Robert Armstrong and Fay Wray are in this thrilling drama centering around an ape 50 feet tall that was captured and brought to civilization.

Saturday, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey are in an all-comedy drama made better by the presence of Edna May Oliver, Roscoe Ates and Edgar Kennedy. The Wheeler-Woolsey team tries to turn the jail into a madhouse and almost succeeds in driving the warden crazy. The entire show is one continuous laugh.

"State Fair" Returns To DeKalb Monday

The popularity of "State Fair" demands a return engagement Monday at the DeKalb theater, where it was so well received at its previous playdate. Will Rogers, Janet Gaynor, Lew Ayres, Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Craven and Victor Jory comprise a wonderful cast for this great story by Phil Stong. It's a simple, understandable story for everyone.

James Dunn, Boots Mallory, El Brendel and Buster Phelps appear Tuesday in "Handle With Care," a story of a romance that is nearly wrecked by a couple of kids who can't understand why grown-ups kiss.

A fascinating story of the orient is presented Wednesday by William Powell, Doris Kenyon, Marian Marsh, Louis Calhern and Alison Skipworth, who appear in "The Road to Singapore."

Thursday and Friday Wheeler and Woolsey appear in another of their nonsensical, riotious comedies. This one is titled "Diplomaniacs."

Georgia O'Brien, famous outdoor star, is featured Saturday with Nell O'Day in "Smoke Lightning," a Zane Grey story full of western action.

Palace Opens Week With "Diplomaniacs"

The Palace presents Monday and Tuesday, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey in "Diplomaniacs," a hilarious jumble of burlesqued facts which begin when Wheeler and Woolsey open a barber shop on an Indian reservation. This latest comedy hit is elaborately staged and set off with delightful and tuneful musical spectacles.

Wednesday, Clyde Beatty is featured with Anita Page in "The Big Cage," Universal's thrilling circus drama, which is built around the life story of the world's greatest wild animal trainer.

James Cagney appears Thursday and Friday in "The Picture Snatcher," a sensational comedy which offers many hilarious thrills.

Saturday brings Zane Grey's "The Mysterious Rider," a new type western which depicts the life of the present-day range rider.

'DIPLOMANIACS' BILLED AT THREE THEATERS

A hilarious jumble of burlesqued facts supplies the fun in the musical comedy "Diplomaniacs," which comes to the Tenth Street, Palace and West End theaters Monday and Tuesday, with the celebrated comedy pair, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, in the stellar roles.

The production soars into broad burlesque, staged in the conference hall of the Genoa peace conference. The bickering and innuendo-hurling of diplomatic circles is transposed into actual physical encounters.

LILLIAN MAE PATTERNS

PATTERNS 1521 AND 1520.

Word comes from Paris that every smart wardrobe includes a suit or a swagger coat of novelty wool, cotton or wool-like crepe. The models sketched today add to their French origin a flavor of American dash and spirit . . . that's why they're so irresistible! The coat with its swagger flare finishes just above the kneeline, its sleeves are raglan and the scarf ties nonchalantly under the chin. Think of all the times you'll wear it! "Square your shoulders smartly with epaulets" . . . the modish suit does this emphatically and to further capture your approval there are chic revers and clever diagonal closing. The plain skirt keeps the hips slim and trim.

Pattern 1521 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Size 16 requires 2 3-4 yards 54-inch fabric and 2 5-8 yards 39-inch lining.

NRA Completes Organization Of Atlanta Women's Division

Organization of the women's division of the Atlanta NRA campaign is nearing completion and plans are being perfected to enlist the support and active co-operation of the women of the city in carrying out the purposes of the president's re-employment movement.

Mrs. Max E. Land, chairman of the women's division, in announcing the appointment of committees, pointed out that it has been impossible to contact everyone personally and asked that the announcement be considered official. All members were requested to meet in the general assembly room of the Chamber of Commerce Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at which time plans for the campaign will be completed.

The clubs composing the Atlanta federation will be contacted by Mrs. Oscar Palmour, president of the federation and vice chairman of the Atlanta general committee. It was requested that other club and organization heads follow this plan so as to facilitate and speed up the work of getting resolutions of corporations adopted and individual pledge cards signed.

The Atlanta Women's Club, of the executive board, in meeting Friday, passed a resolution enthusiastically indorsing the president's plan and pledging whole-hearted support in carrying it out. Pledge cards were signed by all members attending. Other members are being contacted in order that the pledge of this club may be 100 per cent. Similar action already has been taken by several women's organizations. The welfare department of the Atlanta Woman's Club last week indorsed the NRA. Real Cinderella Romances Found In Movie Studios

By MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 12.—The cinderella of the lot today may be the star tomorrow. Movies work that fast.

Yet we seldom give much time and space to these girls whose bright eyes, beautiful forms and glistening hair make them the bright spots of the profession. Our neglect is not from lack of interest or sympathy. Merely that we might devote a lot of reading space to somebody who will fail to make good with the public and, by so doing, rob that public of hearing about somebody they already are interested in and about whom they with to know.

A few of these girls—notably some in Buddy de Sylva's new musical comedy, "My Weakness," are having their first opportunity to show what talents they possess. Irene Bentley, Dixie Frances and Mary Howard.

Of course by now you all know that Mary Howard isn't her real name. Her name is Mary Rogers and she is the daughter of Will, the famous cowboy humorist of the Fox lot. She looks exactly like what she is—a product of the Sarah Lawrence school. She is a well-bred, exquisitely educated miss who rides like a Diana, dances like a nymph, speaks the sort of English that sort of a young lady should speak, has the silhouette that should go with such accomplishments and the springtime face which makes her accomplishments irresistible.

She enters pictures without the opposition of her parents and, if she makes good, some day will undoubtedly do what Dorothy Stone has done—appear with her father as the "Rolling Stones" have appeared to the entire country's delight. Mary Howard got through the preliminary tests at the studio without influence or help—her beauty, personality and figure carried her through a test which eliminated several hundred girls and narrowed the contest to 50. Out of 50 to 6...and Mary Rogers survived. The others are mostly Broadway "show" girls and "bit" players from the other lots.

Dixie Frances was born in humble circumstances in Kansas City. This happened 18 years ago and just half of that time ago the young lady decided to be a "movie." At 9 then, she joined a kiddie group which sang on the radio. They received no money but it was a start, even though the station was small.

Concentration on singing and the banjo brought her occasional jobs as an entertainer by the time she was 12. And at 14 she joined a musical revue company which did the tank towns of Missouri, Nebraska and other states. Stranded, she returned home and modeled coats—sang over the radio—did commercial movie work. She tried a couple more tours all of which ended disastrously, so she decided finally that she could starve just as well in Hollywood as in any other part of the globe.

She landed in Hollywood with enough money to keep her for a week and got a job at the Le Boheme cafe in Hollywood and later one at the Plantation Club in Culver City. The rest is clear sailing. Buddy De Sylva, roaming around the night spots for a new face, saw a charming one in the girl with big black eyes who sang a song with a difference. Three weeks in Hollywood and a producer selects her for a spot in a picture. This is Cinderella stuff with a vengeance.

Irene Bentley's life in New York was all that many a girl could desire. Gently bred, reared in aristocratic surroundings and expected to follow in the tradition of her family and her friends, she fooled them all. Her uncle is Harry B. Smith, retired author of scores of the musical comedies of yesterday. And to him this girl turned for her career. So determined was she to have a life of work rather than bridge-playing that her family laughingly decided to let her get the "bug" out of her system right away and permitted the uncle to introduce her to Lee Shubert.

That introduction was never made. Arrived at Lee Shubert's office Harry Smith met a man he had known for years, who said:

"You are too pretty for the stage, let me put you into movies." To make a long story short, she appeared in a test for Harvey B. Stevens. The beautiful "stooge" of this test caught the watchful eye of S. R. Kent and a contract followed. Her second test was made by Buddy De Sylva for the second lead in "My Weakness." She won out. She's had easy going in the first lap of picture making and here's hoping the whole way will be as smooth.

Mrs. Martha Christmas Is Georgia's Real Daughter of the Revolution

By Mrs. Sidney Smith, of Gainesville, State Editor.

Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution present the name of Mrs. Martha Brown Christmas, of Dooly county, daughter of Laomi Brown, Revolutionary soldier of South Carolina, to the national society as a real daughter of the American Revolution. This remarkable piece of information gives to Georgia three out of the six living daughters credited to the national society, with Mrs. Mary Pool Newsome and her sister, Miss Sarah Pool, of Glascock county, completing the trio.

Dillard Lasseter, county historian of Dooly county, lately of Vienna but more recently of College Park, discovered the fact that Mrs. Christmas was a real daughter of the Revolution. Mr. Lasseter has done extensive research along the lines of Revolutionary and Civil War periods and he discovered the identity of Mrs. Christmas, only living daughter of Laomi Brown, who was born in South Carolina between 1766-1768 and served as a lad of 14 or 15 in the late years of the Revolutionary War. His father was Robert Brown and his mother was Pollie Rambert. Loami Brown married Frances Clarke, who was born in 1790.

Mrs. Christmas was the youngest daughter of this union and she makes her home with her daughter in Dooly county. She was born in 1838 and recently observed her ninety-fifth birthday. She married George Washington Rogers and one child, William A. Rogers, was born. After the death of Mr. Rogers his widow became the bride of Daniel J. Christmas.

Announcement of the discovery of Mrs. Christmas as a true daughter of the Revolution was made by Mrs. J. Harold Nicholson, of Atlanta, state historian for Georgia D. A. R.

Governor James Wright, following his departure from Georgia in 1782, wrote to the Right Honorable Thomas Townshend, esquire, his majesty's principal secretary of state, a letter describing conditions in Savannah during the latter part of the war. The following are extracts from this report, which was dated September 3, 1782. The letter is taken from manuscript volume 39, colonial records of Georgia, on file in the Georgia department of archives and history. Mrs. J. Harold Nicholson, historian for Georgia D. A. R., submits the following extracts:

On my departure from Tybee Island, at the Inlet from the Sea to the Town of Savannah, such part of the loyal refugees as were then collected there, in order to embark on board the transports in consequence of the order from Sir Guy Carleton to evacuate the province of Georgia, to the number of about eight hundred, on the 5th day of July last addressed me & most earnestly requested, that I would lay before His Majesty, a true & faithful state of the province, & of their sufferings & distresses in general, and particularly by the cruel order for the evacuation.

And the following I conceive to contain a concise view of the situation of affairs there, for three years past, in March 1779, I was ordered out from hence by His Majesty, with the rest of the kings officers, in order to re-establish His Majesty's civil government in Georgia, & I landed there on the 13th day of July, when I soon began to set about that pleasing work, but on the 12th of Sepr. following the Count D'Estaign landed the French troops to the number of from 6 to 7 thousand, and a few days after the Rebel General Lincoln joined him with about 3000 rebel forces, & laid close siege to the town of Savannah attended with a most furious bombardment & cannonade, which continued till the 9th of October, when by the blessing of God, they were totally defeated, & routted by the united & spirited efforts of His Majesty's troops & his loyal & faithful subjects there. . . .

The province was peopling very fast the latter end of the year 1780, when great numbers of loyal subjects were flocking in, to settle, expecting His Majesty's protection & safety from the tyranny & oppression of rebellion. . . .

But alas! these flattering hopes, were not of long continuance, for after the reduction of So. Carolina, & before the minds of the people were settled, & wholly reconciled to a return to their allegiance, & the authority of the kings government, the troops were withdrawn, & carried out of that province, & the spirit of rebellion still remaining amongst many of the inhabitants of So. Carolina, no sooner were the troops got a distance from them, than . . . a general & very rapid revolt took place in that province, & a considerable number of rebels from thence, & of Georgia rebels . . . fled into So. Carolina, and also from No. Carolina, & some who remained in the back settlements of Georgia, began to raise commotions in those settlements, and assassinated and otherwise cruelly murdered, as many loyalists as they could come at, & upwards of an hundred good men in the space of one month, fell victims to their loyalty . . . the rebel partys increasing, the loyalists found themselves overpowered & receiving no assistance or protection from His Majesty's troops altho frequently applied for by me in strong terms they were at length in order to save their lives, reduced to the dire necessity of quitting their very comfortable settlements . . . & come to the posts held by the kings troops at Ebenezer & other places, where they joined them in April, May, & June 1781. . . .

They retreated to Savannah, when the militia also came with them—and these people with their wives & children amounted to about fourteen hundred in number. Who having been compelled to abandon their all. fled at different times to Savannah almost naked & destitute of every thing . . . it became absolutely necessary to support them, & draw bills on the lords of the treasury for the amount of the expence . . . (they) contributed every thing possible towards the support of government, & flattered themselves happier times were not far off. Especially as I had received on the 4th of February last, a letter from His Majesty's secretary of state declaring His Majesty's great satisfaction with the conduct. . . . "I assure them that his loyal & faithful subjects of Georgia, may rely upon His Majesty's protection, & constant attention to their prosperity & happiness." . . . Flattering themselves with a prospect of peace, on Sir Guy Carletons arrival at New York,—when to their very great mortification, grief & astonishment, an order was received from him about the middle of June, dated at New York the 23d day of May, for the evacuation of the province, & notifying "That transports might be daily expected, not only to bring away the troops, with the military & public stores of all sorts, but also my self, & all such loyalists as might choose to depart, with their effects."

. . . There was then at Savannah 1300 regular troops, & at least 500 loyal militia might have been added to them, and the rebel forces under General Wayne, by the best information, did not at any time exceed 500, besides some small straggling party's of rebel militia.

And I had several meetings & consultations with the council to settle what was most advisable & proper to be done, on that most critical cruel and trying occasion, and on the 21st of the said month, it was finally settled & determined by the unanimous voice of the council, that whereas there was the number of rebel troops herein before mentioned, then in the province, and as the kings were ordered away . . . the rebel General Green was then in So. Carolina, within three easy days March of Savannah, & was said to have with him upwards of 2000 men, besides the militia in that province . . . (we) found ourselves contrained to abandon our valuable estates & crops, & to quite the province with such of our moveable property as we could collect almost instantly, not having received the least previous notice. . . .

And I must beg leave to repeat & assert that the kings subjects in general in Georgia have from time to time, given the strongest proofs possible of their loyalty & firm attachment to his majesty's person & government. I have the honor to be with perfect esteem.

Sir your excellencys most obedt: hble servant: JA: WRIGHT.

Mrs. Gholston Addresses Letter To Club Presidents and Members

In response to a letter from Mrs. LaFell Dickinson, chairman of the budget of General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. J. W. Gholston, state president Georgia Federation, writes to club presidents and members as follows on balancing the federation budget:

"May I ask if your club is carrying a paid subscription to The Clubwoman, our official national club magazine? Every club president is graciously complimented by the General Federation of Women's Clubs with a free subscription, but this copy she needs to keep for her own benefit and reference. So it behooves each club to have within its possession one copy to circulate among its members, or within their reach upon the reading table of library or club room. Those planning programs or needing material to fulfill same will find abundant help upon its pages.

"It is a splendid idea for keeping club members abreast in club movements, with the happenings in other states, or in individual clubs. It is largely through comparison that we are able to measure our own growth. An efficient method of keeping your club informed of the big club activities and general club personnel is found in having some member appointed from time to time, or for the year, to report briefly these highlights to the club membership at its regular meetings. You will be greatly surprised and pleased over the informative knowledge thus acquired and the alertness with which they attack their own particular club activity.

"The Clubwoman stands ready to solve your individual club problem, be it great or small. It is the fountain head of authoritative information.

"Do the following needs apply to you or your club: 1. Do you ever desire assistance in planning yearly programs in literary and musical subjects? 2. Would you like to borrow books, magazines and lectures from 3,000-volume headquarters library? 3. Do you need a textbook on general club work or parliamentary law? 4. Couldn't you use to advantage the splendid exhibits on art and pottery? 5. Would you like to know when available speakers, musicians and lecturers could be had? 6. Maybe you have printing jobs to be done and would like them done economically? 7. Perhaps you are contemplating building a clubhouse and would like plans, figures, etc., beforehand? 8. Suppose you anticipated a visit to Washington, did you know that rooms and meals could be had at headquarters? These and a hundred more services are available to you through the pages of The Clubwoman—the clearing house of club affairs.

"Free copies sent into Georgia are as follows: To general federation advisers and vice chairmen two; state officers six; state department chairmen eight; state division chairmen 32; district presidents seven; club presidents 153; total 208. Paid copies: State officers two; district presidents two; club presidents six; individually paid subscriptions 115; total 125.

"Won't you see that your club sponsors one paid subscription and thus help Georgia meet her complimentary subscriptions with paid ones? Send price of subscription and address to Mrs. George Burrus Jr., Columbus, chairman Clubwoman, Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

'Federation Extension' Is Subject Of Mrs. Albert Hill's Article

By Mrs. Albert Hill,
First Vice President, G. F. W. C.

Writing to the clubwomen, Mrs. Albert Hill, vice president at large and chairman of club extension, says: "August is more generally given to vacations than any other month in the year. Along with the rest of the world, the clubwoman relaxes and enjoys a period of rest and refreshment so that she may take up her customary routine in the fall with new vigor and enthusiasm. For the successful club president, however, August is a busy month, for it is then that she perfects her plans for the coming season's activities in her organization. If she is one of those fortunate club presidents who attended the recent club institute in Athens and had the privilege of hearing gifted Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole speak on every phase of club work, then she has a new vision for her task that lies before her and a yearning to make the members of her club realize the opportunity that is theirs in this new day of 1933. She is eager to bring others into her group and is planning an every-member-get-a-member campaign.

Radio Programs.

The series of radio programs given each Thursday at 4 p. m., eastern standard time, brings every woman listening in into closer touch with general federation headquarters and the inspiration and information that is there for the asking, and into a new understanding of the relation of the federation to national affairs—a relation that is growing more and more forceful as the new deal is unfolding. Arrange radio parties for these broadcasts, inviting those whom you would like to add to your membership list. They will become interested and eager to join the organization that is so awake to its opportunity and is co-operating so closely with the government in every effort put forth for the betterment of conditions generally. Copies of the address delivered by Mrs. Poole at the Richmond council May 24 are available at general federation headquarters. This address would be a splendid feature on any club program.

General federation is asking each state to strive for at least a 15 per cent increase in members this year. In Georgia where clubs uniting with the state automatically become members of general federation, let us center our efforts in building up the state federation, by working for new clubs, by bringing new members into clubs already belonging, and by persuading those who may have dropped out during these days of trial to come back into the club fellowship. Each clubwoman should feel a personal responsibility to carry this message to others.

Let every club president plan a membership quest and appoint a federation extension chairman whose special duty it will be to further the interests not only of the state and district but of the general federation. This is a vital need in the clubs today. Choose the right chairman, sympathetic, forceful, tactful. Give her an opportunity on your program. Encourage her to assist the president in bringing before the club regularly not only the big projects of the federation but the little interesting intimate bits that will create an interest and draw the club nearer the larger organizations.

Official Club Page.

Introduce your members to Mrs. Poole, general federation president, through her splendid letters sent out each month, The Clubwoman. Create a real need for the general federation magazine and our own official club page in The Atlanta Constitution. Show members how the state and general federations can be of assistance to them. Show them how their special club projects are linked with the great forces at work in the bigger organizations. The general federation director for Georgia, Mrs. W. W. Stark, will be a tremendous help in the strengthening of your efforts. Application blanks with necessary directions for membership will be furnished upon request.

Master of Arts Degree Won by Mrs. Palmour At Summer School

The conferring of the master of arts degree upon Mrs. Oscar Palmour, of College Park, president of Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, is a matter of great pride to Georgia clubwomen. Mrs. Palmour was given her degree at the closing session of the 21st summer school of the University of Georgia on August 11. The ceremony took place in the chapel and the degree was won by Mrs. Palmour after four successive years of study at the summer school. While she was at the university, her three children were enrolled there as students, and thus it was that the mother gained the educational viewpoint of the child.

The first year she attended the university her son, William Crenshaw Palmour, was studying for his A. B. degree. The second year, Miss Alberta Hansell Palmour was enrolled in the teachers' college. During the past term, her youngest child, 11-year-old Mary Louise Palmour, was a pupil in the model school.

Winning the master of arts degree was a remarkable achievement for an unprofessional woman. Mrs. Palmour studied for the love of study, and enjoyed every moment of her enrollment at the college. She spent every week-end at home with her family in College Park. Two well-trained servants who have been in her employ for 12 to 17 years, respectively, carried on the household affairs. At no time during the four-year course was the family neglected, and they supported her in her desire to win the coveted degree.

Aside from her club activities, Mrs. Palmour is the first vice president of the Garden Club of Georgia, and is an authority on horticultural matters. She lectures often upon this subject in Georgia and in other states, and has written innumerable articles for magazines upon horticultural themes. During Mrs. Palmour's administration as president of the College Park Woman's Club the handsome clubhouse was erected, which is quite a credit to the community and state.

More than 10 years ago, in an address made before clubwomen at the University of Georgia, she strongly advocated the organization of garden clubs and garden divisions as a part of federated work. The first fifth district flower shop was staged under her regime as president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, and the first club institute was held in Athens at the summer school of the University of Georgia under her term of office, and these institutes have continued successfully ever since.

Mrs. MacDougald Issues Message.

Let me urge that all clubwomen in the fifth district of G. F. W. C. to do what they can in their respective towns and cities to help promote the NRA program to stimulate industry and employment. I hope as a patriotic duty, that each member will fall in line, as we did during the World War, and that each club in their next year's report will have been 100 per cent in this national movement. This most important recovery act will also be uppermost in our minds at our coming convention to be held in College Park, the guest of the College Park Woman's Club, on Friday the 6th of October.

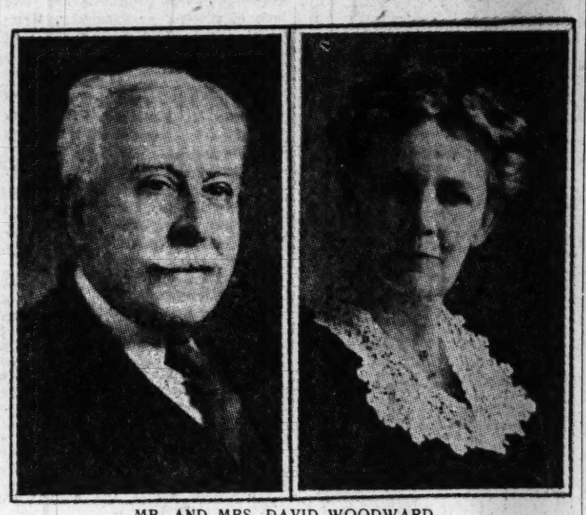

MRS. JOHN F. MacDOUGALD,
Of Atlanta, President of Fifth District of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Mrs. Talmadge Is Complimented By Douglas Club

At a reception and luncheon sponsored by the Douglas Woman's Club on August 1, Mrs. Eugene Talmadge, the first lady of Georgia, was honor guest. Receiving at the door of South Georgia State College were Mrs. Clinton Lott and Mrs. H. H. Williams, and in the spacious reception hall the guests were presented to Mrs. Talmadge, who was charming and gracious. In the reception line with Mrs. J. M. Thrash, president Douglas Woman's Club, were Mesdames M. D. Dickerson, L. A. Pope, W. R. Wilson, J. M. Hall, Cottle Clark, P. N. Smith and T. A. Clower. Mrs. Ed Rivers, of Lakeland, and Mrs. Cameron, of McRae, were among the visitors.

In the dining hall of the college Mrs. J. L. Cochran, chairman of entertainment and decorations, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Ellie Tanner. Over 100 enjoyed the luncheon, others besides the club members being invited to meet the distinguished guest. A large representation from Broxton Woman's Club was present, including the president, Mrs. A. R. Lewis. Mrs. C. A. Tyler, vice president eighth district, was present. The program, arranged and presented by Mrs. Cottle Clark, chairman music committee, included a piano solo by Mrs. Anne Stapleton; vocal selections by Miss Melva Coffee, and an acrobatic entertainment by Doris Castor. Mrs. W. R. Pryor welcomed the ladies in original verse, concluding with a poetic tribute to Mrs. Talmadge.

Student Aid Foundation Fund Honors Mr. and Mrs. Woodward

MR. AND MRS. DAVID WOODWARD.

By MRS. E. K. LARGE, of Atlanta, Executive Secretary.

With the gifts of memorials and scholarships, which were enumerated in the article published last week, the work of Student Aid was naturally broadened in scope and began to take on new regulations as the demands and expenditures increased. Five years prior to Mrs. Wey's resignation this fact had been realized and changes had been made in the organization and its methods.

As early as 1916 there was, to quote from Mrs. Wey's report of that year, "a feeling that a small rate of interest, say 4 per cent, should in the future be charged on all loans." At that time neither Mrs. Wey nor her committee were in favor of this policy, but, as the years went on, the consideration of this step became inevitable and at a meeting of the trustees, in December, 1922, it was resolved that with respect to all loans not already promised interest should be charged upon the basis of 4 per cent per annum. The members of the committee agreed to this decision because they had come to realize that it was essential to provide this means of covering the losses which would accrue of necessity to this type of work if they were to conserve the funds entrusted to them to administer. In the year 1923 the policy of charging interest went into effect and the committee has never regretted this step since it has assured the work of a small reserve fund and also made the student a little more aware of her responsibility.

Trustees' Meeting.

At a meeting of the trustees in January, 1924, Alonzo Richardson, because of much impaired health, tendered his resignation after 10 years of wise and unselfish service as treasurer of the foundation. This was accepted because of the urgency of Mr. Richardson, but with the utmost regret, and the Fourth National bank was elected to fill this vacancy. The minutes of the next meeting of the trustees, on November 20, 1925, record the deep sorrow caused by the death of Mr. Richardson and that of Mrs. Edward Brown, who had been one of the incorporators of the Student Aid Foundation and a charter member of the board of trustees.

Two years later Mrs. Wey felt it necessary to submit her resignation to the trustees. It was declined, however, because of a strong feeling on the part of each member of the board that the foundation still greatly needed the benefit of her advice and counsel. Therefore, they planned to relieve her from the detail and arduous work which she had personally performed for so many years and to this end they voted to create the office of executive vice president, to which Mrs. David Woodward was unanimously elected. Moreover, a committee was appointed for the purpose of securing the services of some suitable person to act as executive secretary, and Mrs. E. K. Large was chosen for this place.

Less than two months after the appointment of these new officers a meeting of the board of trustees was called, January 24, 1928, for the purpose of considering a letter from David Woodward. This letter set forth a very generous proposal to donate $5,000 as a nucleus of a permanent endowment fund—the income of which was to be used for current expenses. This proposal on the part of Mr. Woodward was recognized by the trustees as one of utmost importance to Student Aid, as it was a great step toward the business basis that was imperative to the continued success of the foundation. To this gift of $5,000 it was voted to add $2,000 in the reserve fund then invested in Atlantic Ice and Coal and also the sum of $3,000 as par value of the A., B. & C. Railroad stock, which had been presented to the foundation some years previously by Mrs. Mary M. Raoul and by her wish was now to aid in the formation of an endowment fund. To these amounts Mrs. Woodward promptly added $1,000, thus bringing the total fund up to $11,000 within a short time after its establishment.

As has been stated, Mrs. Wey died in the fall of 1928, knowing that Mr. Woodward would assume her duties as president of the foundation, with Mrs. Woodward as chairman of the committee. Always friends of the work, these two now labored untiringly to enlarge and perfect this enterprize of aiding Georgia girls in their effort for higher education. The committee added to its numbers during this period and introduced the idea of carrying an endorser's name on the note of the student to further safeguard the loan. Regular and interested attendance marked the committee meetings, which, in the absence of Mrs. Woodward, were conducted by Mrs. Charles J. Haden, the efficient vice chairman. At this time additions were made to the board of trustees also—thus forming a strong nucleus of some of the wisest business men and women in the city. Mr. Woodward took over into his hands some of the poor loans of long standing and was most successful in recovering these in part and in some cases to the full amount.

Great Leaders.

The summer of 1931 brought deep sorrow to Student Aid with the death of these two great leaders. However, in their wise and kindly foresight they had planned that the Student Aid Foundation should go forward on the lines that Mrs. Wey and they had followed from the first years of the work. To this end, Mr. and Mrs. Woodward had each left a bequest of $10,000 to the foundation, and in the summer of 1932 these sums were deposited in the treasury. In September of that year the trustees passed the following "declaration of trust":

"Now, therefore, Student Aid Foundation, a body corporate under the laws of the state of Georgia, setting by and through its trustees, hereby declares that it holds said two bequests aggregating $20,000 in trust for uses and purposes identical with those set out in the said writing of January 5, 1928, in respect of the said $5,000 fund mentioned therein. The trustees by this writing further provide that hereafter the total fund of $25,000 and any increments or additions thereto shall be known as the David and Helen Woodward Student Aid Endowment Fund."

Mrs. Charles J. Haden, chairman of the Student Aid committee since May, 1931, comments in her report of 1932 upon these beautiful gifts as follows: "Thus, through the wise and beneficent gifts of these loyal friends, their memory will live not only in the hearts of the women of Georgia, but in the lives of the host of girls who receive its benefits."

Important Correction

Attention is called to the omission of Monroe Woman's Club in the new Year Book of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. In the reorganization of congressional districts, Walton county was transferred from the eighth to the tenth district, but in assembling the directory of clubs the change was not made, which is a matter of deep regret. Monroe Woman's Club, of which Mrs. Lena Felker Lewis is president, has been a fine per capita paying club since 1913, an is very active.

Members of the state executive board and club presidents who have the new book are asked to keep it as nearly up to date as possible by entering the changes as they appear in the papers. All revisions and corrections sent in to state federation headquarters, Henry Grady hotel, Atlanta, will be published. Make note of these revisions: Mrs. S. A. Boland is still president of Jefferson Woman's Club, not Mrs. Luther Smith. Mrs. Mae Glenn Davies is the new president of Clarkston Civic Circle. A new group of juniors is a part of West End Woman's Club, with Miss Virginia Fridell president.

Molena Civic Club Plans Cooking School.

The Molena Civic Club met Tuesday at the home of Mrs. J. O. Bartlett with Mrs. S. O. Pilkinton and Miss Flop Pilkinton as hostesses. The business session was presided over by the president, Mrs. J. W. Capel, and the collect was read by Miss Floy Pilkinton.

Plans were made for a cooking class to be held at the clubroom next Wednesday and all members were urged to attend. Miss Miriam Jordan read an interesting paper, "Notable Events of July," and Mrs. W. O. Jordan played a medley of patriotic songs. A patriotic contest was enjoyed and prizes were won by Mrs. W. D. Bennett and Miss Ruby Beckham.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Fred Jordan, Miss Ruth Bartlett, Miss Evelyn Williams and Miss Marion Pilkinton at the social hour.

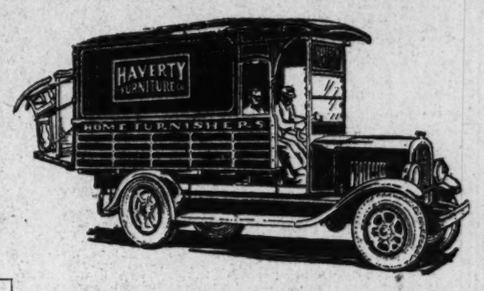

Maysville Club.

Maysville Woman's Club met August 3 at the home of Mrs. C. J. Meaders, with Mesdames Leila Sims, John Strange and Tom Telford joint hostesses. The president, Mrs. J. P. Georgia Legislative Council To Elect Officers Wednesday

Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, chairman of Georgia legislative council of women's organizations, has issued a call for the election of officers of the council for two years, the meeting to be held Wednesday morning, August 16, at 10 o'clock at the state headquarters of the W. C. T. U., 1436 North Highland avenue, N. E., Atlanta, on invitation of the state president, Mrs. Mary Scott Russell. The nominating committee, composed of the legislative chairmen of three of the large organizations of the state active in the council, Mrs. Marvin Williams, W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. W. A. Ozmer, of the League of Women Voters, will report and nominations from the floor will be in order. Each organization active during the legislative session of 1931, and whose name appears on that calendar may be represented by its president and legislative chairman. No meetings, other than informal meetings to study pending legislation, were held during the session of the legislature in 1933, this session being held in January before women's organizations were ready to prepare a calendar.

In her call for a meeting of the council Mrs. Stevenson urges individuals and organizations to forget self-seeking and personal interests and to prove their patriotism by uniting in a great educational campaign, through the member organizations of the council to reach every citizen of Georgia and to gain the co-operation of all by electing as officers of the council women who have a state-wide vision and the willingness to give time and intelligent effort to the work.

Mrs. Stevenson, who has served as chairman of the council since 1929, is president of the Georgia League of Women Voters and chairman of the department of citizenship for the Fifth District Federation of Women's Clubs.

there was never a better time than NOW to buy your FURS COATS SUITS in Allen's Annual August Sale!

The unforeseen conditions responsible for the abrupt rise of prices are by now well understood. Fortunately, we had bought, as was our custom, a great shipment of coats and furs for our annual August Sale . . . and bought before prices jumped. That is one reason why this year's event means greater savings than ever before. There is more to be said, however, on the wisdom of buying coats and furs now. The better furs are bought early, and those that come later in the season are never so lovely, so silky, so sturdy as their predecessors This is a natural occurrence, and none of our making. We can't get the quality later on that we have already on hand right now! It doesn't grow!

MISS DAISY SOUTHERLAND.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., Aug. 12.—Mrs. Margaret Southerland announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Daisy Southerland, to Andrew Heath Whittle, formerly of Atlanta, Ga., now of Davidson, N. C. The wedding will take place the latter part of August.

Miss Southerland, who is a graduate of William and Mary College and the General Assembly's training school, has been engaged in social service work at the First Presbyterian church of Richmond, Va., for the past three years. She is an active leader among the Presbyterian young people of that city.

Miss Southerland for the past four summers directed the clubs for girls in the Montreat assembly, to the great delight of the many girls who attended.

Mr. Whittle is a graduate of Davidson College, a member of the Kappa Sigma social fraternity, Omicron Delta Kappa and Sigma Delta Psi honorary fraternities. He holds the position of assistant director of physical education at Davidson College.

Officiating at the wedding ceremony of Miss Southerland and Mr. Whittle will be the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Pratt, professor of the Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary.

Mrs. Mildred Rhodes Urges Chapters To Meet U. D. C. Star Requirements

By MRS. WESLEY CHASTAIN, Of Thomasville, Assistant U. D. C. State Editor.

Mrs. Mildred V. Rhodes, of Athens, chairman of star chapters, is very desirious that every chapter in the Georgia division meets all star requirements. For the past eight years a gold star banner has been offered to every chapter which is active in all phases of U. D. C. work, a history of its origination will doubtless be of interest:

On April 21, 1926, members of the executive board of the Georgia division, U. D. C., were guests at a luncheon given by Mrs. Izzie Bashinski at her home in Dublin. In the afternoon the Oconee chapter of Dublin tendered a reception at the home of Mrs. A. H. Coleman, at which Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, division president, made a splendid address, in which she enumerated the various activities of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. This address was followed with a talk by Mrs. S. G. Lang, first vice president, Georgia division. In her remarks Mrs. Lang referred to the banner which was offered for the first time that year to any chapter contributing or helping in all the various activities of the U. D. C. She said, "What a wonderful advancement if, instead of one banner, there could be one for every chapter in the division. The idea was inspiring to Mrs. McKenzie who requested Mrs. Lang to write the thought and pass it on to every chapter in the state.

It is expected that a greater number of chapters will compete for prizes this year than heretofore and the announcement of two additional ones will be welcome news for many. For the first time the Lula Kendall Rogers trophy will be awarded at the division convention in Athens in October. It is a historic goblet, one of a number presented Mrs. Rogers as a wedding gift in 1863; given by her daughter, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, of Tennille. It will be awarded annually, but is to remain the property of the Georgia division, even if won by the same chapter three times. The trophy is offered to the chapter collecting the largest number of unpublished Bible records dating from 1800 to 1860, inclusive; records to contain name, birthday and records of Confederate soldiers. Mrs. Franklin is past president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., past state regent, D. A. R., and is at present poet laureate and chairman of southern songs and poetry of the Georgia division. For many years Mrs. Rogers was poet laureate of the Georgia division and this is a beautiful tribute to her memory. It will be remembered that during Mrs. Franklin's administration as D. A. R. regent, that Mrs. Izzie Bashinski gave a loving cup for this same purpose.

Mrs. L. T. D. Quimby, of Atlanta, honorary president of the Georgia division, U. D. C., has offered $2.50 in gold for the best essay on "Some Phase of Georgia History." It will be known as the Caroline Patterson prize in compliment to Miss Caroline Patterson, of Macon, past division historian, who is vitally interested in Georgia history. This offer comes quite timely during bicentennial year.

A list of other prizes offered by the Georgia division follows, in the hope of creating renewed interest especially in essay work: The Margaret Carter Hunt loving cup—For chapter sending in the largest number of new members.

Raines Banner—Largest number of new members, on percentage basis.

Alice Baxter Loving Cup—Largest number members between ages of 18 and 25.

Mrs. Harry Craig, president of Augusta Chapter A, has sent the following communication which will not only be of interest to every U. D. C. member, but to citizens generally throughout the United States:

Whereas, it has been brought to the attention of Chapter A, of Augusta, that the postoffice department of the United States is contemplating a change in the general issue of postage stamps;

And, whereas, it is eminently appropriate at this time of a united country that the images of the heroes of our common country to be placed upon this proposed issue;

And, whereas, we believe that our government should include in its list of those who are to be thus honored General Robert Edward Lee, a distinguished son of this part of the commonwealth.

It is hereby resolved by the executive board of this chapter that the United States postoffice department is hereby petitioned to place the portrait of General Robert Edward Lee on at least one denomination of the contemplated issue.

Be it further resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to Hon. James A. Farley, postmaster-general of the United States.

The celebration of the bicentennial of Georgia by Terrell county was in charge of the heads of the civic and patriotic organizations, with Mrs. Ivey C. Melton, president of the Mary Brantley chapter, U. D. C., of Dawson, as chairman.

Mrs. Melton collected historic data of our state and wove it into a pageant and presented it in memory of those who, in the early years, converted a wilderness into a colony and a colony into a state.

"Fair Georgia Land," a three-act pageant portraying Georgia history, arranged by Mrs. Melton and directed by her and Mrs. R. R. Jones, was presented two evenings before audiences which overflowed the large auditorium of the Dawson High school.

Each community in the county portrayed a period in Georgia history and the participants, 300 school children, besides adults, entered into the spirit of the occasion in a creditable manner. About 2,000 persons witnessed the pageant. Following is the program:

Episode I—Georgia of eighteenth century: Scene 1: Wild life of Georgia. (a) Colonization period. (b) Revolutionary period.

Episode II—Georgia of nineteenth century. (a) Spinning wheel pantomime. (b) Nitrous oxide party. (c) Tea party of the '60s.

In this scene all incidents in which Terrell county had a part in the War Between the States were portrayed. The soldiers used the gunstocks that were made at the Confederate gun shops operated in Dawson and running at full blast at the close of the war in 1865. The negroes were used in the plantation scene and their spirituals, by the Jubilee Singers, was a rare treat.

Episode III—Georgia of Today. Music was furnished by the Happy Harmonizers' orchestra.

"Wool and Satin" or "Satin" and "Wool"

Whichever way you take them—together or individually, they are smart. Wool with satin waists, satin sleeves and faggoted patch work. Satin with woolen dressmaker touches. Plain dull woolens and sleek shiny satins—all with black dominating the color range and browns, greys, greens and reds following closely after. Sizes 14 to 44.

State W.C.T.U. Editor Comments On New President of Association

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard, of Macon, State W. C. T. U. Editor.

Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, the new president of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, has many personal friends and admirers in Georgia as she has in her home state of Iowa, and in all the states of the nation. She was guest speaker at the forty-fifth annual convention of the Georgia W. C. T. U., held in Bainbridge on the fall of 1928.

Mrs. Smith was elected president of the National W. C. T. U. at the recent Milwaukee convention, and she has had a lifetime of active work in the temperance reform. She began to take part in meetings when only 10 years old. Her father was a pioneer worker for prohibition in Iowa, and she accompanied him when he made speeches in the famous "school-house" campaign for constitutional prohibition. "I would sing temperance songs at these meetings," said the president, "then go out and curl up in the buggy seat and sleep through the rest of the service."

She was born in Philadelphia, Pa., and when only 5 years old moved to Iowa. In 1880 she married James A. Wise, and two sons were born to them, one of whom is still living in California. Mr. Wise died in 1902, and 10 years later she was married to the Hon. Malcolm Smith, a noted temperance speaker, who died in 1915.

Joining the W. C. T. U. in 1891, she has occupied the position of district president, state corresponding secretary, state vice president, and since 1913 has been president of Iowa W. C. T. U. She is an ordained minister of the Church of Christ (Disciples), and has held and now holds office in many organizations for social welfare work. Always deeply interested in work for children, she has been active in the Sunday schools. For several years she was chairman of the committee on Children of the Conference of Social Agencies, in which capacity she planned for a children's code and was appointed a member of the commission to prepare this when the commission was created by the legislature. She is president of the board of trustees of the Benedict Home (voluntary reformatory for girls), has been vice president of the Iowa Christian Endeavor Society; treasurer of the illiteracy commission of Iowa, and a member of the legislative committee of the state federation of clubs.

One of Iowa's "most distinguished women."

Mrs. Smith has received many appointments from governors of Iowa, among them lecturer on citizenship to teachers' convention and institutions. In 1923, the governor of Iowa appointed a commission to name the 10 most distinguished women of the state, present and past. Mrs. Smith was one of the 10, because of "great contributions to child welfare and social uplift, notably through legislation secured by her efforts."

The new national president of the W. C. T. U. is recognized as a speaker of persuasive charm and eloquence. She has spoken in virtually every state and in many foreign countries. She has traveled widely in Europe, and some years ago spent a winter in the Holy Land and in southern Europe. Mrs. Smith's interests are not limited to this country. She is world W. C. T. U. superintendent of Christian citizenship, and has attended many of the world's conventions in this country and in Europe and Canada.

In a speech at the Milwaukee convention, Mrs. Smith declared: "Prohibition is religiously, morally, industrially, economically and socially right. Therefore it must prevail. The challenge of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is to inculcate the principles underlying prohibition into the customs of society and the laws of the land that the kingdom of Jesus Christ may come in the world and His will be done."

In her message to her constituency through the Augusta (Ga.) W. C. T. U., Mrs. Russell stated: "My heart swelled with pride as I watched day after day our matchless national officers (at the national convention), worthy representatives of those other brave crusading mothers, who, with no weapon save prayer, drove the saloons out, town after town.

"Mrs. Ella A. Boole is a great and rare woman; calm, poised, intellectual, sweet—a commanding personality. Her 75 years sit so gracefully upon her that it is unbelievable, and still she carries on as the intrepid leader of the world's Woman's Christian Temperance Union. But, as she stepped out of the national leadership and Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith, the newly elected president, stood by her side and grasped her hand and called upon her with whom she had worked as vice president for eight years, as the only one whom she wished to pronounce the invocation at her election, there was not a dry eye in the house, and we all knew that another rare soul had taken the reins and joined that galaxy of master minds that has led the Woman's Christian Temperance Union through its 60 years of temperance crusading."

SMART FROCK FOR SCHOOL DAYS.

So why not this fascinating model? You can carry it out charmingly in worsted crepes, wool jersey or combine tartan plaided worsted with plain worsted. And, by the way, tartan plaids are quite the mode.

You will note the tartan plaid gives emphasis to the broad shoulder effect, and is repeated again in the cuffs.

It's a very simple dress to make. You'll find its cost surprisingly small.

Style No. 342 is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years.

Another scheme is to carry it out in tartan plaided gingham with the trim in plain gingham in the predominating tone.

Size 8 requires 2 yards 35-inch with 5-8 yard 35-inch contrasting.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH AMERICAN MARRIAGES?

No Nice Girl Makes a "Scene"

(Except In a Crisis)

by Alice-Leone Moats —

With Drawings by the Well-known Caricaturist, Zayas.

ALTHOUGH a man would rather make you weep over him than laugh at him, don't be deluded into thinking that turning on the tears is a sure means of getting what you want. There must have been a time when the sight of tears coursing down a lovely woman's cheeks could be counted upon to break a man down and to win an argument, but nowadays the male seems to have grown hardhearted and tears only enrage him to the point where he becomes completely unmanageable.

Of course, there are still a few men left who are broken up at the sight of a woman weeping, but be sure that you are dealing with one of these and that you're the type that doesn't get red-eyed and shiny-nosed when bathed in tears; which is not likely, because, although we've heard of people who can cry and look pretty, we've never met up with such a phenomenon.

Big scenes at any time are apt to be more nerve-racking to the person who makes them than the one who causes them, even though they are supposed to be a means of letting off steam.

WOMEN have used them since time immemorial to gain their point, counting on the fact that men hate them and will do anything on earth rather than be mixed up in one in a public place, unless they've had too much to drink, of course, in which case they lose their shyness as if by miracle. They also lose their shyness, however, if they begin to grow hardened to having you go off the handle every few minutes.

A scene should be used only as a last resort, not only because it is the most ill-bred behavior possible, but because it depends upon its suddenness and unexpectedness for effect. Any normal person should be able to have the necessary control to prevent a show of temper in public, and you'll find that most of these unpleasant episodes are deliberate. If you want a proof of this, look around you and you'll see that so many women put their best foot forward while they're getting their man; as long as they're on the way to the altar they have perfect control over their tempers; it's only later that they let down their back hair and show that their nature isn't all sweetness and light after all, and they not only turn disagreeable, but suddenly develop unexpected domineering characteristics and treat their husbands more as they would their children: "Lester, it's time for you to go to bed, you must be up early in the morning"; or "Don't eat that, you know it's not good for you," are bits of advice that make up their continual refrain. They behave generally as if they had married a weakling and a fool. Our argument is that if you have had this misfortune, why not try to keep it from the world rather than advertise it?

"Women have used scenes since time immemorial to gain thir point, counting on the fact that men hate them and will do anything on earth rather than be mixed in one in a public place."

"Don't turn like a tigress upon a little man who has made an imprudent advance."

NEVER scold or row just to make an effect; unless you are really convinced that you are in the right and intend to make the whole thing final, the tables will be turned against you and you'll find yourself out in the cold, not quite knowing how you got there.

By all means, be definite and don't turn like a tigress upon a little man who has made an imprudent advance unless you're really annoyed and don't intend to see him again, ever.

The "Sir, you've insulted me" attitude or the long harangue about how you're a nice girl and not used to such behavior, gone into just to make an impression, is a mistake, because you'll probably be taken seriously. And the man may believe you when you say that you're not accustomed to such behavior and begin to wonder if you are so attractive after all. There's no reason to tolerate impertinent passes, but the idea is to make it clear that you are not interested and not to convey the impression that, although you're extremely virtuous, it may be possible to persuade you eventually.

THE one time when you should never lose your temper is when you are out with an escort who is very much in his cups. You are bound to get the worst of a quarrel with a drunk, and no matter how eloquent you are, it's a loss of time to try to impress him with your anger, since he'll remember nothing by the next day. Be patient and calm; don't even disagree with him about anything, and, above all, don't let him know you think he's tight. If he's really reached the unpleasant stage, you'd better persuade him to take you home and hold your fury until the next day, when it may have some effect, although that's doubtful.

The bridge table is another place where you should keep your temper and demand the same control of others. Strangely enough, it's the one place where people with the most perfect breeding will show up in a very bad light. Of course, married couples who play together are the worst offenders, but, alas, they are not the only ones. Almost any bridge fiend loses all sense of proportion when a partner forgets that the deuce of clubs was good, and will bring it up again and again. And usually it's the mediocre player who is the most critical. There's no reason to tolerate rudeness of this kind; just finish the rubber and then get up, and no matter how much you upset the whole party say: "I'm terribly sorry, but I don't want to go on."

A reminiscer is always a bore even when the subject is some former good time, but when it's an old quarrel there's no excuse at all for it.

NEVER harp back to anything even if it only happened the night before, and use discretion about the offenses it's wiser to overlook. "You said you were going to 'phone me yesterday at 5 o'clock. Why didn't you call? I waited in all afternoon," and similar upbraidings only show an interest that a clever woman has the sense to conceal. Even if you sat by the telephone for twelve hours, don't give yourself away. You'll make a beau feel much more guilty if you never give him a chance to bring forth all the excuses with which he has persuaded himself that he's in the right. Don't refer to the matter and, if it's brought up, a vague look and the appearance of having forgotten all about it will be very disconcerting, for he'll begin to wonder what you were doing when you should have been waiting for his call with a palpitating heart.

Nothing upsets a man like seeming indifference. If you never ask him what he was doing last night, where he went for the week-end or why he's late, he'll probably tell you. It's always easy enough to find out anything you want to know by more indirect methods than direct questioning.

ANOTHER great mistake is to try to get even with anyone for some real or imagined grievance. The business of refusing to go dancing on Tuesday because Charlie wouldn't take you to a night club on Saturday is a complete waste of time. You'll only start a quarrel, because the bewildered Charlie really won't know what it's all about and with masculine logic will prove to you that the situation is in no way the same. As long as you intend to forgive a wrong anyway, it's better to forgive it quickly and forget it immediately.

An aggressive, opinionated woman is admittedly the one with the least charm. No matter how you feel on any subject, try to keep out of violent arguments and don't be one of those enraging people who counters every statement with a flat denial, for, from that moment on, the conversation ceases to be a discussion and becomes a quarrel.

Be amiable, if only on the premise that a frown and an intense look are never becoming.

"But nowadays the male seems to have grown hard-hearted, and tears only enrage him to the point where he becomes completely unmanageable."

Poet's License

IT is all very illuminating. Out of the bagfuls of mail inundating Highlights since its call for a Poet Laureate for New York City, most of the letters germinate and emanate from amateurs who have composed odes, paeons, oratorios and spirituals to the Big Burg, on the spot, to order for this "contest."

The early speculation as to which of the myriad kaleidoscopic phases of this dizzy and dazzling metropolis shall be the burden of the bard has not daunted the humbler poets whose songs gush from their hearts. They just barge into ALL of them.

I had no idea we plain folks were so poetical, and that there were so many of us.

The good Mayor O'Brien has been biting his nails for something tangible to tax. Well, we done good with them new beer licenses. But they would be lost in microscopic insignificance if we ever issued poets' licenses. At $2 per head per annum the revenue would be collossal... Write in now for a low number.

"No, this is not a gangster, it's a poet," Wrote Henry Harrison, Recognized Writer of Better Verse, Inscribing Above Photo to "Highlights."

For drivers' licenses, a test is required. For poets' licenses I think that the rule had better be waived. And I recommend for Permit No. 1 the lady who sent in the following, which I publish verbatim et literatim:

NEW YORK CITY

You may travel from coast to coast
Many beautiful cities you will see
But I none can compare with New York you will agree.
It's wonderful buildings, some so tall and high.
It really seems that they touch the sky.
Take a sight seeing bus, many wonders you will see,
Then there are lots of amusements that are free.
A trip to China town or Little Italy to.
Or a wonderful sail up the hudson for a beautiful view.
Here many classes of people you will find.
The rich, the poor, the deaf and the blind.
Everybody seems to be in a hurry they have some place to go.
Take a walk in the Jewish section
See the push carts in a row.
You can buy any thing from a shoe string to a fur coat on the street
Then you will hear the hokey pokey man if you want a good treat.
Dear Old Trinity Church with its tombstones so old they cannot be read.
Here are New Yorks first settlers sleeping among the dead.
When they entered all was quiet around.
Now the elevators pass day and night in the back ground.
A trip to B'dway or Fifth Ave. is worth while.
Here one can see all the great style.
Many ways to travel at your convenience here.
Trolley, elevator, bus, ferry and underground near.
A trip to the acquarium at the battery to see.
Make it your trip admission is free.
There's music, noise, gladness and sorrow here.
In New York trip all of the year.

Good Boys

A notable Broadway manisfestation is the passing of the gang element from its social life. This is not due precisely to the declension of these purely native characters through the collapse of prohibition enforcement with its general loosening of the racketeer's principal function, but results from a series of incidents.

The two by far most ubiquitous of the underworld mixers on Broadway have gone to their last rewards—Arnold Rothstein and Larry Fay, both shot down by slugs from the hardware of their own kind.

"Waxey" Gordon is in retirement, fearful of his life, and "Dutch" Schultz, his deadly enemy, is, at this reporting, a fugitive from the Internal Revenue (income tax) pursuers, if not from the avenging typewriters of Gordon's mob, of whom many hearsefuls have been mowed down by the Schultzies. "Owney" Madden, freshly re-paroled from the Big House, is minimizing his public appearances—for the sake of public appearances.

Broadway, I am constrained to say, misses the absent ones. They were free-handed spenders and never talked shop. "Legs" Diamond, who likewise got around considerably in his lifetime, was one of the few of the craft I have ever seen in a place of general patronage who misbehaved, and he was goaded to it in a nightclub by a mouthy rich rounder who dared him to show that he was tough; so, when the talky sucker woke up in a hospital with his skull bashed in by a champagne bottle, he sent word to "Legs" that it was okay—he was tough enough.

I have seen Fay almost break a leg to get out of Tex Guinan's when a general set-to started; I have witnessed murderers being insulted by soft chumps on the make for trouble, and let them get away with it; I have seen many a pugnacious tipsy stranger walk out with a smirk of triumph, who didn't know and will never know that he was picking on killers with records.

Now You Tell One

Roger Wolfe Kahn, son of Otto, is a game chap, but very short and frailly built. His ex-frau, Hannah, of the Williams Sisters, as you know, is now married to Jack Dempsey. A bit of contrast.

Young Kahn adored the Williams cutie in a way that intrigued all of the Hardened Artery. The chasm between them was so wide that he turned vaudeville and nightclub jazz band leader to be "one of us." He built a showplace cabaret around Hannah that washed out several hundred thousand dollars ("Capital loss," I think it would be called in the sweet language of income-tax investigations) and after more than three years of devoted wooing (during which she married a Chicago orchestra-leader hastily and as hastily annulled him) he made her Mrs. Kahn and took her to the ancestral mansion.

It was an open secret among the insiders that Hannah wasn't in love with Roger; she liked him lots and all that—admired him and appreciated all he had done. But Broadway wasn't so surprised when she jumped the reservation.

And it wasn't that "show business" lured and called her. Hannah wasn't stagestruck. I knew her and her little sister when they were kids in the dollar-a-dinner roof shows, attended by their ma...They were poor and they worked like true troupers, but they never did evince much fever about Broadway except as a place to make a living.

If I dared write a play or a picture about Hannah, they'd put me in Bellevue...

Daughter of a coal-miner comes to New York, does a simple little sister-act, wide-eyed (and often sleepy-eyed) and goes home every night (or morning, as the job permitted) with mother ...All sorts of men see her and desire her—gangsters, bankers, stars, college boys—and she wonders what it's all about.

The son of an international multi-millionaire money-monarch goes mad over her...She doesn't know exactly what "love" is, but this isn't it... Meets a young musician, he rushes her into marriage, she wakes up bewildered ...No, this can't be it...So she quietly calls that off...The gifted, generous scion forgives her and adores her more than ever. He stars her in a hand-made night club, the smartest rendezvous in Manhattan...That bores her. But he is a fine chap, a daring flier, a swell pal...All he wants is to make the kid a Kahn! His father subsidizes grand opera and finances nations—his son wants to make this kid one of that family.

CAROLE LOMBARD
The Pretty Screenette, Who Isn't Clicking It Off So Harmoniously with Her Hubby, Handsome William Powell, Screener, They Do Be Saying...Ain't She Grand?

She gets a chance in a revue. Overnight she is a star...She is imitated on a thousand stages...She needs nobody now for a living, a handsome living...Nobody has made that possible but herself...So now she marries Kahn. She is a Kahn. She lives in the home of the Kahns...She doesn't miss the night clubs, doesn't miss the stage, doesn't miss Broadway...But, somehow, she can't make herself a Kahn...So, one day, with no plans and a handful of chicken-feed in her purse, she slips away.

She gets a quiet divorce...She doesn't ask alimony! ...Nor does she go back to the stage!...She is afraid they may say she's exploiting the name she walked out on ...She accepts one night club job—but she doesn't go through with it—it irks her.

She has met the most glamorous of all he-men, past champion heavyweight of the world, past husband of one of movieland's most ravishing beauties...THAT'S IT!

And the kid is twenty-four now!

AFRICAN BIG GAME HUNTING

Just Slaughter--- Not Sport

"You hear the bleat of the victim as it scents the killer. . . . Then comes the moment for your own heroism—at the end of a transfixing shaft of light, and equipped with a rifle capable of drilling rhinoceros hide!"

Simple animal murder from an easy chair, says this American adventurer who holds the white man's methods in contempt but admires the natives' bravery

By Morris Gilbert

PARIS

IF you're a real sportsman, stay away from Africa. The hunting there will make you sick—it's so easy and so unsportsmanlike.

But if you want a comfortable open-air holiday amid hospitable, friendly natives and in less danger than you would undergo in a New York traffic jam—by all means go there.

Such is the advice of the American, P. George Ducarpe de Lisle, born of French ancestry in New Orleans and long a resident of Paris, on his return after a four-months' expedition into the heart of the—so-called—Dark Continent.

Ducarpe de Lisle, a veteran of the World War from start to finish, journeyed in an American motor car straight south across the Sahara and then plunged into the big game country along the Niger River. For protection he carried—a flash lamp.

It was a big one, to be sure, capable of sending a powerful beam several hundred feet. It was his trustiest guard, says Ducarpe de Lisle. No carnivorous creature, lurking in the night, would rush it. It was like the "straight left" of a brilliant boxer—it kept every onslaught away.

Something in Ducarpe de Lisle's nature revolted at the idea of the new-fangled ways of killing big game.

"If I can debunk this business of modern lion killing," he says, "I'll be satisfied and happy."

IN America they call it "jacking." It is a method of paralyzing wild creatures with a sudden beam of light so as to get a good shot at them. In the case of deer, at home, it's against the law. It's too easy, too inhumane.

The beast, transfixed by the unexpected glare, halts stock-still and turns head-on to the searchlight.

In Africa, if the beast is a lion or panther, wham! goes the double-barreled express rifle. It has an impact of five tons at a distance of 30 feet. The soft-nosed bullet enters one side of the lion, making a half-inch hole. Where it comes out, at the other side, it leaves a cavity as big as a man's hat. The bullet has "mushroomed."

And the "sportsman" has another skin—badly ripped at one point, to be sure—to hang up in his trophy room, safe at home.

And that's the kind of big game hunting that appalls Ducarpe de Lisle.

"Not for me!" he says. "It's too revolting. The advantages the hunter has over his victims are too great. They merely disgust one."

Actually, the Ducarpe de Lisle expedition did comparatively little killing. No elephants at all, for instance, though they were in elephant country on the edge of Dahomey a long time, and frequently crossed the trails of huge herds.

Neither he nor his companion—a French gentleman living in Casablanca, Morocco—could bear to kill an elephant.

"THEY are beautiful creatures, says Ducarpe de Lisle. "Why destroy them?"

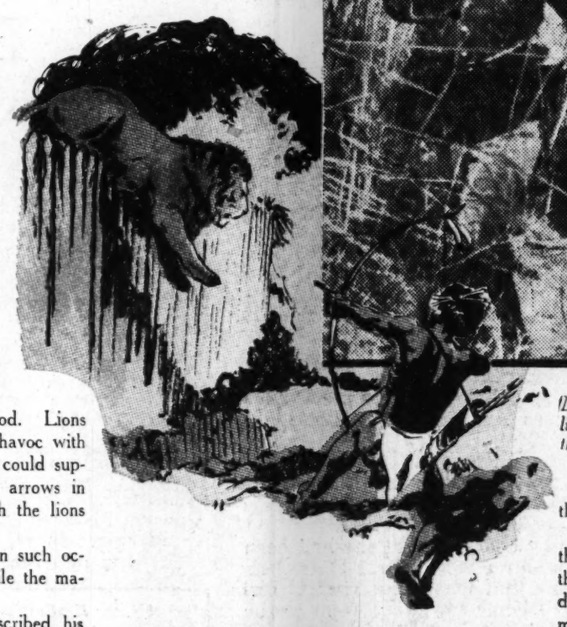

Antelope they killed only for food. Lions only when the beasts were playing havoc with native villages, and the white party could supplement the black men's bows and arrows in protecting lives and the cattle which the lions came after.

It was Ducarpe de Lisle's job on such occasions—to hold the searchlight while the marauding lions were slain.

"Really," he said, when he described his experiences to friends in Paris, "it was a little dull. I felt no more exposed to danger than if I were home. At my shoulder I had my friend, both barrels of his express rifle ready to be discharged. Beside him stood his native loader with an extra gun. That meant four tremendously powerful mushroom bullets ready for their billets.

"But I had the surest protection of all in my searchlight which no animal can charge, not even a maddened rhino! Even if my friend missed and the loader fled in panic, I could still protect myself and steer myself back to camp.

"No," said Ducarpe de Lisle, shaking his head, "the genuine hazards have gone out of big game hunting in Africa. Another fond delusion of heroic youth is shattered.

One by one the native huntsman picked them off—with bow and arrows at a range of only 10 yards!

"ALL that's left is to think of Africa as a wonderful place for a visit, a place where man's ingenuity and instinct for self-preservation are still in demand. But don't think of it as shockingly dangerous.

"Above all things, don't look at modern big game hunters with awe and admiration because of their courage. They may have courage all right—but they don't need it in their business as much as an American bank clerk.

"The gangster enemies of a bank clerk are more ferocious and better armed. They have more than an even break. And that's more than you can say for most of the wild creatures that inhabit the African bush these days!"

Ducarpe de Lisle's party starting out after lions in Africa. . . . A view of the bush through which big-game hunters must travel.

It was Ducarpe de Lisle's experience that the closer he was to civilization in Africa, the more in danger he was. The first few days of their trip across the Sahara were the most hazardous. That was because their route—direct south and almost along the meridian of Greenwich—was still within reach of marauding Arab tribesmen of the Atlas Mountains. For that distance the two motor cars were guarded by a French patrol.

The Sahara sands began at Colomb-Bechar. They stretched, without end, a thousand miles to Gao—a huge metropolis of between 30 and 40 white men! Just east of Timbuctoo.

The caravan was out in the open desert six days, traveling mostly by night. The motor searchlights picked out faintly the only trail—half-submerged wheel ruts in the sand.

At Gao vegetation began. At Tillabery, down the Niger, they entered the big game country. Some distance then, they traveled by native canoe or pirogue.

THESE primitive craft were boats roughhewn out of the trunks of great trees literally sewn together.

At Say they left the Niger and struck into the bush.

"The natives were wonderful people," says Ducarpe de Lisle. "Friendly and hospitable. Wherever we camped, they would gather round, endlessly curious, and bring us eggs and milk, wood and water.

"At pow-wows round the camp fire we would learn if they were troubled by roving lions. One place, lions had discovered they could jump the corral where the attle were kept at night. It was a family of four lions—father, mother, and two young ones. But that affair had just been settled by a native hunter equipped with bow and arrows!"

Ducarpe de Lisle's eyes gleamed with satisfaction when he described the heroism required of that hunter—in contrast to the protection which modern invention gives the white "sportsman."

THE native dug a shallow trench a few yards from the place where the lions were in the habit of leaping the barricade. He lay in it and watched them approach and jump over. The shriek of a slaughtered heifer told the tale of another night's killing. And presently, one by one, the lions, gorged with their gluttony, leaped out again.

One by one the native huntsman picked them off—with bow and arrows at a range of only 10 yards!

"I saw the carcasses," said Ducarpe de Lisle. "Every one had been pierced by an arrow just behind the shoulder. A marvelous piece of target work. And what nerve!"

Contempt for the whole rigmarole of lion hunting by white men is dominant when Ducarpe de Lisle tells how it is done nowadays.

"You choose a place, along about four or five in the afternoon, where you will have good visibility at night," he explains. "You barricade yourself in a ring of thorny branches and wait for complete darkness.

"Up on the ridge you tether a goat—unwilling sacrifice to the evening's 'sport.'

"You hear the bleat of the victim as it scents the killer drawing near. Then comes the moment for your own heroism—at the end of a transfixing shaft of light, and equipped with a rifle capable of drilling rhinoceros hide!"

The light, a fatal fingerprint toward death, blazes. The prowling beast goes rigid. There are sufficient lengthy seconds in which to aim and fire the deadly gun.

It sends its lead crashing into the paralyzed wild thing—

And the evening's "sport" is over.

TROUBLE IN PARADISE
(Drawing by Everett Shinn)
Many a Young Girl Tears Up Her Past, Turns Her Back Upon Youthful Romance and Seeks to "settle down" by Marrying a Rich Old Man. BUT Says the Author of the Accompanying Article, the Rich Old Man Has Only Himself to Blame If Later He Finds Himself Frustrated and Unhappy, While His Pretty Wife Returns to Young Love.

LOVE'S PRICE
The Spotlight of Public Attention Was Focused on Beautiful Flo Leeds a Few Years Ago When It Was Testified in Court That Wealthy James A. Stillman Was the Father of Her Child. In Retaliation, Stillman Spent a Fortune and Sacrificed a Career in a Bitter Attempt to Divorce His Wife, Anne Potter Stillman. After Their Court Battles, They Were Reunited, But Separated Again.

THIS is the first of a series on "What Is The Matter With American Marriages?" The several phases will be analyzed, written and discussed by famous American writers. Miss Thyra Samter Winslow (at left, preparing this article) today takes up the class of marriage melodramas as typified most recently by the Jelke fiasco in Newport, R. I. It is the latest of the group which has gone into American newspaper history, wherein rich men, past their youth, betrayed, or imagining they have been betrayed, by their young wives, have gone to extremes in a passion for revenge, apparently eager that the entire world share the details of their matrimonial frustrations.

MAY AND DECEMBER
Typical of the Cases Cited by Mrs. Winslow in Her Study of Divorce Is the Famous Legal Battle Between Mr. and Mrs. W. E. D. Stokes. He Was 58, She Only 22, When They Were Married. He Spent Over a Million Dollars in Fruitless Efforts to Divorce Her.

ONCE more these curious laws of ours have allowed a man to spend a fortune in order to debase the woman he once loved—loved enough to marry.

Once more, in spite of thousands of dollars wasted and reputations gone, the divorce—the reason for all of the defiling—was not granted. Two people, once bound together by love, are still legally bound by hate.

It would seem we had reached a high enough state of civilization so that if two persons want a divorce they could get it quietly and with dignity. Only in a few States is this possible. In most States lying and collusion, fraud and deceit must necessarily go hand in hand with divorce. Undoubtedly eighty per cent of our divorces are granted with these pretty accompaniments. And if BOTH parties want a divorce and prove they should have it—they find themselves bound as closely as before.

BECAUSE of these laws, there are curiously twisted minds; old men mostly, wasted with money and with passion and with disappointment, who take a terrible delight in tarnishing the women they married. They are unhappy. Their wives have hurt them, especially their pride. They "get even" the way a badly trained small boy would get even, choosing a method that boomerangs to hurt them most of all. They bring witnesses, usually paid and often false, to prove that they have been deceived.

Thousands—millions, even—roll out for evidence, for lawyers, for court expenses. The wife is subjected to every public degradation that the mind can conceive. And in the end, for it is hard for a man to get a divorce no matter how good is his evidence, the divorce is frequently refused, to be granted, a little more decently later on, to the woman.

Stokes . . . Stillman . . . And now Jelke has been added to the roster of men who tell in public. It is not a pleasant list. The stories are curiously alike and all are horrible. And yet they will go on as long as our laws allow them to go on and do not make divorce as dignified as marriage.

Most folks get married honestly believing that they love each other and want to live together and love each other always. If time and change show them that this partnership is impossible it should be dissolved easily and with dignity. There ought to be a law, I believe, to get the slime of the present divorce courts away from marriage. The present divorce laws injure marriage as an institution.

The Jelkes probably wanted to make a go of it when they first married. That wasn't very long ago. F. Frazier Jelke, Chicago oleomargerine millionaire, was nearly fifty in 1930, when he married Eugenia Woodward of Birmingham, Alabama. Eugenia was pretty and twenty-five.

He should have known better. That seems obvious enough now. He didn't. That's obvious, too. He was fifty—and wanted youth and life. He didn't know that they were two things that even oleomargerine millions couldn't buy.

According to Jelke's story, his awakening came rather more quickly than usual. The morning after the wedding his wife told him about the bills she owed and the clothes she wanted. Well, girls of twenty-five usually marry millionaires of fifty for something more than love.

Jelke didn't get much out of the remainder of his married life. What really did happen probably no one will ever know. If he expected a pleasant, happy home life—little enough to want from marriage—he was quickly disillusioned. He gathered evidence—or evidence was made for him—and sued for a divorce.

Neenie found that being married to a millionaire wasn't all she had hoped it would be. And she gathered her evidence and sued, too. So recently, in Newport, Rhode Island, to the delight of the Newport folk on holiday, we had another lovely spectacle of the divorce courts, with F. Frazier Jelke and Eugenie Woodward Jelke, assisted by lawyers and witnesses, in as pretty a bit of mud-throwing as America has witnessed in some time.

JELKE made many charges against Neenie, the pretty girl he had wanted so ardently to marry only a few years before.

He started in by charging that she had been unfaithful to him only a few months after their marriage. He told that when they visited Birmingham, Neenie's home town, she went to the unsavory apartment of a Mrs. Ethel Hartman, a woman who did a bit of drug trafficking and white slavery in her spare time, on fourteen different occasions.

She went with a certain "Major," according to the charges. And the Major was well known at Mrs. Hartman's establishment because, not satisfied with Neenie's company, he was seen there frequently with other women.

Jelke brought two witnesses to tell about the escapades of Neenie and the Major, a Mrs. Effie Wagner Bailey, a real estate operator, who was around there getting evidence on her own husband and didn't happen in just for spying purposes, and Mrs. Hartman's colored maid, Havannah Bolden, who was able to testify to such pleasant details as the condition of the bedroom before and after the visits of Neenie and the Major.

Jelke's testimony didn't end there. He had many more stories. He charged she spent an afternoon and evening with a young New Yorker, a certain Robert E. White, a stock broker, and then went on to spend the night in his apartment. Jelke brought a detective and a taxicab driver as witnesses that Neenie emerged the next morning from White's apartment at half-past eight.

And in Paris, Jelke went on to tell, Neenie went to the Beaux Arts Ball with young Murray and Bertie Hoffman, though the Hoffmans didn't think the affair respectable enough to take their own wives. Neenie tore off the skirt of a white satin gown in order to make a spectacular costume. It was a new gown, too, one that a Paris couturier had just delivered.

Neenie wouldn't have a child, Jelke said, though he wanted children. And because of her great fear of motherhood, she imposed certain restrictions and obligations on him in their life.

Jelke also charged that Neenie's language was foul, that she had the delightful habit of biting him on occasions and that she was recklessly extravagant. Neenie's own testimony was not without point, though, as you'd expect, it didn't exactly agree with her husband's.

Mrs. Ethel Hartman, of Birmingham, herself, testified for Neenie. And she told that she had been paid $5,000 by Jelke to frame his wife. She further testified that Neenie had never been in her house at all! She claimed that Mrs. Bailey, Jelke's star witness, hadn't been merely a casual observer while out after her own divorce evidence, but had been paid $10,000 by Jelke to testify for him.

MR. WHITE came forth like a real gentleman to Neenie's defense and testified that she was a charming woman and a good friend and that she had just happened to drop in to breakfast the morning after they had spent an innocent day and evening together and by some curious coincidence a detective and a taxicab driver just happened to be passing when Neenie was leaving his apartment after their casual breakfast.

IN this, the final article in the series on the habits and hobbies of J. Pierpont Morgan, is given a picture of the human side of his business life behind the great doors of No. 23 Wall Street.

A DAY in the business life of J. Pierpont Morgan:

He rises not later than 7 o'clock, earlier if he is summering on his estate at Glen Cove, Long Island. In that case he sometimes takes a motor launch down the Sound, through Hell Gate and into the East River to Wall Street.

Usually, however, he rides in one of his five cars. There are some interesting statistics about his automobiles. Morgan has not had a new one since 1931 and the oldest is a 1926 model. Although America's No. 1 financier, there is nothing of a distinguishing nature about the license numbers. Here are the types, license numbers and models of the five cars:

1R6115, Packard limousine, 1930 model; 1R6117, Buick sedan, 1927 model; 1R6116, Buick touring, 1931 model; 1R6114, Rolls Royce touring, 1930 model; 1R6113, Rolls Royce, 1926 model.

Aside from two Rolls Royces—and all millionaires seem to have at least one of them—Morgan appears to have a preference for General Motors products. But his sister Anne, on the other hand, rides about town in her one and only car—a Chrysler sedan! Morgan's son, Junius Spencer,, also patronizes General Motors. He has a Cadillac sedan, 1929 model, a Cadillac phaeton, 1930 model, a Buick limousine, 1933 model and a LaSalle coupe, 1929 model.

When Morgan enters No. 23 Wall Street, he passes through a corridor, flanked by desks, on Neenie testified that Jelke was the one who ed the bad language and that he was cruel to r in the bargain. And as for children—Neenie as the one who wanted a baby! She longed for ildren but instead of the child she hoped for, e had to spend three months in a sanitarium.

As for HER extravagances—she had spent money a bit recklessly in an effort to get Jelke back to her but Jelke was actually stingy with her, though he bought clothes for the Countess Drogheda in London.

Neenie said that Jelke kicked her out of the house in Chicago and told her to go to Reno and get a divorce. Under the circumstances, this does seem to me the best advice he gave her through their whole married life and she might have saved a lot of trouble and publicity for herself—though she would have robbed Newport of a good time—if she had taken his advice when he gave it.

Judge Charles A. Walsh, of Newport, ruled both Jelke and Neenie guilty of "extreme cruelty" and denied both petitions for divorce.

So there you are. Another small fortune spent. And the reason for the wasted thousands—the divorce—not even granted.

If divorce was the only reason! I doubt it. It was deeper than that, though our divorce laws made the whole thing possible. Didn't Jelke, frustrated, unhappy, bring about this divorce, instead of a dignified, quiet one, because he actually wanted the public degradation of his wife? I think he did.

He's over fifty, you know. He has lived a hard life. Perhaps he isn't quite "as sure of himself" as he was when he was younger. He knows that. And he knows Neenie knows it, too. And he hates her because of this knowledge which she must have of him. She was cruel, undoubtedly. Her temper doesn't seem to be the sort that would make her a candidate for the next America's Sweetheart. But Jelke's cruelty went much deeper. He was willing to destroy completely the woman he once loved and who once, he must have believed, loved him.

JELKE even brought evidence to prove that Neenie had slighted his socially prominent friends. She wouldn't go to see them because they bored her or because she'd have to walk a few steps in the rain on a muddy path. People who were prominent in society were important to a man who had made money in oleomargerine. He'd bring the divorce publicly in Newport instead of quietly some place else. He'd bring shame to Neenie before the people she had disdained.

Neenie doesn't seem like the ideal girl bride. Undoubtedly at times she did get out of hand. Even so, I don't believe she deserved quite the things Jelke tried to do to her. A man a trifle more neurotic than Jelke might have murdered her in a fit of rage instead of trying to punish her publicly and exhibit, in doing so, his own wounds. After all, what did Jelke try to prove? That Neenie had been unfaithful. That is the gist of it. And wasn't Neenie unfaithful because Jelke failed, as a husband, to satisfy? Didn't he spend a fortune proving his own shortcomings?

Jelke and his frustrations and bitterness, his eagerness to spend thousands to defile the woman whom he had loved enough to marry, do not stand alone. He is not a rare phenomenon of our civilization.

There was James A. Stillman, former President of the National City Bank, who, in spite of the fact that it was proved in court that he was the father of Flo Leeds' child and had had other affairs far less respectable, spent a fortune and sacrificed his own position and reputation in order to try to prove that his wife, Anne Potter Stillman, had had an illicit affair with an Indian and that her youngest child, Guy, was illegitimate.

The Stillman affair became slightly ridiculous because the Stillmans came together again, Stillman recognized the legitimacy of Guy—and then Mrs. Stillman got a divorce and married a younger man!

Stillman and his wife were nearly of an age when they married but it was not until he was well along in life that he took exception to Fred Beauvais, the handsome Indian guide, and then spent a fortune and a reputation in order to blacken his wife and incidentally an innocent child. Because of the notoriety, Stillman resigned from his position and lost his social standing as well.

THE divorce trials of W. E. D. Stokes raged in the courts for five years and Stokes' attacks were so bitter and so full of hate that he was tried on charges of conspiracy to defame his wife's character. Stokes was a member of an old New York family and married Helen Elwood, a Denver girl, in 1911, when he was fifty-eight years old and his bride was twenty-two.

In 1919 he brought his first suit for divorce and was beaten. He tried again and again. Then Mrs. Stokes sued for legal separation and obtained it.

Stokes spent over a million dollars. He employed a small army of sleuths to get evidence and to track down witnesses. He accused his wife of being an inmate of the malodorous Everleigh Club in Chicago, and that she had been too friendly with negroes. His unjust accusations and his methods of securing his evidence could only have been conceived by an insane mind, a mind turned in upon itself because of hate and frustration.

FORTUNES spent. Reputations ruined. For divorce? Because two persons find they are bound together and want freedom? The desire for freedom is only a part of it. The Jelkes, the Stillmans, the Stokeses—all are more than just men who want freedom from women they no longer love. They are disappointed, lonely old men, frustrated and unhappy, who feel through a sort of mental twist, the necessity of punishing the women to whom they once looked for happiness and who undoubtedly brought them, instead, domestic and intimate humiliation.

They gave fortunes and they gave their reputations. They lost money and position and power. They had already lost youth and love. And in the end they gained nothing at all.

Once in the office, Morgan takes om a coat pocket a meerschaum pe. A heavy smoker, he smokes a pe only in the privacy of his office or his ome. In public, or in the presence of those ho are not intimate friends or relatives, he nfines himself to long, black cigars.

He rarely lunches outside of the building. here are a couple of restaurants within "No 3 Wall Street." One is for employes, the other r the partners.

At about 3:30 every afternoon, Morgan ites his partners into his office and serves tea. tea connoisseur, he was the first American usinessman to introduce afternoon tea into business houses. Few have followed his example, owever.

There are nineteen Morgan partners. Their ames have been mentioned too frequently, in onnection with the Washington banking inquiry, o need repeating here. But Thomas W. Lamont tands next in importance, in many respects, to Morgan. He is the international diplomat of the firm. It is he who usually negotiates the big bond flotations.

Although a Morgan partnership entails tremendous prestige and influence, none of the members—not even "J. P." himself—has his name on a letterhead. They conduct their correspondence upon paper which bears in austere script only "23 Wall Street." There is no name of a firm, no "officers."

This simplicity marks the whole life of "The House of Morgan." There is an air of leisure about the place. There are no secretaries in evidence. When one is needed by Morgan or his partners, she is summoned from the general office on the second floor. There is no noise or bustle in any of the offices and they suggest the air of an old English commercial establishment.

In the quiet dignty and serenity of the place, there is nothing to suggest the immense power of Morgan; nothing to indicate that the House of Morgan stands in importance with the houses of Rothschilds in Europe, the Baring Brothers of London, the Lazards of Paris and the big private banking houses of Frankfort-on-Main, Germany.

Yet, in spite of the lack of that hustling business efficiency characteristic of American offices, it is the House of Morgan that has its hand in at least ninety of the nation's leading corporations and, through a "chain system," reaches out and touches the life of almost every American, no matter how indirectly. If you think of clothes, radio, pickles, bread—almost any commodity—it leads inevitably to the House of Morgan.

The realization of this vast power explains the constant presence within and without the building at No. 23 Wall Street of a large corps of private detectives, constantly on guard, day and night.

These same safeguards attend Morgan's movements. Wherever he goes at least two guards follow him. A guard even accompanies him to church on Sunday.

His life is insured for $2,750,000. Great as this figure is, he by no means leads the list of the nation's insured. Rodman Wanamaker's insurance is placed at $7,500,000; Jesse L. Lasky's at $5,000,000, Frank P. Book, Detroit hotel man, the same amount, and Pierre S. DuPont at $4,000,000. There are at least a dozen others whose lives are insured for more than $2,750,000.

But then, it is unlikely that they have the more comfortable insurance of a private army equal to that employed by Morgan. His friends say he is not afraid of death. He is simply cautious.

SECKATARY HAWKINS AND HIS FAIR and SQUARE CLUB

THE HIDING PLACE.

(Seck Hawkins and his Fair and Square Club camping on Seven Willows Island find the secret headquarters of Fong Shu, who has threatened Hawkins and Detective Jeckerson for sending four of his sons to prison. Fong Shu is trying to get possession of a red lacquer fan. When Jeckerson asks Mr. Jeems, the antique dealer, the price of the red lacquer fan, he learns that to buy the fan one must have the tripod of the ugly dog. When Hawkins and Jeckerson return to camp, they discover that Lew Hunter has found the tripod. Removing the sealed lid, they find it contains the largest diamond in the world. When they visit the spot where the tripod was unearthed, Stormie, Hawkins' Great Dane, begins to dig and turns up the Emperor's Sword, for which the Fong Shu is also searching.)

THERE was no sleep for us that night. Jeckerson insisted that I go to bed, for he could see that I was dead tired, but since he had said that it was up to me and my big dog, Stormie the Great Dane, to protect the Emperor's Sword and the largest diamond in the world, I had forgotten my weariness, and I could not have slept had I tried. Stormie, too, was up and around, excited and impatient, as though he knew that something had aroused me.

"I will protect these valuable things," I said to Jeckerson. "Will you take a trip with me in Shadow's motor boat? Doc Waters' automobile is up at Hobbs Ferry. We can cross the river there and go on up to Watertown."

"It's rather late," said Jeckerson, with a frown. "Where do you propose to take me?"

"To Su Chow Ming's place," I said, getting myself ready to go. "We can't keep these precious things here. It would make our camp unsafe. Sooner or later those cunning Chinamen in the Fong Shu gang would trace them. And only Su Chow knows how to hide them safely—"

"Remember, he was robbed of the Emperor's Sword once—" put in Jeckerson, with a smile.

"But you can't fool that old fellow twice in the same place." I said. "Su Chow is an old fox, and I've got a great faith in him, Jeckerson."

"Well, let's go—I think you're about right on the subject, son. Lead the way to the motor boat—"

"Be quiet!" I warned him. "We don't want to awaken any of the other boys."

* * * * *

There was a big moon that night that threw a silver ribbon upon the river, and our little motor boat purred along its silvery gleam until we reached the ferry. Lige Hobbs was asleep in the wharf house, and the ferry dark and silent. We roused him up, however, and though he grumbled a bit at first, he was glad to take us across when he found out who we were. Lige always liked me, and I liked Lige. He tried to ask us a lot of questions about what we were doing out so late and where we were going, but Jeckerson turned his questions aside by telling him we would let him in on our secret later, provided he would not tell anyone that we had crossed the river, and further, that he would await our return, to take us back, within a half hour.

My heart was in my mouth as we entered the dingy little street in Watertown, where Su Chow's secret headquarters were located. We pressed the button, and the doorbell sounded ten times as loud in that stillness of the night—so late, it was—and not a soul in sight—and the street lamps flickering amid a swarm of insects—

The door silently opened, and Ho Nan Sing, the six-foot servant of Su Chow, stood before us.

"Enter and welcome," he said, softly, "honorable Su Chow Ming expected you."

We were shown up the narrow, rickety stairs, and thence into the sumptuous quarters of the kindly old Chinaman, who sat smiling behind that great ebony desk of his just as we had seen him many times before.

"You expected us?" asked Jeckerson, softly.

"My sixth sense would not permit me to seek slumber despite weary day of toil," he returned, pressing his chubby fingers together, and smiling up at the detective. "Somehow, sixth sense rules other five. So I stay awake and tell Ho Nan Sing await bell ringing, we shall have visitors, whom I suspect will be our good friends, honorable Jeckerson and boy Hawkins by name. That is not mysterious, is it? Since I have no other friends who would call in urgent need at such an hour of night?"

"Well, don't depend upon that sixth sense after this," said Jeckerson, with a smile. "For there might be somebody else visiting you from now on. Look, see what we have brought you."

"Oh!" said Su Chow, rising suddenly from his chair and walking slowly toward Stormie. "A fine dog, a most magnificent animal—you have brought him to me?"

"Oh, no!" I exclaimed, suddenly, "Stormie only came along with us—you see, he goes everywhere I go—it's these two packages I have that we have brought to you, Su Chow."

And I laid upon the table the Emperor's Sword and the smaller package containing the tripod bowl in which was the largest diamond in the world. The two parcels were wrapped in newspaper. Su Chow opened the long package first, and I knew that he was aware of its contents, for the shape of the package told him it was the Emperor's Sword.

"My heart overflows with gratitude," he said, looking up at Jeckerson. "I knew it would come back to me through you, honorable Jeckerson."

"Not to me goes the credit," said Jeckerson, quickly. "To that boy and his big dog—"

And Jeckerson briefly explained to him how we had come upon the sword. And then Su Chow next opened the smaller package—

"The Tripod of the Ugly Dog!" he exclaimed. "Why, it's the only price we might pay for the lacquer fan—where did you find it?"

"Look here, Su Chow, do you know why the lacquer fan is so valuable? What mystery is connected with it that this great treasure of priceless value is asked in exchange for it?"

"Perhaps," said that fat old Chinaman, smiling blandly. "But the Tripod of the Ugly Dog is not of priceless value. It is of value only because it is the original model from which many tripod bowls of brass have been copied. A collector would be willing to exchange an antique fan for an authentic antique bowl of brass on three legs. Would you then suspect that there was a mystery connected with the lacquer fan or that it was valuable for some other reason—"

"No, not if that were all true, Su Chow," broke in Jeckerson. "But it so happens that Seck Hawkins and I know that this brass tripod bowl with the ugly dog on the lip contains greater value than your antique collector expects—"

"What does honorable Jeckerson refer to?"

"Turn it upside down, please, and you will see what I mean."

* * * * *

Su Chow slowly took hold of the ugly dog on top of the lid. A bit of newspaper had been tucked in the bowl to keep the large diamond within. He turned the brass bowl upside down and the great jewel tumbled softly upon his ebony desk—

"The Light of Hung Wu!" he exclaimed, and stared wonderstruck at the brilliant gem. "The Star of His Crown! Oh, may the spirit of my honorable grandfather hear my plenteous thanks for this day! Always have I heard it—but this is the first time I have seen it! It is! It is the Light of Hung Wu!"

And he leaned with both his pudgy hands upon the edge of the black-topped desk, and stared at the diamond that scintillated in the light from the lanterns overhead. Neither Jeckerson nor I seemed inclined to disturb him, and we silently watched him in his contemplation of the gem, while Stormie, rather bored with it all, grunted and curled himself up on the thick carpet.

"Come, Su Chow," said Jeckerson, softly. "We have but little time, and danger is on all sides—Hawkins wanted you to take charge of these things for safekeeping. Will you accept the job?"

"Yes and no!" said Su Chow, suddenly standing erect and clapping his hands. "Ho Nan Sing, please, send to me Wu Chan. If he be asleep, wake him up, the lazy fellow. No, no, honorable Jeckerson, this place of mine would not be safe for such a valuable as the Light of Hung Wu—"

"Just what is the Light of Hung Wu?" asked Jeckerson.

"The largest diamond that was ever known," answered Su Chow. "It was the stone he wore in his crude crown, many years ago. His soldiers called it the Star of His Crown. But the people called it the Light of Hung Wu, because it always led him into the dark wars and showed him the way to victory. And with the Emperor's Sword, which he wielded, the Light of Hung Wu has been for centuries in a shrine. But the Fong Shu society have a plan—they believe that with the Sword and the Light of Hung Wu, they can establish their leaders as the rulers of the world—now, do you see? It is for this purpose that I, Su Chow Ming, Conciliator for All China, have been delegated to stop this mad scheme. You and I know that for years they have had the Emperor's Sword, time and again, but—this is the first time they have ever had their dishonorable hands on the Light of Hung Wu—"

At this moment the further door opened and Ho Nan Sing ushered in Wu Chan, the nephew of Su Chow. The young Chinese was still rubbing his eyes from the sleep out of which the faithful Ho Nan Sing had roused him.

"Wu Chan!" cried old Su Chow," waddling over to him with the sword in one hand and the diamond in the other. "Look, see! Shiny glass stone! See, honorable nephew. Must make yourself ready to travel quick, go fast, in dark night to Sam Kwong's laundry shop—"

"Hey! You're not sending those things to a laundry shop!" cried Jeckerson, roughly.

"Indeed, so!" replied Su Chow Ming, turning to Jeckerson. "Such is the case, honorable Jeckerson. Old Su Chow is sly fox, none more so in all China. Fong Shu is also sly fox. He have spies on trail constantly. You do not escape him. He soon find out how matters stand. Someone has betrayed him, unfaithful one has bungled again and so sword and jewel fall into hands of enemies of Fong Shu. He suspect at once. Probably have you followed every hour of day and night. He know you come here. Why should I—oh, go quickly, Wu Chan. So! Hide long sword under shirt and keep jewel in left hand tucked in bosom and leave by secret tunnel door, and so by waterfront to Sam Kwong's back door in alley—I shall telephone him you come quickly—he will have door open for your entrance—go quickly!"

And we watched the nimble Wu Chan, now thoroughly aroused from his sleepiness and aware of the importance of his mission, glide swiftly through a panel that Ho Nan Sing had opened in the wall. The panel slowly slid shut behind him.

"The humble laundry shop of Sam Kwong," said Su Chow, in his oiliest tones, "would never be suspected of housing those great and valuable heirlooms. Our secret is safe. Go and may peace attend you. I must telephone quickly to Sam Kwong that Wu Chan comes—"

* * * * *

We slipped out the little door into the dingy street, and Ho Nan

"It's coming back," I said, "see it, it's moving now—"

Sing whispered good-bye. We hurried to our waiting car and motored to Hobbs Ferry, without a word passing between Jeckerson and me, although I did have to say a few words to Stormie—the big dog insisted on sitting up and looking out the windshield as we rode along, and it was crowded enough in Doc Waters' little coupe even when he curled on the floor. But Stormie seemed to sense a danger—his ears were pricked up and his jaws were quivering—I could see him every time we passed a street lamp—

"Hello! Look, Hawkins!" said Jeckerson, as we pulled up at the ferry. "The boat's across the river—"

"It's coming back," I said, "see, it's moving, now—"

"Yes, but Lige said he would wait for us on this side until we came back—"

We said no more, and the ferry boat slowly came across and we got on.

"Thought you were going to wait for us, Lige," said Jeckerson, pleasantly.

"Well, I aimed to do so," said Lige, with a grin, "but just after you left the ferry boat, I got a signal to come back over and I went."

"Who signalled you?"

"Well, I found 'em to be three Chinese fellas," said Lige. "Oh, boy, they give me the creeps, when I see 'em this time o' night and my eyes half shut for sleep. But I got 'em across—they had a little automobile up there on the highway—look, you can see it from here—"

"What, you mean they came back before we did?"

"Yes, I just took 'em across again. They must a'went up to town for a bite to eat, may be—then they come back and I ferried 'em over just now—paid me double, each one—they did! Maybe those Chinese fellas ain't so bad, anyhow. Come on, hop aboard, I gotta get this old tub moored over yonder and snatch me some more sleep before daylight—"

"We'll pay you double, too, Lige," said Jeckerson.

And when we were on our way to the camp on the island in our little motor boat, Jeckerson said to me:

"Those Chinamen followed us, Hawkins."

"I know, Jeckerson," I said.

"They knew we had the sword and the diamond," said Jeckerson.

"Maybe so," I said. "But they don't know who's got 'em now."

"I wouldn't be so sure," said Jeckerson. "You heard old Su Chow Ming speak of a sixth sense, Hawkins. Well, the old Fong Shu might have a seventh sense. At least, I'm afraid of him. He is a queer old Oriental, Hawkins—one who seems to have retained all of the magic of his ancient ancestors."

"Well, Jeckerson," I said, as I took hold of Stormie's neck and felt safe in the companionship of the great dog. "Let's wait and see. Stormie and I promised to protect the Emperor's Sword and the Light of Hung Wu. I believe we have done that, Jeckerson, so let's wait and see if we are right. And the next thing Stormie and I are going to do is to find a nice soft spot and sleep and sleep—and—sleep!"

Which we did.

Dear Pen Pals:

Labor Day will soon be here, and our next letter-writing contest will be about this holiday. Of course, there is the parade that is held in most cities, and I know most of our members will write about that, and the various ways in which this holiday usually is celebrated by the American people.

* * * *

However, there is a great deal more to write about on this subject. It is a day set aside to honor the work of men. Nothing is ever accomplished without hard work. Think of all the mighty skyscrapers in our great cities—all the great bridges, railroads, and, in fact, everything that we have today—and then consider the labor of men, and you will have a better idea of the importance of setting aside a day to honor it.

* * * *

So get busy at once, and send in your contribution for the next contest, the title of which must contain the words "Labor Day." Don't get discouraged if you have tried before and failed to win a prize. Try again, and keep everlastingly at it—that's the secret of success. Remember this—a quitter never wins and a winner never quits.

* * * *

We will now introduce some of our members, and be sure you watch this part of our page every week, because if your letter is printed with an introduction, you will win a book of our club's earlier adventures down on the river bank. The first winner today is a pen pal down in dear old Georgia, who comes with a very good poem about our club:

Dear Seck:

How are you getting along this hot weather on the river bank? I bet it is cooler there than it is here, though. I have made up a poem about you and your club. I hope it apears in the paper, so more boys and girls will join your club:

The Seckatary Hawkins Club is good.
Try this club; if I were you I would.
Write a letter and win a book—
It's lots more fun than a game of rook.
The club's motto is "Fair and Square."
If Seck is needed, he's always there.
So, boys and girls, join his club today,
And your club pin will be on its way.

Yours, fair and square,
BYRON MOORE,
Route 2, Greensboro, Ga.

* * * *

And now we will adjourn again till next week. If you have not yet sent in your membership blank, fill it out at once and send it in with your "Labor Day" letter, and you will receive a membership certificate and a club button, bearing our motto, "Fair and Square." You can't beat that for a motto, can you? Of course not.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

Hello, Seck:

Have you missed me very much, and have you thought that I had forsaken you? Well, it's not quite that bad, Seck, although I have not written in a very long time.

Tobacco time will soon be here in full swing. Talking about tobacco, Seck, makes me sneeze. Its acrid fumes would make you sneeze also, if you lived about three blocks from all the warehouses in town and about two from a tobacco redrying plant.

Seck, I remember last year when a large tobacco warehouse caught on fire. It was a dark night, but the flames made the sky glow just like a sunset, of course, not as large. The burning tobacco and a small number of cotton bales that had been stored in the warehouse were flying in small portions through the air like meteorites. People were in their yards stamping the particles out, and I have heard that some were even on the housetops extinguishing the remains there. It was a dangerous, but glorious, sight, Seck. You ought to have been here!

O, yes, Seck, the warehouse was said to have been set on fire by a "fire-bug." You know, that is a term given to anyone who knowingly sets a house on fire for evil purposes. I was present at a suspect's trial, and "believe it or not," Seck, I was sent there by the editor of our local newspaper to do a little reporting, since the original reporter was needed back at the office. I was rather thrilled, but frightened at the same time; still, I stuck with "true courage," that is, until I thought that I had written enough. The suspect was later acquitted for lack of evidence.

Always yours, fair and square,
RALPH E. MELTON, 17,
Box 425, Lumberton, N. C.

Dear Seck:

I belong to the Boy Scout troop in Covington, and am now a Star Scout, except for the time requirement, which is that a boy must be a first-class Scout three months before he can be a Star. My time will be out September 1.

I think that Boy Scouts of America is one of the finest boys' organizations in the world, but just the same, I like your "Fair and Square" Club. I read your page every Sunday, and find that you have adventures much like a troop of Scouts.

For a hobby, I collect stamps. I have about 3,500 different stamps. Please place my name in the pen pal list, as I would like to hear from any member of the club who has stamps to swap. I wrote President Roosevelt the other day, and he answered me, inclosing several nice stamps as a gift.

Yours, fair and square,
WEBB B. GARRISON, 14,
Covington, Ga.

Dear Seck:

It has been so long since I've written to the dear old page that I must let you hear from me again. I can think of nothing more thrilling than to receive a bunch of long letters from your club members.

How I will hate to see school start and have to end the glorious pastimes of summer! I will be thinking of your good books I enjoyed reading, and of the happy hours I spent practicing the piano.

One almost forgets the hot weather and hard times in such a beautiful world of music, art and literature.

I am always delighted to find new pen friends. I am 13, and my birthday is April 5, but I want all ages to write.

Yours, fair and square,
LORETA EVELYN GRAY,
R. F. D. 2, Conyers, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I feel it is my duty to tell you and my pals how proud I am of myself.

On Friday, April 14, 1933, I went to Harlem to represent Lincolnton High school in the declamation contest and what do you think? I brought back second place, and then on Wednesday of the next week the professor and principal averaged the marks of the highest ranking students for the last four years, and I had the highest average of them all, and was chosen the valedictorian of the senior class.

I am your pal,
J. R. CALVIN,
Lincolnton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Guess you think that I am not much of a member, but I just haven't had time to write.

We are figuring on going to Florida before school starts, to see my grandparents.

Gee, but I sure will be glad to see our school start. I will be in the 8th grade.

I have three brothers, who are members of your club.

I like your slogan and also the rules. I would like to have a lot of pen pals.

Yours, fair and square,
CORA ALSOBROOK, 12,
Route 3, Box 115, Tifton, Ga.

Today's Prize.

TRUE COURAGE.

True courage is the determination
To be loyal, bold and strong,
Even though we have to stand alone,
Against what we know is wrong.

True courage always helps us
Face the the heartaches and the snares,
And pulls us through to the brighter side
Of many a doubt and care.

It has helped the weary wanderer
Turn back, no more to roam,
And set his face to the upward trail,
And return to love and home.

Through courage many a struggle
On the battlefield of life
Has been won, when all seemed hopeless,
And faith was lost in the strife.

True courage urges us onward,
To be bold enough to dare
Reject the wrong, be brave and strong,
For that which is fair and square.

MADONNA LILIES -:- -:- -:- By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN

TOO much cannot be said in praise of various varieties of lilies that will bloom and do well here in Atlanta.

All over the world the fame of the lily has spread since pre-historic times. Nearly 2,000 years ago, the Prophet of Nazareth said:

"Consider the lilies, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you that Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these."

Even farther back than that we can find in the Old Testament allusions to the lily, such as "adorned with bracelets of lilies." So it is that for thousands of years people from all over the world have known and admired the lilies, have cultivated and enjoyed them in their homes.

Our own English language has a number of quotations that are constantly in use to portray and typify purity, graciousness, stateliness, and other fine attributes and qualities of the human mind. Two of the more common phrases quoted are: "fair as a lily" and "pure as a lily." These two expressions are used constantly by people of every class, showing that they have "considered the lilies" and have found them exceedingly fair.

Since the earliest Christian times, the lily has been used a great deal. This is particularly true of the Easter season. Members of the early church went about Rome with garlands of lilies around their necks, and even today, on Easter Sunday, you will find our churches filled with lilies. This use has become so common that one of our lilies, Lilium Harrisii, is seldom called anything other than "Easter lily."

Within the last few years, as interest in ornamental gardening has increased by leaps and bounds, the interest in lilies has grown as fast, if not faster than in general gardening. These lilies, that have been introduced to a great many people for the first time within the last few years, have been collected from all over the world. Numbers of them have been collected in our own country, while others have come from Europe, and several varieties from far-off Japan. These lilies are still being imported in great quantities, while some of them are being successfully produced in various sections of the United States.

LILIUM CANDIDUM.

The most popular of all the lilies grown is the Lilum Candidum, or as it is more commonly called "Madonna" lily. This most beautiful pure white lily is one of the very oldest varieties known, and may be seen in some of our oldest gardens. It has been known to thrive under most varying circumstances, in almost any kind of soil and with sunshine, varying from complete shade to full sun. Since it will grow so well under almost any circumstances, it seems useless to talk about how they should be planted, but for best results a few directions should be followed. The bulbs should be planted early in the fall in order that root growth and tufts could make their appearance before the hard winter sets in, yet it is not unusual to hear of bulbs that were planted in the late winter to grow and flower beautifully. If you haven't planted any this year, try a few late planted ones, as they will probably surprise you. Drainage is important. Place a double-hand of sand under each bulb and place the bulb itself on its side. This will insure the bulb against rotting in the ground. The top of the bulb should be covered with about two inches of soil, do not plant them deeply. Well-rotted stable manure or bone meal are best used for fertilizing this lily. The best bulbs are those grown in northern France and for best results insist upon bulbs from that section only.

The question most often asked about this lily is this: "Does it hurt the bulb to cut the blossoms?" The answer is no, provided you leave enough of the stem to aid in developing and ripening the daughter bulb. Of course, the best policy to pursue is to pinch the buds as they appear the first year, but that is asking almost too much of most gardeners.

DRAINAGE.

The most important single cultural direction in the case of lilies is drainage. The best method to pursue is to dig out the bed to a depth of three feet, place in the bottom of this hole at least six inches of stones and clinkers that are at least as large as your fist. On top of this drainage place the top soil that was taken from the hole and fill the hole back with good, rich garden soil. If you are lucky enough to have some stable manure that is at least three or better, four years old, incorporate that into the top soil that is being placed on top of the drainage. Be sure that the top soil used is not too heavy, but if it seems fairly heavy, add some sand. Lilies must have good drainage. This is most important.

PEONIES.

The peony is a favorite flower for several reasons, and one of the greatest of these is the fact that it can be remembered in almost every old garden that can be brought to mind.

We are about to get ourselves into considerable trouble, but here goes, and away they went. There is an old saying among a great many flower lovers that has been handed down through the ages that a great deal of experience through the past few years tends to show to be untrue. "Starve the peony"—we have heard that old saying a thousand times—we know that you have probably heard it a thousand times, whether or not you have followed its advice.

There is a good reason why this old saying has grown up. The reason for it happens to be one of the greatest recommendations for the peony, as a wonderful flower in every garden. It is very hardy and will last for years with very little or no attention. So for permanence in the garden, there is one beauty that may be depended upon to last through the years.

Peonies prefer a soil on the heavy side and yet at times they may be seen in almost sandy soils growing successfully. If it is possible to choose the soil for them, select a well-drained, sunny situation (about four to six hours of sun will be plenty) where the soil is rich and heavy. Good, black, loamy soil is fine. Our clay gives us a good basis to work with in preparing such a spot. The addition of well-rotted stable manure and bone meal will give the proper richness to the soil.

They are lovers of moisture but, as with a great many other plants loving moisture, they do not care to stand with their feet in the water. So, if the best place for them is not too well drained naturally, place some rocks and broken clay pots into the bottom of hole in which they are to be planted.

The peony bulb, or root, as they may more properly be called, are a little choosy about the way in which they are planted. One thing is of the utmost importance. Plant the roots very shallow. They should never be planted more than three inches deep, and really, for best results, two inches will be enough.

There is a common complaint against peonies, and it is easy to see why a great many flower lovers become discouraged with their use in the garden. They are planted during the fall, the proper time, and in the early spring out they come from the ground growing along very nicely. Then comes peony time and trips are made in vain to see them come into bloom, the buds will not appear, in spite of the fact that the plant is healthy and growing in a perfectly normal manner. This, in almost every case, is due to the fact that they were planted too deeply.

Occasionally, the peony will not bloom the first year after planting, and if the roots were planted in a shallow manner, don't let this disturb you, as they will be all right the following year.

The peony will make quite an adjunct to the shrubbery border, and the perennial border should not be without its beauty for a single year. If planted in the perennial border they should be planted at least 8 or 10 feet apart, and as they seldom grow more than three feet high, and more often about two and a half feet, they may be planted fairly well toward the front. Their foliage is very decorative throughout the summer, and will be a thing of beauty.

In purchasing peony roots be certain that they have at least three eyes and for best results, four or five. A three-eye root planted in September should bloom the following spring.

There are a great number of good varieties, but the following ones may be depended on for satisfaction in the Atlanta section: Albert Crousse, soft shell pink; Baroness Schroder, flesh white; Edulis Superba, deep rose pink; Felix Crousse, ruby red; Festive Maxima, white; Livingstone, soft lilac rose; Marguerite Gerard, flesh; Meissonier, red; President Taft, rose pink; Sarah Bernhardt, mauve rose. We particularly recommend Albert Crousse, Felix Crousse and Edulis Superba.

WHAT TO DO IN AUGUST.

LAWNS: Mow the lawns each week. By promoting stooling and root growth by this mowing, the lawn is better able to stand the summer drouth. Constant feeding is always necessary. For this purpose try a monthly application of some good commercial fertilizer or sheep manure followed by a two-hour soaking with the hose. Patch the bare spots with a handful of seed, raked in lightly an soaked.

BUGS: During the month of August the bugs usually have their annual family reunion, an it gives us an opportunity to kill them in a wholesale manner. The bugs that chew the plants, such as Mexican bean beetle and potato bugs, may be killed by spraying with a pyrethrum spray which is not poisonous, or with some of the arsenical sprays such as arsenate of lead or calcium arsenate. The sucking insects, such as aphis, may be killed with an application of nicotine sulphate. For the mildews and blights, spray the plants—except roses—with Bordeaux. For blight and black spots on roses use Massey dust.

PRUNING: It is always time to take out all of the dead wood in shrubs, fruit and shade trees, as well as annual plants and perennials.

AUNT HET

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

"PA'S Cousin Henry is always sayin' that charity begins at home, but he never seems to get it through his head that religion ought to begin there, too.

"The way I look at it, the proof o' religion is the way it makes you treat your next-door neighbor an' the folks you live with.

"Any kind o' half-horsepower religion can make you get romantic about the poor heathen that's so far away you can't smell 'em, but it takes the grace o' God in your heart to make you patient an' kind to the ordinary, aggravatin' humans you have to live with ever' day.

"Pa's Cousin Henry, he thinks it's his religious duty to help the poor that appeals to him an' he never turns a deaf ear to the cry o' the widow an' orphan. But I've seen him act mighty deaf when his wife mentioned needin' new shoes, an' the only reason he ever gives his younguns a penny is because the government don't make nothin' smaller.

"To hear him talk to strangers or folks that don't belong to him, you'd think it was young wings under his coat that made him look round-shoulderer; but his family would send for the doctor if they ever heard him speak kind. They think his natural tone o' voice is a bark.

"Folks with that kind o' religion are goin' to spoil Heaven. They say Heaven is their home, an' their idea of home is a place where they can be natural an' hateful."

When Justice Triumphs

By PETER LEVINS.

KILLING cops in the wilds of Oklahoma and killing cops in the city of New York are two very, very different matters—that is, in the way things turn out. Pretty Boy Floyd, the Oklahoma bank robber, exterminated quite a number of police officers, and remained uncaught. In New York city cop-killers do not have such great good fortune. They bump off an officer and presto, the death house has another guest.

We have pointed out before in this series that it is not at all safe to kill a New York city policeman. Kill your lover and you may be able to pull the struggle-for-the-gun defense, or the one about everything going blank just before it happened. Kill an eccentric millionaire, a big shot gambler, a Broadway courtesan, or a baby playing in a crowded street, but—

Lay off cops.

Justice moves with beautiful efficiency against cop killers. None of the usual obstacles hampers either the search for the killer or the subsequent processes of law.

The case of the murder of Detective Pessagno, related in a recent issue, showed with what intensity and relentlessness the police go after a killer when the victim is one of their own. Two star detectives were put to work on the case—in addition to the whole department generally—and told to get the murderer of Pessagno if it took them the rest of their lives.

Nine months later they got him.

Had Fats McCarthy not been killed in that battle upstate, we would very likely have seen a further demonstration of efficiency in his trial, conviction and execution.

Once in a while the police miss out—fail to get their man. Once in a while—very rarely—they fail to get a conviction. But the record shows clearly that the surest way of attaining the electric chair or a long term at hard labor is to murder a member of the force. Indeed, it is highly unsafe to pull a gun on a policeman at all, as there have been many instances in which the policeman happened to shoot first.

A case resembling the Pessagno murder and murder hunt happened early in 1927, when Patrolman James Masterson interrupted a holdup in a restaurant on West 103d street, Manhattan, and was shot to death. Masterson was the son of an alderman, a circumstance which made it even worse for the killers. Moreover, there had been no attempt merely to disable him; the killer had poured seven bullets into his victim.

Commissioner McLaughlin ordered that the best detectives in the department be assigned to the hunt. The best men in the department for this job were the celebrated pair, Detectives Thomas Martin and Stephen Donahue, and they were assigned to spend all their time, indefinitely, upon the search for the four holdup men, and particularly the ruthless killer of Jim Masterson.

The partners traced a woman known to have been with the robbers, and checked her telephone calls. Eventually she telephoned from her home in Forest Hills to a camp in the Adirondack mountains, asking that the water be turned on.

Donahue and Martin decided that the gang would hide out at this camp, and the climax came a few days later when the two detectives and four other officers journeyed north to make their catch.

The six crept upon the snow-covered camp in the early morning while it was still dark. As they neared the porch a dog barked. They waited until he stopped, then moved on toward the door.

Martin kicked in the door and they went into action. In one room they found a young woman and a man, Peter Seiler. The detectives leaped on Seiler as he fumbled for his gun hanging on a hook beside the bed. Martin made for the other room and was shot in the arm, so the officers ordered Seiler to walk ahead of them into the room. He refused to stir.

"I'll go around to a side window," Martin said then. "You fellows shoot into the room and when he returns the fire I'll see where he is."

Tom Martin crept around to the window and waited, his gun ready. The others opened fire, and the trapped gunman immediately blazed away. Martin fired at the flash.

There were no more shots. When they turned on the lights they found the gunman dead on the floor, a bullet through the temple. He was Walter (Whitey) Murray, a burglar and holdup man with a long record.

Young Seiler, who had no police record, was identified as one of the holdup men. A witness testified that, after Masterson was shot down, Seiler said "Give him a couple more." He was tried, convicted after 15 minutes' deliberation, and electrocuted December 16, 1927.

* * * *

While Seiler was in the death house, there was a holdup gang, known as the Pants Gang, operating with considerable success in New York. The gang was named from its custom of taking victims' trousers away with them to delay pursuit. Fifty robberies were committed during the winter of 1927-28—and then a cop was killed.

The police department, in an effort to round up the Pants Gang, had called for volunteers from the force to serve as special watchmen during periods when they were on reserve. These officers would report at stores suspected to be on the gang's holdup list.

On the evening of January 31, 1928, Patrolman William E. Kelly of the Empire boulevard station in Brooklyn, reported at the drug store of Irving Stoller on Nostrand avenue, Brooklyn. He was in civilian clothes.

At about 8:30 p. m. Kelly was sitting in the prescription room, chatting with Stoller, when two men entered with drawn guns.

"Stick 'em up," ordered one of them.

Kelly and the druggist were caught by surprise. Meanwhile a third holdup man entered and stood guard at the door to the prescription room.

One of the intruders searched Kelly and when his fingers encountered the officer's gun, he said: "Oh, a cop, eh?" With that he placed his gun against Kelly's ear.

Quickly the policeman reached up and pulled at the electric light cord. Stoller at the same time leaped into the washroom and gave the alarm.

Then there was a shot.

Stoller saw three men run out of the store and jump into a taxicab. He went back and found Kelly face downward over a stool in front of the soda fountain. The officer died an hour later in the hospital.

Two hundred Brooklyn officers started on the hunt immediately, 125 of them without sleep. The chief clue was a blue taxicab found abandoned at Vanderbilt aveue and Dean Street, Brooklyn. It was identified as belonging to Samuel Krassner, who had reported his cab stolen.

Krassner said three men had hailed him on the east side of Manhattan and ordered him to drive over the Williamsburg bridge. They got out on the other side, paid him, and departed. Krassner visited a lunch room near by, and while he was there having a bite to eat his car disappeared.

The taxi driver said he figured the three men had taken the ride over the bridge to test out the speed of the machine.

His story struck the police as peculiar, so when they released him he was shadowed. Night and day thereafter detectives watched his movements, and noted with whom he associated.

Meanwhile, one Harry Dreitzer, a young east side criminal, was arrested in a raid and charged with possessing a gun. Discharged in Essex Market court, he was taken into custody by Brooklyn detectives in connection with a Brooklyn holdup early in December. He was also questioned regarding the Kelly murder but pleaded ignorance of this crime.

Then he, too, was released and watched.

Presently it happened. That is, Krassner and Dreitzer got together.

On top of that an anonymous note in a girl's handwriting was left at Brooklyn police headquarters. In it the girl told of hearing Dreitzer, in delirium, screaming, "I didn't kill any cop! Don't burn me!"

"He has done me a dirty trick," the girl wrote. "If you want the murderers of Patrolman Kelly ask Krassner or Dreitzer."

The police rounded up the two February 17, and both talked. Krassner admitted driving the murder cab and Dreitzer admitted firing a shot, insisting, however, that another shot had killed the officer. Later there were two more arrests in the case—Isidore Helfant and Edward Fischer.

Final score—Dreitzer, Helfant and Fischer were electrocuted January 24, 1929.

* * * *

New York's most spectacular case, in this connection, was that one in which Francis (Two-Gun) Crowley played a leading role.

Young Crowley, illegitimate child of an Austrian kitchenmaid and an idling policeman, grew up in a family of "nixie fighters"—that is, police haters. His foster brother, John, picked on cops until he was finally killed by one. The diminutive Francis swore that some day he would gain revenge.

He took to packing a gun while he was still in his teens. On March 14, 1931, he shot and wounded Detective George Schaedel when the officer sought to arrest him in a Lexington avenue office building. Crowley was wanted at this time in connection with a shooting in the Bronx.

Six weeks later the body of Virginia Brannen, a taxi dancer, was found behind a stone wall in Yonkers, N. Y. She had been shot once beneath the heart. A day or so later a young man and woman told the Yonkers police that Virginia was killed while in a car with Crowley and her sweetheart, Rudolph Duringer, 220-pound truck driver of Ossining. Duringer had been drunk and had apparently shot the girl while in a jealous rage.

Meanwhile Crowley and Duringer stuck up some stores in Brooklyn. Crowley was joined by Helen Walsh, 16-year-old daughter of a Brooklyn boarding house keeper. She was with him in the early morning of May 6 when two cops approached their parked car in a lonely section of Nassau county. Crowley pulled a gun and killed Patrolman Frederick Hirsch.

He and the girl managed to elude capture and found refuge with Duringer in a house on West 90th street. This was the apartment of Billie Dunne, another girl friend of the diminutive killer. Miss Dunne was annoyed by the presence of the attractive Walsh girl, and informed the police, who presently arrived in droves.

Boards creaked as officers attempted to catch Crowley unaware. He opened fire immediately, and presently 10,000 spectators were watching the siege.

The battle went on for an hour, some 700 shots being fired. Crowley and Duringer had six guns themselves, and the 100 officers, directed by the commissioner in person, had machine guns, pistols, tear bombs, and axes. Policemen chopped a hole in the roof and narrowly escaped death when Crowley fired through the aperture. Then they cut another hole, and thus gradually trapped the gunmen.

* * * *

At the height of the siege, Helen Walsh wrote out what they believed were their dying statements. one read—

"To whom it may concern—I was born on the 31st; she on the 13th. I guess it was fate that made us meet. Put a lily in my hand, so the boys will know how I look. Under my coat is a weary heart, but a kind one—a heart that would do nobody any harm.

"I had nothing else to do, that's why I went around and bumped off cops. It was a new sensation.

"Now death is near. There are a couple of bulls outside the door, saying, 'Come out here.' I am behind the door with three .38s, one of which belongs to my friend (Patrolman Hirsch), who put on weight suddenly in North Merrick. He would have got me if his bullets were good."

In another statement the girl wrote—

"If I die and my face you are able to see, wave my hair, make my face look pretty. Dress me in a new dress. A black and white one. Do my nails all over. I don't use this kind of polish; it's too dark. I like pale pink."

And in another—

"I'll see you in heaven if there is such a place. Everybody thinks he's hard, but he can't be. He cooked my breakfast this morning and washed my pajamas so I could sleep in them."

She added in a postscript, "Show this to my sister, so that she will know that I died singing. Please don't talk about me when I'm gone."

But Helen wasn't killed. Police officers, led by Johnny Broderick, who always seems to be in the thick of battles like this, broke into the apartment and nabbed the trio without further casualties. Crowley himself had been wounded three times, though not seriously.

Justice moved fast against both killers. Crowley went on trial that same month, and had his big moment when he mounted the witness stand and proudly told how he murdered Hirsch. Courtroom spectators were shocked and fascinated by the behavior of the dwarfish, sleek haired, smirking defendant. It was patent that Crowley was still a child, one steeped, as Morris Markey described him, in "vicious and purposeless mischief."

The Walsh girl was another fascinating study on the witness stand, for the whole horrible business seemed to have touched her not at all. She just didn't seem interested in the proceedings.

Justice probably shivered a bit when Defense Attorney Charles R. Weeks extolled his client for his fighting spirit during the excitement on 90th street.

"And while the police were shooting into the apartment," Weeks asked Helen Walsh, "what did you and Duringer do?"

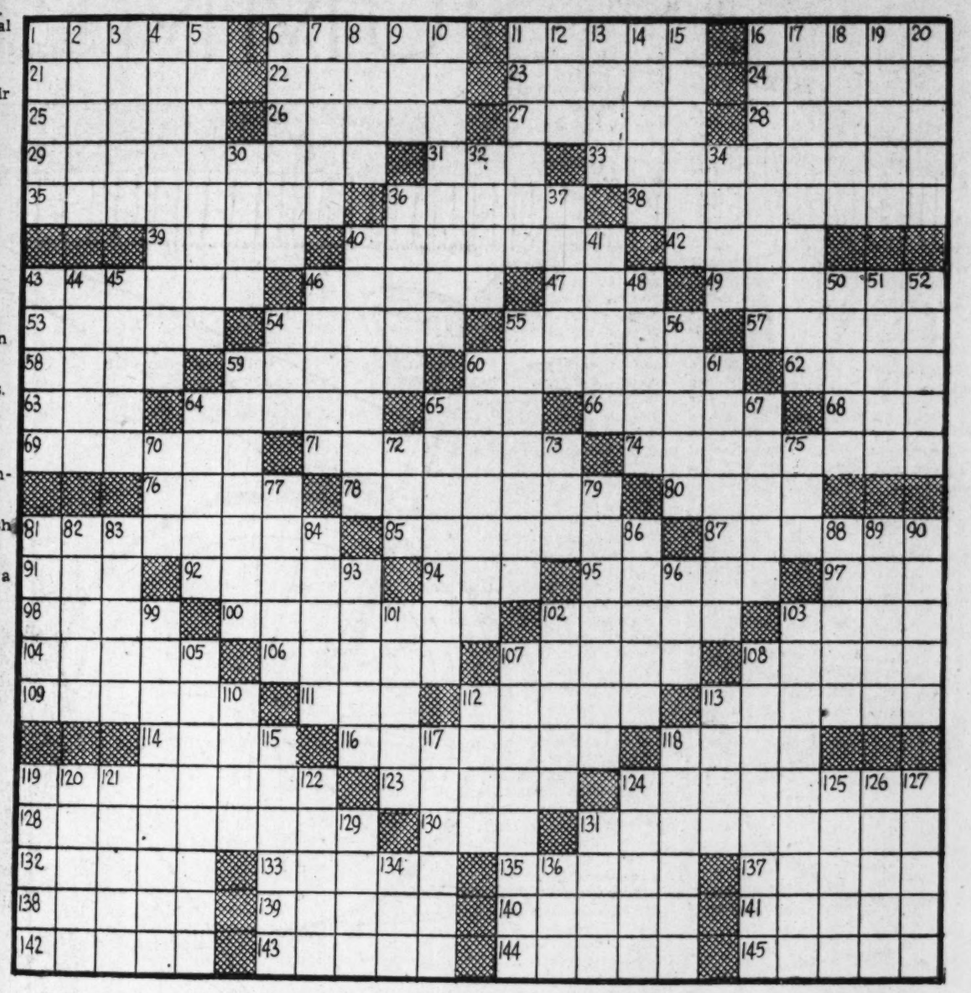

"We hid in the closet."

"You hid in the closet, did you? And this boy stood out there in the middle of the room, ducking bullets and fighting it out—sending back shot for shot until all his ammunition was gone and he could fight no longer."

However, the jury decided that little boys shouldn't do such things, and Crowley was electrocuted January 21, 1932. Duringer meanwhile had been tried and convicted in the Bronx. He died in the chair December 10, 1931.

DRESSLER LEADS THINNING RANKS OF BELOVED VETERANS

From left to right: Marie Dressler, whose "Tugboat Annie" is furnishing hilarious amusement for thousands; Louise Closser Hale, who died recently, following completion of "Another Language;" May Robson, whose performance in "Reunion in Vienna" was delightful.

SUCCESS at twilight! Growing old gracefully—and successfully! The recent death of Louise Closser Hale, beloved veteran of the stage and screen—just after she had finished her finest role on the screen in "Another Language"—has focused attention on the grand old ladies of the screen, who are rounding out glorious careers in the twilight years of their lives. Most famous of them all is Marie Dressler, close friend of Miss Hale. Marie has seen them all come and go but she goes on forever! In "Tugboat Annie" she scores probably her biggest triumph as the sweetheart of that robust Romeo, Wallace Beery. Thousands of filmgoers are paying tribute to lovable Marie in this picture.

Then there is May Robson, a hit in "Reunion in Vienna" and soon to appear in "Beauty Parlor;" she'd rather act than eat. Then the polished and mischievous Allison Skipworth — funnier today than she ever was! Louise Dresser, always queenly and poised; Maude Eburn, Jessie Ralph and a few others.

In her latest picture, "Tugboat Annie," Marie Dressler, talented, grand, lovable old lady, goes through a part that would tax many a younger actress. She asked no quarter from the director or the cameraman. She worked hard—and apparently with a great joy in her work. Homely and wholesome—an even greater artist today than she was 40 years ago! What an example and inspiration to the younger women of her profession—and to all ladies growing old.

The recent death of Louise Closser Hale, close friend of Miss Dressler, and herself a most successful screen actress, brings to mind the interesting little group of "old-timers" who are growing old gracefully and prosperously.

Hollywood—despite its faults—has done one thing. It had provided a last refuge and haven for these veterans of the stage—for the Dresslers, the Hales, the Allison Skipworths, the May Robsons, the Edna May Olivers. These ageless stars are growing old unashamed; they are closing their careers with the finest achievements of their lives.

Instead of fighting age and attempting engenue roles—as is often done by the perpetual juveniles of the stage—these sensible ladies are being themselves—and making lines etched by time pay dividends. California's sunshine and gardens provide them a real home—so different from that which tradition once seems to prescribe for aging actors—sleeper train jumps, cold theaters, dirty dressing rooms, stranded companies.

The courage and continued interest in life of these screen veterans should be a consolation and inspiration to every person approaching the twilight of life. The old men of the screen are interesting—but the old women are doubly so. Discontented, fearful old people would do well to emulate these grand old people of the screen.

SUMMER SPORT TOGS

A Variety of Smart Clothes for the Outdoor Weekend

IS THE BEACH calling to you? Or are you longing for the cool, green country? Do you yearn for hours on end in the bright sunlight of some gay resort?

Wherever you go, you must choose a variety of outdoor clothes with which to meet the demands of every outdoor sport. Particularly attractive this season are the stunning new divided skirts that the outdoor girl finds so comfortable for bicycling or roller skating.

Of course, you'll want two or three tennis dresses in your suitcase. These may be of pique, or linen, or that lovely striped fabric similar to men's shirting.

A sweater and skirt costume will be a comfort to you. There is always an occasional cool day at any resort when a warm costume on the golf course is appreciated. The new twin sweater sets—a slip-on with a matching cardigan as a companion—are grand!

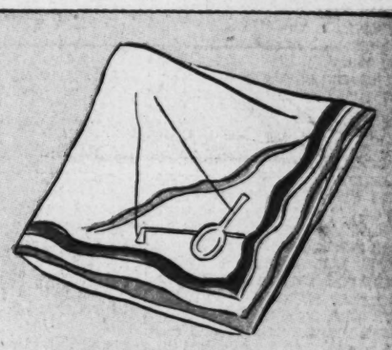

And don't forget your beach costumes—if you're an active swimmer bring along a suitable one-piece jersey suit, or, if you prefer to decorate the beach, there are all sorts of picturesque and colorful suits to choose from.

THE DIVIDED SKIRT

JOY and comfort for the outdoor girl. And the new models are practical without sacrificing femininity or smartness. The skirt above is fashioned of brown flannel and features slit pockets at the hips. It is worn with a mannish shirt of white pique that can be buttoned high at the neck and worn with a tie.

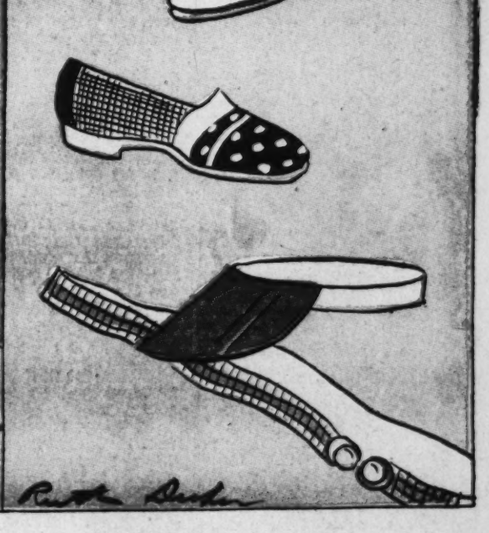

OUTDOOR ACCESSORIES

THE jaunty handkerchief of linen goes gay with a red and blue bordet and an embroidered motif of racquet and club. A cotton cardigan is a handy thing to have around—this one is in a cool shade of green. Cool and comfy are the rubber-soled tennis ghilles of white linen, while sport klacks in linen reveal a black and white check and dot pattern. If you really want to protect that nose get this practical visor with its extra large shade. The elastic belt has gay, giddy stripes.

SOME NEW IDEAS

THE golf frock sketched above is cut in two pieces, shirtwaist style, and fashioned of linen. The white blouse is tailored and displays a high neck, a deep yoke and two patch pockets. The skirt, striped in blue and white, boasts a wide inverted pleat front and back. Twin sweaters are all the rage. Here, at the left, is a set in bright yellow wool. The under one, a pull-on model, has a high boat neckline, over which is worn the straight-line cardigan. A brown wool skirt, with slashed pockets, completes a sporty outfit. To keep the unruly locks in place, we suggest the cunning white wrap-around turban sketched below. It can be adjusted to suit the wearer's preference.

FOR TENNIS

A CHARMING frock of white crepe attractively trimmed with navy and white dotted foulard. The sailor collar ties to the bodice at each side of the deep square neck, and the narrow, dotted belt has a self-covered buckle. Plenty of freedom in the skirt, of course, and a sun visor made of dotted silk.

Wide brims and sheer fabrics, fashion's choice for the outdoor tea, are described on next Sunday's Fashion Page.

THOMAS ENGLISH McGEACHY—The wedding of Miss Frances Fletcher, of North Carolina, and Dr. Thomas English McGeachy, of Decatur and Atlanta, occurred Wednesday, August 2, at Montreat, N. C. Dr. and Mrs. McGeachy will be at home at 218 Sycamore street, Decatur. Dr. McGeachy is connected with the Grady hospital and is the son of Rev. G. P. McGeachy. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Reid Fletcher, of Winston-Salem. She is an active member of the Junior League.

INLAND OCEAN WAVES—This high wave was actually photographed in the center of Denver's business district. One of the city's high schools may be seen in the background. The inundation occurred when a dam broke. Several persons were killed and injured. At right are the waters of Cherry creek, in Denver, crashing through a concrete bridge.

Tarzan

by EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS

TUTAMKEN AND NIKOTRIS CAME JOINTLY TO THE THRONE AS PHARAOH AND QUEEN.

THROUGH TARZAN THEY SOUGHT TO RESTORE THE DAMAGE TO THE CITY. ELEPHANTS WERE BROUGHT TO LIFT UP THE FALLEN STATUE OF THE APE-GOD THOTH.

HUNDREDS OF MEN BEGAN WORK ON REBUILDING THE TEMPLE.

CROPS WERE PLENTIFUL AND PEACE DESCENDED ONCE MORE UPON THE LAND.

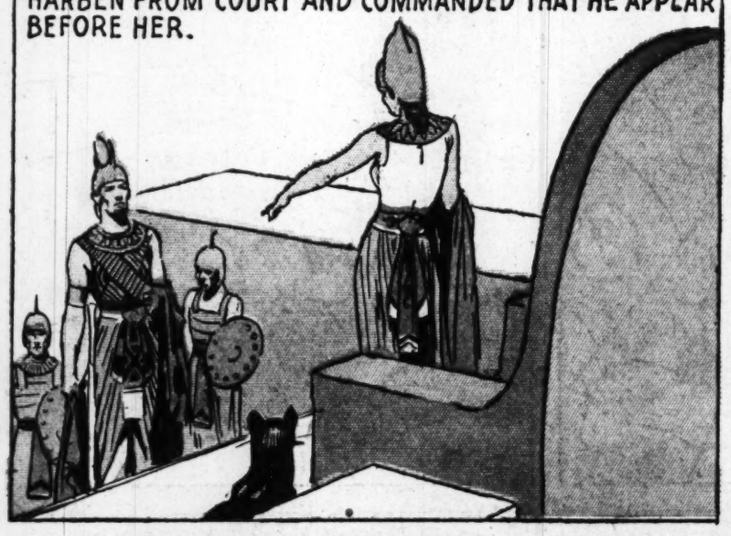

VON HARBEN, EXPLORING THE COUNTRY, CAME UPON A PEASANT GIRL, AMNIS, WHOSE FRIENDLY SMILE AND TALK DELIGHTED HIM.

DAILY HE CAME TO VISIT HER

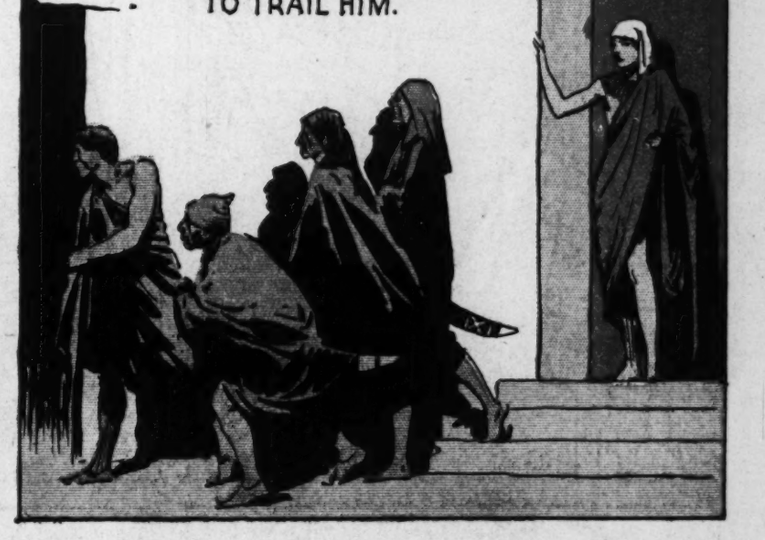

THE NEW QUEEN, NIKOTRIS, HAD BEEN BUSY WITH AFFAIRS OF STATE, BUT NOW SHE NOTICED THE ABSENCE OF VON HARBEN FROM COURT AND COMMANDED THAT HE APPEAR BEFORE HER.

HE CAME THAT NIGHT BUT HIS INDIFFERENCE STIRRED HER WRATH.

WHEN HE DISAPPEARED FROM THE PALACE, SHE SET SPIES TO TRAIL HIM.

AS HE KEPT HIS TRYST WITH AMNIS, THE SPIES LEAPED FROM THE SHADOWS.

THE NEXT NIGHT THE GIRL'S BROTHER VENTURED SECRETLY INTO TARZAN'S ROOM. "YOUR FRIEND VON HARBEN AND MY SISTER HAVE BEEN SEIZED BY THE QUEEN'S AGENTS!" HE CRIED, "CAN YOU SAVE THEM?"

TARZAN APPEALED TO NIKOTRIS TO RELEASE HIS FRIEND. BUT NIKOTRIS SAID, "YOUR FRIEND IS NO MORE." SHE FACED THE APE-MAN'S RISING WRATH.
